

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

TWENTY FIRST REPORT.

As each succeeding year unfolds more of our national destiny, a greater interest is attached to the causes by which that destiny is controlled. The rendering of their Annual Report, which, to the Executive Committee, has ever been a solemn act, becomes therefore every year so much the more solemn, as they see the day approaching, in which the country for which they labor will have assumed such fixedness of character, as no human efforts can avail to change. The TWENTY FIRST year of the American Home Missionary Society, has witnessed unprecedented activity in the elements which are to give direction to our future history, and amid which the Institution has pursued its silent but still aggressive work. It has been a year marked with trials of the faith and patience of the missionaries, and with embarrassments to the Committee; but still, of trials and embarrassments followed by gracious deliverances, wrought by our Great Leader's hand. Some who were wont to sympathize with us at the close of our annual labors, will greet us here no more. Three of the Vice Presidents of the Society—JOHN D. KEESE, Esq., one of its founders, and for ten years the Chairman of its Executive Committee; ORRIN DAY and JAMES ROOSEVELT, Esquires,—who in life were its steadfast friends and liberal supporters, and in death made provision for it among the objects of parental regard—have entered into rest, and their works do follow them. Of the Directors, the Society mourns, in common with the sister Board of Foreign Missions, and the whole Church of God on christian and on heathen ground, the decease of REV WILLIAM J. ARMSTRONG, D. D.—a name whose savor, like that of precious ointment, shall long abide in every sphere where he was wont to move. Another, Rev WAYNE GRIDLEY, in the course of the last year, has heard the command, "Come up higher." Several of the missionaries also, since the last anniversary, have rendered account of their ministry to him whose commission they bore.

The details of the Society's operations are embraced in the following

SUMMARY OF RESULTS.

The foregoing enumeration embraces the following results :

The number of ministers of the Gospel in the service of the Society, since the last anniversary, has been 972.

Of these, 783 were in commission at the date of the last report ; and 189 have been since appointed.

They are distributed in 26 states and territories, as follows :—in Maine, 86 ; New Hampshire, 44 ; Vermont, 43 ; Massachusetts, 60 ; Rhode Island, 6 ; Connecticut, 36 ; New York, 198 ; New Jersey, 7 ; Pennsylvania, 47 ; Delaware, 2 ; Maryland, 3 ; Virginia, 3 ; District of Columbia, 1 ; North Carolina, 1 ; Georgia, 1 ; Alabama, 1 ; Tennessee, 6 ; Kentucky, 8 ; Ohio, 95 ; Indiana, 59 ; Illinois, 92 ; Michigan, 77 ; Missouri, 21 ; Wisconsin, 44 ; Iowa, 29 ; under appointment for Oregon, 2.

Of these, the number who have ministered as pastors or stated supplies in single congregations, is 667 ; while 305 have extended their services to two or more congregations each.

For the sake of obtaining more perfect returns from the missionaries, and thus securing greater accuracy in the details of the annual report, it is judged expedient to consider the missionary year as closing on the first of April, and not, as heretofore, on the first of May. In conformity with this arrangement the present report will embrace the results of only eleven months ; a fact which should be borne in mind, in comparing its statistics with those of former reports.

The aggregate of labor accomplished by the missionaries, during these eleven months, is equal to 713 years.

Their ministrations have been steadily rendered, for more or less of the year, to 1,470 congregations and missionary districts, besides occasional services in other places.

CONTINUED PROGRESS.

Although unforeseen embarrassments have arisen to prevent the enlargement which was demanded, and expected, the increase of the Society's work has gone steadily forward. The last report closed with a statement of important openings and urgent calls for missionary labor, in certain specified portions of the new states. These fields have been kept distinctly in view throughout the year ;

and while the number of missionaries in some of the older sections of the country has been reduced, the number of additional laborers employed in the West has been 38. These have occupied new fields, or supplied the places of 24, whose connection with the Society has been terminated by death, by removal to other sections, or by the assumption of their support by the people; thus making a net increase of 14 in that portion of the field. That this number is not much greater, has been owing chiefly to the want of the necessary funds.

In the last report, the Committee announced their purpose to send two missionaries to Oregon, as soon as suitable individuals could be secured. In fulfilment of this design, they have appointed Rev. GEORGE H. ATKINSON and Rev. HORACE LYMAN to this important undertaking. These brethren are now in commission, and engaged in preparing for their expected departure in the course of the ensuing Summer. They will be the pioneers of an enterprise, which appears to be demanded with great unanimity by the missionary public; and in which, we trust, they will ere long be followed by many others, filled with the same desire to mingle the healthful influences of a pure faith with the first infant springs of a new empire.

The aggregate of missionary labor, for the eleven months reported, exceeds the same item for an equal portion of the previous year, by 22 years; and the number of congregations and districts which have regularly received the ministration of the word, is greater than last year by 17.

SABBATH SCHOOLS.

In communities struggling with the difficulties incident to new settlements, it is seldom that adequate arrangements are made for the education of the young, or even that a proper degree of instruction and restraint is supplied by parental faithfulness. In such regions, the missionary finds the only available substitute for these influences in the Sabbath school. Every year, there is a more vigorous prosecution of this form of labor, in connexion with the Society; the schools are brought more thoroughly under the supervision of the missionaries, are conducted with more system and efficiency, and become the means of greater access to the communities where they are planted. In several instances, during the past season, information has been received of the establishment of from five to eight schools by a single missionary. These are periodically visited, and receive the stimulus of his counsel and encouragement. The whole number of pupils in the schools under the supervision of the missionaries, is about 73,000.

In the prosecution of this species of missionary labor, important aid continues to be afforded by the liberal donation of libraries by ing a large amount of its tracts and volumes throughout the States. The American Tract Society has the annual supply of 5,000 pages each to such and avail themselves of the grant, besides, in some donations of its larger publications. A particular is due to that Institution, in connexion with the Foreign Sabbath Union, for 15,000 copies of the "Tracts," which have been placed in the hands of societies, in those portions of the country where they are to be most needed, and where they have been directed with specific efforts to rescue the holy Sabbath. These benefactions are the more welcomed, that, under no circumstances, does the press in promoting the Gospel, as when united with the intelligent pastor and missionary.

TEMPERANCE.

Though the American Temperance Union, a benevolent society, has, for several years, furnished the "Journal" to one hundred missionaries. Within a few years, the auxiliary has been withdrawn; which was caused because of the present exigencies of the temperance cause in new states. Owing to the low price of grain in the new districts, an impulse has been given, the past season, to the use of ardent spirits. New efforts have therefore been made from the friends of sobriety. Perhaps, at no time have the missionaries labored so assiduously in this cause. Especially, in the states where the question of license for the sale of intoxicating drink has been oppose but a feeble barrier against temptation. There are, however, not less than 97,000 who have assumed this obligation in the communities where the missionaries labor.

BENEVOLENT CONTRIBUTIONS.

The systematic contributions made by missionary churches in aid of various benevolent enterprises, afford satisfactory evidence of the excellence of their training in the practical duties of the Gospel. Already, the gifts of these infant communities begin to form an important item in the increase of our leading public charities, and furnish a guaranty that they will soon repay the kindness which has fostered them, by sustaining the Gospel in regions still more remote, and sending it abroad to the heathen world. In 520 of the fields cultivated by this Society, the aggregate of charitable collections reported is $16,273.

ADDITIONS TO THE CHURCHES.

As near as can be ascertained, the number added to the churches aided, has been, since the last report, 4,400, viz., by profession of their faith, 1,980; by letters from other churches, 2,420. This is a smaller number than has been reported for several years, and is a diminution of about one-sixth from the returns of the previous year. This result may in part be accounted for, by the very general sickness which prevailed in the north-western states, and which, for several months, seriously hindered the usual means of grace. Towards the close of the year, however, indications of returning spiritual prosperity have been furnished by the reports from some parts of the field, particularly from the Western Reserve, O., Michigan, Northern Illinois, and adjacent portions of Wisconsin.

These favored communities, however, are but few compared with the number of those upon whom no spiritual blessings have descended. There is a general and protracted suspension of that heavenly influence, without which all our efforts are in vain. This fact impresses the Committee with deep concern; and they would commend it to the solemn regard of all who make this Institution the channel of their charities to the destitute. The speedy revival of the Lord's work, especially in the West, is an event in which the Church of God in our whole country is interested. Should the present reign of spiritual death long continue, the prospect of securing the ascendancy of Protestant Christianity in the Great Valley, will be dark indeed. A mighty struggle is going on in that region, between the powers of darkness and the advocates of truth. Where there is no revival of religion, there is a revival of impiety; and no power can turn back the tide of evil, but that which hath all hearts at its control. To that power, then, let fervent prayer be made without ceasing, "until the Spirit be poured on us from on high, and the wilderness become te and persevering supplications, for the quickening of Truth in the hearts of those to whom it though the evidence of multiplied conversions in some former years, the leading fact in the year is a STEADY PROGRESS, and the appropriate of encouragement and hope. A great and hard-work for future prosperity is in the process in most all parts of the missionary field. The Church inculcate it as the great design of this Society is to obtain good, rather than mere temporary successes, whose lot is cast in the new states, reminding of beginning by laying firm foundation and action, in commencing religious institutions to shape the character and influence of their future time to come. It is comparatively easy to produce temporary effects—to cause a wave of feeling to run through a community; but to direct that feeling to world-wide purposes, is a more difficult and far nobler achievement. It is a matter of thankfulness, that the missionaries and churches aided by this Society, cherish these views to a high degree. This is seen in the pains which they exert doctrinal instruction, and in the promotion of schools and Bible classes; as well as in the promptness of missionaries in the circulation of the Scriptures, in pious reading; and in temperance and other reforms. It is seen, moreover, in the extraordinary efforts of the churches to provide houses for the worship of God. In the past year, no less than 120 sanctuaries have been either as finished, or as in some stage of progress.

edifices have been made. The temporal affairs of the congregations are rendered more systematic; while the discipline of the house of God receives increased attention; and well directed endeavors to extend the benign influence of the Gospel over the impenitent around, are growing in frequency and power. In such results, annually increasing, the friends of missions witness obedience to a voice crying throughout the land, "Prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard. Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh!"

FINANCIAL HISTORY OF THE YEAR.

In consequence of the change already mentioned in the time of closing the missionary year, it has become necessary to make up the accounts of the Society to April 1st, instead of the 15th, and those of the Auxiliaries and Agencies to March 1st. As this arrangement takes effect this year for the first time, the statement of the Treasurer embraces the receipts and payments at the Society's office, for only eleven and a half months; while the receipts and payments of the Agencies and Auxiliaries cover only eleven months.

The balance in the Treasury, April 15th, 1846, was $2,735 25. The receipts of the eleven and a half months succeeding, have been $116,717 94—making the resources of this period, 119,453 19.

The amount due to missionaries, at the date of the last report, was $12,865 37. There has since become due the further sum of $120,033 83—making a total of liabilities equal to $132,899 20.

Of this amount, $119,170 40 have been paid. There is still due to missionaries for labor performed, $13,728 80; towards canceling which, and redeeming the pledges in commissions already issued for the coming year—amounting in all to $57,275 04—the balance in the Treasury is only $282 79.

The aggregate of receipts now reported, is $8,406 76 less than those of the previous year. This statement, however, when analyzed, indicates no falling off in the activity of the Society, or in the regard of the churches for the cause in which it is engaged. It should be borne in mind, that the previous report embraced the income of an entire year; while the present covers nearly a month less. In the former were comprised $9,107 98, derived from legacies, more than in the latter; so that the contributions of the churches—which are the best index of the Society's position—have this year been about $700 more than the year before; and, in the same proportion for the full period of twelve months, would have shown an increase of $9,000.

That the Committee are able to report so favorable a conclusion of the embarrassments of the year, awakens their unfeigned thankfulness to God. In many respects, the past season has been one of peculiar trial. The sickness of the last autumn—which, in extent though not in fatality, exceeded any previous visitation—greatly diminished, and in some cases almost annihilated the ability of the Western churches to assist in the support of the Gospel. The missionaries were thus thrown upon the aid of the Society to an unusual degree; and the policy of a gradual reduction of appropriations could not be carried out, as in times of ordinary prosperity. Meanwhile, in the first eight months of the year, the receipts fell some $8000 below the income of the corresponding months of the year before. Possessing no permanent funds, and forbidden by the teachings of experience to resort to loans, the Committee were compelled to postpone, for a time, the payment of the quarterly instalments to the missionaries; and that, too, at a season, when they and their families were entering on the rigors of winter, in need of food and raiment, and suffering in their credit and influence, on account of liabilities which they are unable to meet. The All-seeing Eye alone can gauge the extent of privation thus endured, and, for the most part, endured without impatience or complaint. This readiness of the brethren to encounter trials, rather than to increase the embarrassment of the Society by pressing their personal claims, presents an affecting exemplification of the missionary character, which sheds honor on the Christian name, and powerfully appeals to the friends of missions, to render to those who are their servants for the Gospel's sake, a more generous and systematic support. Although exceedingly reluctant to make a special appeal to the sympathies of the public, the Committee felt that they had no right—as they had not the heart—to withhold the necessities of their missionary brethren from the knowledge of the churches. Accordingly, in December last, a statement of the financial condition of the Society was laid before the public. The response to this appeal was prompt and generous; so that the payment of arrearages was soon commenced, and, for two months past, the claims of the missionaries have been met as fast as presented.

FUTURE ENLARGEMENT.

The satisfaction arising from this deliverance is, nevertheless, greatly impaired by the fact, that, as a result of the embarrassed state of the Treasury, the Committee have been hindered from prosecuting those enlarged operations, which were deemed so essential at the time of the last anniversary. Nearly one hundred missionaries were then called for, to occupy fields whose necessities had been specifically ascertained; and the Society was told, that “not a man embraced in enumeration could be spared”—that the addition of these laborers was “the least extension of the Home Missionary enterprise that should be attempted during the year.” When it is seen, therefore, that only about one third of this advance has been undertaken—and that this has been accomplished, not by increased resources, but by diminishing the number and amount of appropriations on some of the less needy portions of the field—the conviction becomes irresistible, that the Christians of our land do not even yet comprehend the vastness of the work which God has given them to do. They do not appreciate the physical greatness of the country; the moral wants of its thronging myriads of people; the number and energy of influences opposed to the Gospel; nor the haste with which is passing away the opportunity for bringing the nation under the sway of Protestant Christianity. They seem not to remember, that we have to provide not only for our own increase, but also for that of the world! The destroying angel is abroad, scourging hitherward the oppressed and starving of the older nations. Through Canada, by every Atlantic port, and up the Mississippi, they are coming—Irish, Germans, French, Swedes, Norwegians—not merely to occupy our soil—to that they are welcome—but to infuse into the very life blood of our social existence, strange and ungenial elements. Shall year after year pass on, and nothing more be done than we are now doing, to meet this emergency? By the admission of Texas into the Union, one hundredth part of all the land of the globe was, in a single hour, added to our Home Missionary field; and who can tell where the enlargement is to stop? Must the Society be debarred by want of means from making any proportional advance? What will be the result, if the American churches fail to cultivate this great field? What gloom must enshroud the prospects of our country—nay, the prospects of evangelization throughout the world! The enemy will not meanwhile be idle; Jesuitism will lay its plots and weave its toils; Infidelity will scoff louder and louder; Fanaticism will scatter its wild-fire, with unresisted effect, among the people. On the other hand, the feeble churches will be overborne by opposition, their Sabbath schools dispersed, and their youth seduced into the paths of frivolity and licentiousness. Intemperance will rekindle her half extinguished fires; and all her horrid catalogue of wounds, and cursing, and broken hearts, will be realized, over again, in every hamlet of the land. The nation will be corrupted to the very core, public virtue extinct, the people demoralized, and there will be no strong popular sense of right and wrong, to curb the vaultings of selfishness and ambition. Where, then, would be the hope of the hundreds of millions who are to dwell on the soil of these states? What kind of influence would then go forth to the heathen nations? And yet, all these lamentable results must flow from the mere failure of the Christians and patriots of our land, to do their duty just now. Rome desires no more than a postponement of our exertions; Satan asks only that we keep back our missionaries, our Bibles, our colleges, our Sunday schools, for a few more of these passing years. Should this comparative neglect of our own vineyard continue, how sadly pertinent to the apathy of the American church, would be the lamentation over Jerusalem,—“If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things that belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes.”

But we are persuaded better things. It cannot be, that the right hand of God hath brought a choice vine to this goodly land, hath cast out the heathen and planted it, only for the boar out of the wood to waste it, and the wild beast of the field to devour it. There are indications, that the surpassing interest of our Home work is beginning to be felt ; and that more and more, every year, patriotic and christian minds are awaking to its intrinsic value, and its unnumbered relations to the moral welfare of the whole human race.

PRINCIPAL AUXILIARIES, AGENCIES AND MISSIONARY FIELDS.

MAINE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

In the eleven months embraced in the report of this Society, ending March 1st, 1847, the number of missionaries has been 86. The expenditures for the same period were $8,193 44—exceeding the receipts by $532 52 ; which deficiency has been supplied by a temporary loan. As the annual meeting of this Auxiliary does not occur till near the end of June, it is expected, that both the income and the number of missionaries will be proportionally increased.

The Corresponding Secretary of the Society, Rev. ELIPHALET GILLET, D. D., remarks, that "the movements of this Institution have an unusual interest, in consequence of a proposed increase of its operations. Although there have been no special revivals of religion, or sudden spiritual enlargement of the churches, to record ; yet the year has thus far been marked with increasing attention to the means of grace, and evidence that the course of the cause is onward." At the Anniversary in June last, it was resolved to attempt to raise $15,000, to extend the operations of the Society ; its members pledging their exertions to secure that amount within the state.

It is now forty years since the Maine Missionary Society commenced its operations. Fostered by Almighty care, it has gone on from small beginnings, enjoying uniformly the confidence of the community, and keeping pace with the progress of the state, over a great portion of which it now extends its blessings. The Trustees regard its condition, "though not equal to their desires, yet better even than their hopes." The increase for several years past has been gradual and uniform, though not rapid, both in the number of laborers and in the means to sustain them. Four years ago, the number of missionaries was 68 ; the next year, 75 ; two years since, 82 ; the last year, 84 ; and already, the current year, it has reached 86. The amount of labor performed, and the income of the Society, have been augmented in the same proportion.

NEW HAMPSHIRE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

From April 1st, 1846, to March 1st, 1847, the receipts of this Society were $6,119 16, and its disbursements, $5,514 08. The missionary expenditure within the State was $4,379 76; and, at the request of the donors, $1,134 32 were paid to the Parent Society. The latter has also received in addition, from legacies, congregations and individual contributors in New Hampshire, $1,710 96; making the sum designated for the great national field of the West, $2,845 28; and the total amount raised in the State for Home Missions, $7,830 12. Both of these sums are larger than they have ever been before.

Forty-four missionaries have been in the service of the Society since its last report; all of them, with a single exception, either pastors or stated supplies. The number of churches and congregations that have been aided is 49; which is 2 more than were reported last year.

"With regard to the state of religion among the churches aided," says the Secretary, Rev. BENJAMIN P. STONE, "there has recently been in a few of the congregations, some unusual interest; and in two, at least, there is now a pleasing work of Divine grace in progress. These are green spots on the wide wastes. We bless God for the relief they afford us after looking so long for returning vegetation. Still, the desolation is broad and distressing; but the same heavenly influence that has already broken the tiresome monotony, can turn the whole into a fruitful field."

A survey of the missionary field in this State discloses, at once, the beneficent influence of Home Missions, and the necessity for a more vigorous application of their renovating power to places now barren and desolate. Of the 184 churches in the State, 104 have been, at different periods, aided by the New Hampshire Missionary Society. Thirty-seven, once aided, now support the Gospel themselves. The churches which require assistance are, nearly all of them situated where the population is most subject to changes and removals. The Secretary remarks—"There are two facts, by no means encouraging. The one is, the constant draft made upon the feeble churches under the care of the Society, by the manufacturing villages and other more hopeful places for business; the other is, a class of churches so very weak, and so located, that there is scarcely a prospect that they ever will be nourished by the bread of life. But this is not all; nearly one third of all the towns in the State are entirely destitute either of ministers or churches, of our faith; and three-fourths of this third are almost as far removed from the reforming and saving power of the Gospel, as they would be had it never been preached in the State."

But while deep shadows thus rest upon some parts of

"Granite State," we are cheered by the light that in other portions gilds her mountain sides. There is decisive evidence of progress. "Many of the churches have been brought out from the wilderness, into which they had been driven by various influences hostile to their peace and prosperity. They have increased in benevolent action, have been better united, and have advanced to a more commanding position of influence upon the world. We wait for the still, small voice of the Spirit, to complete the great end of the Gospel—their entire consecration to Christ, and the salvation of the perishing multitudes around them."

VERMONT DOMESTIC MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Rev. I. R. WORCESTER, who for four years discharged the duties of Corresponding Secretary of this Society, has resigned since the last report. By a temporary arrangement, his place is filled, for the current year, by Rev. CYRUS B. DRAKE.

The number of ministers of the Gospel in the employment of the Society, during the eleven months ending March 1st, 1847, was 43.

The expenditures within the state, were $3,110 46; the sum of $640 was forwarded by the Auxiliary to the National Society, and the further sum of $982 50 received by the latter in direct contributions from the State. The receipts have fallen short of the expenditures nearly $500. This is the more to be regretted, because the Society is yet doing but a small part of what ought to be done in Vermont, to say nothing of the assistance which should be furnished, to follow her emigrant sons in their dispersion over the fields of the West. "Not a few churches," says the Secretary, "are decaying; some seem just ready to die, for want of christian sympathy, and christian, prayerful aid. Emigration, with other causes, keeps the weak churches of Vermont in a feeble state; so that portions of our missionary field are very slowly added to self-sustaining churches. The standard of benevolence is so low, that there is no hope of immediately cultivating these desolations, without a faith, fearless of want and superior to trials, such as would be adequate to any missionary ground occupied by the American churches. The contributions are small and very inadequate. A great impulse must be given to the work, such as shall open channels from all the fountains of benevolence into our treasury. How else shall high-toned intelligence, morality and piety so pervade the neglected communities of Vermont, as to develop its resources for the good of the country and of the world? How else is she to give permanence and extension to the institutions of the Puritans; to break the chains of error and despotism which have so long enslaved the human family; to carry out the work of freedom, truth and piety, committed instrumentally to American Christians, the success or defeat of which can be little less than the amanicipation or bondage of the world?"

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

This Society received between April 1st, 1846, and March 1st, 1847, $23,912. In the same period, it paid, for missionary labor within the state, and incidental expenses, $7,913 62; and remitted $18,000 to the American Home Missionary Society—or $1,375 83 more than in the year before. The latter Society has also received direct remittances from the Hampshire Missionary Society, $1,200; and from various individuals, congregational collections and bequests, $6,509 82—making the aggregate appropriated to this object from the state, during the eleven months reported, $33,623 44. Except in the previous year, when the amount was increased by a large legacy, this contribution to Home Missions is larger by about $2,800 than was ever before received from this state in a single year.

Sixty missionaries have been in commission in Massachusetts since the last report—three more than in the year previous. Five congregations have been added to the list of beneficiaries, while 5 have ceased to receive aid, and 6 others are expected to do so during the coming year. About 18,000 families embraced in these communities, receive the spiritual care of the missionaries; and more than half of the attendants on public worship are gathered into Sabbath schools and Bible classes; and nearly all of them are associated in one form or another, as friends of temperance. Three of the churches are noticed as having enjoyed revivals of religion during the year.

Although the proportion of missionary exertion, which it is necessary for Massachusetts to bestow on her own destitute fields, has been rapidly diminishing, the time has not yet arrived when it can be wholly withdrawn. "From the post of observation which has been assigned them," says the Secretary, Rev. JOSEPH S. CLARK, "the Executive Committee yet discover 'old wastes' to be reclaimed, new communities to be evangelized, infant and infirm churches to be strengthened—in short, missionary fields, where truth and righteousness will never spring forth without culture, nor error and irreligion die of neglect; and where the christian ministry can gain a footing only by the same kind of external appliances, that are requisite in any other part of the unevangelized world.

While the Committee of this Auxiliary thus search out and supply the wants of Massachusetts, they do not forget that the sons of such fathers have a larger mission than merely the cultivation of their own homestead. They nobly sustain the character of "an integral part" of the organization for conveying the means of grace to every destitute section of the land. In former years, and especially in that which has just closed, the liberality of their churches—the result of an efficient agency operating on the cor sciences of an intelligent and philanthropic people—has never, in the hour of need, been appealed to in vain.

RHODE ISLAND HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Six missionaries have labored under the direction of this Auxiliary during more or less of the year past. The number of stations occupied is 7. The appropriations—which, from circumstances adverted to in former reports, are larger than the average—amount in all to $1,850. One thousand dollars of this sum is furnished by the continued liberality of the Missionary Society of Connecticut; $562 76 have been contributed by the churches of Rhode-Island—being $120 22 more than last year; and a balance of $287 24 is yet to be provided for. Meanwhile, the American Home Missionary Society has received from churches and individuals in this state, $1,536 62 for expenditure in Western missions.

"The Missionary Churches," says the Secretary, Rev. JONATHAN LEAVITT, "are about one-third of the Congregational churches in our state. Several of them are thriving, to say the least, quite as much as any of our churches. Two of them have recently been enjoying pleasant revivals of religion." Efforts to erect sanctuaries, or to redeem them from debt, as well as thrift in the cause of temperance and of the Sabbath, show, that if the great rain has been withheld, the dew of Hermon has not ceased to descend upon the state.

CONNECTICUT MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The receipts of this Auxiliary for eleven months, ending March 1st, 1847, have been $6,730 72, which, with a balance previously in the treasury, of $1,884 94, make a total of resources for the year, of $8,615 66. Except $1,612 55, which are retained to meet obligations that mature in the month of May, this has been expended as follows: viz. on the missionary churches of Connecticut, $3,503 11; paid to assist the feeble churches of Rhode-Island, $1,000; and forwarded to the National Society for its general purposes, $2,500. The latter Institution has also received from various sources in Connecticut, $10,790 78—being $1,004 06 more than the same item last year; and making the total receipts for Home Missions, from the State, $17,521 50.

In order to appreciate the evidence which this steady increase affords, of the well principled attachment of the churches of Connecticut to Home Missions, it should be remembered, that the greater part of the amount raised comes through the voluntary agency of the pastors; and is the result of an intelligent purpose of the churches, to spread to others those christian privileges, which have made so great a portion of the State as the garden of the Lord.

Thirty-six missionaries, including three sustained by the contributions of the Auxiliary Home Missionary Society of Fairfield County, have labored in this State during the year.

In their last report, the Trustees remark: "As it is thirty years since the organization of this Society, we may regard it as now passing, with all its interests and responsibilities, into the hands of a new generation. They, as well as the surviving founders, may properly inquire, whether it has so far accomplished the object for which it was formed, as to deserve and claim continued patronage. Its sphere of action was originally limited to the State and vicinity. For fourteen years, with a scanty income, it was able to cherish the institutions of the Gospel in only a portion of the needy churches in Connecticut." "In 1830, a union was formed with the A. H. M. Society, since which time its resources have been sufficient not only for supplying the wants of our own churches, but for aiding liberally a sister State, and contributing to replenish the treasury of the Parent Society. Not a congregation in Connecticut has since been refused assistance on account of a lack of funds at the disposal of the Board. Seventy eight congregations—or about one third of our present whole number—it is believed, have shared to a greater or less extent in its bounty." Thirty of these churches, some of them now among the most vigorous in the State, have dispensed with the aid of the Society; and of the remaining 48, by far the greater number are advancing in the process of recovery.

But the sympathies of Connecticut, like her pecuniary bounty, flow out largely towards the churches of the West in this time of their infancy and their peril. "God is chasing the devotees of Romanism," says the Secretary of this Auxiliary, Rev. HORACE HOOKER, "and a multitude of the ignorant and unbelieving to our shores. With the increased facilities of immigration, and the pressure of the present necessity, what but Home Missions could save the existing churches at the West from the desolations of a flood, and render practical the planting of pure, orthodox, Protestant churches in the wide and still unsettled regions towards the setting sun? God warned Noah of the approaching flood, and he built an ark; our churches, premonished of this moral overflow, have made provision to meet it—at least to some extent—and like him they may escape its ravages. And as Noah found the old world enriched, after the subsidence of the waters; so these famished millions, relieved by the beneficence of our people, may come to us with hearts freed from the prejudices of education and superstition, and furnish a rich soil for the seed of truth.

PHILADELPHIA HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

From April 1st, 1846, to March 1st, 1847, this Auxiliary had its disposal $9,526 17, of which $1,283 26 was a balance in the treasury at the date of the previous report. The receipts have since been $8,242 91. The expenditures have been $7,050 57, including $500 remitted to the Parent Society; and a balance of $2,475 60 remains to meet demands that become payable during the present spring. Individuals and churches in the states covered by this Auxiliary have contributed directly to the Parent Society the additional sum of $1,305 83—making a total of $10,148 74, or an advance of $2,317 05 above the receipts within the same limits in the year preceding.

Sixty missionaries have labored on the field of the Philadelphia H. M. Society, in about 100 different congregations, besides extending their occasional labors still more widely among the destitute. In a goodly proportion of instances, the stimulus of judicious aid is already seen, in the greater activity of all the moral machinery of well ordered society; and even in the portions of the field, where the people are comparatively cut off from the full effect of missions, by reason of a rugged country and a strange speech, more hopeful prospects are every year presented. Nevertheless, this class is among the most difficult to be addressed with the hope of success. The Secretary, Rev. ELIAS R. FAIRCHILD, says in his last report, "Many of them seem to have enjoyed but few of the advantages of education in their youth. They cannot be readily approached, nor led to appreciate the value and importance of organizations for their moral and spiritual benefit. There have been sent to this class of people, a few devoted, pious, faithful, and competent ministers. The number sent must be greatly augmented, before the design of the Missionary Society can be accomplished, or the vast resources of this field devoted to the service and glory of God."

In reference to co-operation with the Parent Society, in supplying the remoter portions of our land with moral culture, the Secretary adds, that the Philadelphia H. M. Society "desire to do more than it has been their privilege to do in time past. The rapid increase of population, the advantages of priority in publishing the Gospel in new settlements, the number and earnestness of appeals for aid, that come from multitudes who are famishing for the bread of life, and the shortness of the period in which efforts can be put forth with advantage for the benefit of those who are now living—prompt this desire, and fully justify a fervent appeal to the piety, patriotism and benevolence of the community, for means to cultivate the waste places within the bounds of this Society, and in other portions of our national territory."

CENTRAL AGENCY, N. Y.

Under the supervision of this Agency, there have been employed, the past year, 57 missionaries. They have labored in 65 congregations, and the aggregate of their service is forty-five years. One hundred twenty-four only have been added to the churches—61 on profession and 63 by letter. Sabbath schools are in a prosperous condition; and the cause of temperance, though in some sections struggling with violent opposition, is on the advance. Several of the congregations have made successful efforts for the extinction of old parish debts; and others are preparing to erect houses of worship, the coming year.

The congregations are most of them small in numbers, and emphatically poor. They are kept in this condition, by the removal of their most valued members to other sections of the country, chiefly to our frontier settlements in the West. One church, which seldom has preaching more than half of the time, dismissed fourteen of its members, for this purpose, the last year; by which their subscription for the support of the Gospel was diminished $100. It appears, on examination, that the property owned by thirty-five of these congregations, according to the general assessment list, would, on an average, give but $15,000 to each; and that only one third of this belongs to members of the church. There are, on an average, but thirty families in a congregation, giving to each family, if the property were equally divided, but $500.

The funds collected within the bounds of this Agency, during the eleven months reported, amount to $5,677 74; which is $213 94 more than in the previous year. The expenditures, for the same period, amount to $4,107 04; leaving $1,570 70 for the general purposes of the Society; and showing that the expense of each full year of missionary labor has been $91 27.

Rev. ABIJAH CRANE is the Secretary of the Agency.

WESTERN AGENCY, N. Y.

During the eleven months reported, 55 missionaries have received commissions from this Agency to preach the Gospel to 58 different congregations. Thirteen of these were not in commission the previous year. The sum voted to sustain them is $4,800; of which $1,250 are to be raised by the churches aided. The whole number of missionaries laboring in connection with the Agency, during the whole or a part of the period named, is 82; and the whole number of churches aided is 91. Two new fields have been taken up. Four of the churches have secured parsonages. Seven meeting houses have been built, and another is in the process of erection.

"The missionary churches," says the Secretary of the Agency, Rev. JOHN A. MURRAY, "are generally in an harmonious state; a few are enjoying seasons of unusual interest. The missionaries, as a body, are faithful, self-denying, devoted in their calling and acceptable to their respective churches. But there is great cause for humiliation, throughout all this region, that so few are turning unto the Lord."

The receipts from the field of this Agency have been $7,967 23; exceeding the amount voted to sustain missionaries within its bounds, by $3,167 23.

Besides the foregoing, 5 missionaries and as many churches have received assistance, to the amount of $550, through the Missionary Committee of the Rochester Presbytery. The collections in the churches connected with the Presbytery have amounted to $1,032 03.

WESTERN RESERVE AGENCY, OHIO.

The receipts from the field of this Agency, for the eleven months ending March 1st, were $2,485 73; including $279 88 paid directly into the treasury of the Parent Society. The number of missionaries in commission is 34. No very powerful revivals of religion have been enjoyed, but the gentler dews of divine grace have descended upon quite a number of the congregations, and have resulted in the quickening of the saints and the conversion of many sinners. A very large proportion of all the hopeful conversions, within the bounds of the Agency, has been in connection with the missionary churches. So signally has this been the case, that we may regard it as a special indication, that the prayers and alms of the friends and patrons of Home Missions have, like the prayers and alms of Cornelius, come up as an acceptable memorial before God.

"I suppose," says the Secretary of the Agency, Rev. MYRON TRACY, "that the region embraced within our bounds is better supplied, and is in a better moral and religious condition than any other equally extensive portion of the whole West. Yet, even here, the aspect is painfully dark. Public worship is not regularly maintained on the Sabbath, by either the Congregational or Presbyterian denominations, in more than three-sevenths, and I think not in more than one-half of the townships. There are within our bounds one hundred and fifty townships, in which these denominations have no churches in existence; and in many of them public worship is not regularly maintained by Christians of any other order. In one whole county, containing from three to five thousand inhabitants, there is but one church of any evangelical denomination, and that is a very small one. According to the best estimate which I have been able to make, there is not within our bounds more than one professor of religion, of either the Presbyterian or Congregational denominations, to six families. If we suppose there are twice as many professors of religion of other evangelical denominations as of these two,—and this I am persuaded is a liberal estimate,—it would give us but one professor of religion of any evangelical denomination, to two families. Such is the moral condition of that portion of Ohio—embracing 340 or 350 townships, and about as many thousands of inhabitants—which lies north of the south line of the Western Reserve. As I cast my eye over the States and Territories, south, and west, and north-west of us, and behold scattered over them nine or ten millions of people, I inquire with amazement—and is there no other section of this vast region, of equal extent, whose moral and religious condition is as good as the moral and religious condition of this? And constrained as I am to believe there is not, my heart would die within me, did I not know what changes Home Missions have wrought elsewhere, what power there is in the Gospel, and how exceeding great and precious are the promises of Jehovah !”

MARIETTA AGENCY, OHIO.

This Agency embraces 9 counties, in the vicinity of Marietta, viz:—Washington, Monroe, Hocking, Morgan, Athens, Meigs, Gallia, Lawrence and Jackson. Fourteen missionaries have been in commission on this field the past year; four of whom have been sustained by the Agency. The amount raised by the churches for this purpose is $399 58. Two of the congregations have been visited with refreshing rains of righteousness, and in most of them there are grateful evidences of prosperity.

A very valuable service has been rendered to the cause, the past year, by the Rev. THOMAS WICKES, Secretary of the Agency and pastor of the church in Marietta. At the request of the Agency, and with the generous consent of his people, he has visited every church co-operating with the Society, excepting one, within forty miles of Marietta, and spread before them the claims of their own destitutions and of the country at large. The missionary churches have, thereby, been encouraged and strengthened, and a deeper interest awakened in many hearts in the great work of missions at home.

“During the last year,” says the Secretary, “the Agency has extended its operations, by occupying new and destitute fields, particularly in Morgan county, where one of your devoted missionaries has labored with much success in laying the foundation of churches, which, we trust, will prove a rich blessing to that region. And there are large sections of this western country, where the Gospel must be sent to the people, if they ever have it. They will not organize churches for themselves, erect houses of worship, and then send for ministers to come and preach to them the word of life, any more than the heathen will do the same. The people, in many districts, are like our wide spreading forests in all their native wildness. There is a native growth of sin in the human heart, as strong and luxuriant as the growth of timber which is to be found on our virgin soil. And we might almost as well expect that these forests will fall, and clear themselves into well cultivated farms, with dwellings and orchards, without the help of man; as that these communities, where vice and irreligion and infidelity prevail, will lay aside their Sabbath-breaking and wickedness and unbelief and unite in building up Gospel institutions, without the aid of the ministers of Christ. We do not wait for the heathen to come to our doors and ask for the bread of life. We send it to them unasked and undesired, and press it upon their acceptance. So, likewise, must we do to a large portion of our destitute population.

CINCINNATI AGENCY, OHIO.

This Agency embraces, chiefly, those portions of the states of Ohio and Indiana, which can most conveniently communicate with Cincinnati as a common centre. The receipts into its treasury from April 1st, 1846, to March 1st, 1847, were $2,458 32; and its payments, $2,009 69. Forty one missionaries have labored in connection with this Agency the past year, viz:—22 in Ohio, 18 in Indiana, and 1 in Kentucky. Several of the congregations have enjoyed interesting revivals of religion; in others, there is an increased attendance on the means of grace, and much attention given to the establishment of Sabbath schools in the vicinity, so that from 100 to 500 children, in some instances, are brought under the instruction of the members of a single church. There are also many other grateful tokens of the usefulness of these missionaries and their churches, in the regions where God has placed them, to be as the light of the world and the salt of the earth.

Several important missionary fields, which were destitute a year ago, have been supplied; but others are continually opening, so that the demand for additional laborers is increased, rather than diminished. The privations and trials which must be endured, where the people are new comers with small means, struggling to pay for their purchase, clear their lands and make the necessary improvements, and where the opposition of the heart to God is unrestrained and fearless, render this by no means an inviting field to those who seek for ease or worldly emolument. Large congregations, with fine houses and a generous support, cannot be promised. But, those who feel a confidence in their ability, God helping them, to make their places, need not be discouraged. If they can enter with zeal and earnestness, just such a door of usefulness as is found open, preach, it may be, to fifty hearers, and in five or ten different places, and live as the people live, they may have the consciousness of well-doing, and the approbation of their Lord and Master. They may see, moreover, one or two of these places growing up, in a few years, into importance, and find themselves, ere long, in as pleasant locations as they could have chosen for themselves and their families at the beginning; with this advantage, they have built on their own foundations, and have a thousand precious endearments and attachments, which a stranger can never find.

"Let no well qualified ministers of Christ," says the Secretary of the Agency, Rev. HENRY LITTLE, "hesitate to come among us.

If they can come with unwavering faith, with apostolic self-denial and zeal, and seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, they will find fields of unquestioned and increasing usefulness ; they will be sustained, and will taste as much real happiness as belongs to mortals this side the grave. Some men, who have not been here twenty years, have an immense influence, and enjoy what the world would call an enviable reputation ; and when a few more years of hard labor are performed, they will see few in a better world with more gems in their crowns of rejoicing."

MISSOURI HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Twenty one missionaries have labored under the commission of the Parent Society within this State during the year, and three others in immediate connection with the Auxiliary. The receipts of the State Society have been $700. Some of the churches have been deeply afflicted in the death of their most valued members, during the unusual sickness, which prevailed in the Autumn throughout the State. Churches at the East can with difficulty realize how great such a loss is. The taking away of a single active, influential member from a church which is struggling for existence, seems often to decide the question of its continuance. But, mercies have been mingled with chastisements. In several of the churches assisted there have been deeply interesting revivals, which have greatly increased their influence and strength, and, in some instances, have gathered into them those who were far gone in the broad road to ruin—of whom the church had the least hope that they would ever become what they now are, childlike followers of the meek and lowly Savior.

Very commendable and successful efforts have also been made, by the congregations aided, in the erection of houses of worship. The churches at Independence and Weston are now worshipping in good brick edifices of their own. The church at Rock Hill has completed a very neat stone house, where they now pay their devotions to the Savior with grateful hearts. The churches at Warsaw and St. Charles have their houses under way, and hope to finish them early in the season. Five others have the means subscribed, and will soon lay the foundations and rear the temples, dedicated already in spirit to the living God.

"It is not easy," says the Secretary of the Society, Rev. JAMES B. TOWNSEND, "to represent the vast amount of good which the Parent Society is doing, in this State. But, suppose the aid of the Society to be withdrawn. That moment, at least twenty-one missionaries—about two thirds of our whole ministerial force—would be compelled to leave their fields, so far as human eye can see. They do not preach at one point all the time, like most eastern ministers ; but they gather the people at many different points, and break unto them the bread of life. Some occupy whole counties ; and a few even larger fields. They thus reach, with a greater or less amount of influence, at least one hundred thousand souls. The mass of these are in a chrysalis state, as is the society of all new countries rapidly settling from every portion of the world—ready to be formed for Christ and the defence of those pure and noble principles which cluster around the cross, or against him, and let in those dark waters whose tide desolates wherever it flows. Now, remove this influence, and contemplate the moral desolation that will follow. Then see what the Society is accomplishing in this one State, amid this mighty valley. With this view of the subject, will not our eastern friends still rally around us, as they hitherto have nobly done, and sustain us in this great work? So we fondly hope, nay, firmly believe.”

“New fields,” continues the report, “are constantly opening; little churches are formed, and are now crying to us for help, earnestly desiring pastors to teach them and their families the way of life; to sympathize with them in their afflictions; to comfort and cheer them in the hour of their departure; to baptize their children and bury their dead. We need at least six good men and true, at this moment, to occupy such fields; and we know not how we can do with less. It is true—and we would not conceal it—that the labor is severe and the trials many. Yet, those of us who have tried it, have found it good to be here. The work is glorious, and the reward is great. If, through you, we could reach our young brethren throughout the East, who have devoted themselves to the work of the ministry, we would ask with emphasis, full of earnest concern for the souls of many ready to perish, who among them is prepared to take up his cross and follow Christ through these deep forests and these broad prairies, scattering, as he goes, the seeds of eternal life, winning back the prodigal son and the truant daughter to the embrace of their heavenly Father and his approving smiles, and then teaching them to “read their title clear to mansions in the skies?” Yes, we would repeat the inquiry, and then wait for the reply: hoping and praying that, in many instances, it may be, ‘Here are we, send us.’”

MICHIGAN.

From the Minutes of the last General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, it appears that there were, at that date, 106 churches connected with the Synod of Michigan, the number of whose members was 6,591. The Minutes of the last General Association of Michigan also show, that 56 churches, containing 2,332 members were then connected with the body. Several churches have since been formed, and a few others are independent of any ecclesiastical connexion. The whole number of Presbyterian and Congregational churches in the State, therefore, cannot, at present, be less than 170. These, with few exceptions, have, at some period of their history, been nurtured by this Society. The number of missionaries who have ministered to them the last year, is 77; and towards their support there have been realized from within the State, collections amounting to $976 51.

The churches aided are in general in a state of increasing prosperity; greater numbers are in attendance on the preaching of the word, and vigorous efforts are, in many instances, made to provide comfortable houses of worship, and to maintain the ordinances of the Gospel with less dependence on missionary aid. Some of these churches, too, are now experiencing the reviving influences of the Spirit. "I have witnessed," says the Agent of the Society, Rev. CALVIN CLARK, "scenes within a few weeks which have filled angels with rejoicing. Still," he adds, "nothing is so much needed here, as a general outpouring of the Spirit. O that Christians at the East, who contribute so cheerfully to sustain those who here minister at the altar, would pray more importunately for the descent of the Holy Ghost on our Zion! A powerful revival of religion, in many of our missionary churches, would enable them to go alone. But in vain does the missionary sow the good seed of the kingdom, without God give the increase. In vain do our christian friends bestow upon us their bounty, in the hope of seeing our wilderness become as the garden of God, if help come not from on high. 'Without me,' saith the Son of God, 'ye can do nothing.' We ask, indeed, for continued pecuniary aid. Without it, our posts of labor must be abandoned. We ask that many more laborers may be sent forth into the harvest. Without them, it must perish ungathered. But we ask more earnestly than for any thing else, that the effectual fervent prayer may go up to Heaven in our behalf, for the glorious manifestations of Almighty power, in the conversion of sinners and the quickening of them that believe."

ILLINOIS.

Ninety two missionaries have been in commission in this State during the year; and there have been contributed towards their support, by congregations and individuals from within its bounds, $1,234 17. A number of the churches have enjoyed the peculiar presence of God; sinners have been converted and every good cause has received strength. There is a manifest advancement, in the disposition and efforts of the people, to sustain the institutions of the Gospel without aid. Their devotion to this object, in their weakness and childhood, gives pleasing assurance that when they attain to maturity, the house of God will have the first place in their hearts and labors. The causes of instability in the pastoral relation are also disappearing; and the people are coming to appreciate, as do older communities, the value of a permanent ministry.

A survey of the field occupied by these laborious and devoted missionaries—nearly one hundred in number—and especially a recounting of the manifold wonders of divine grace, which have been wrought by the instrumentality of this Institution in this single State the last eighteen years, is calculated to fill the heart of every Christian with gratitude and praise. But even here our work is not completed. "The impression," says the Agent of the Society, Rev. WILLIAM KIRBY, "which the observation of the moral aspect of things in this State has made on my mind, the past as well as in former years, is, that there is yet an alarming inadequacy in the supply of competent religious teachers. We have a State embracing 52,000 square miles, which, after deducting one-third for waste lands and lands too destitute of timber for immediate occupancy, furnishes at least 34,000 square miles, more or less densely settled and rapidly filling up. The ratio of increase is exceeded by that of only one State in the Union, preceding the year 1840. Allowing one educated minister to a township of 36 square miles, we ought to have 940 such ambassadors of the cross this very day. And yet, of the denominations represented by the American Home Missionary Society, there are not over 150 in actual service. And, at a rough estimate, I should say, there are not over 350 of all evangelical denominations, who are competent teachers in the school of Christ. This would leave a deficiency of nearly 600 now needed in this part of the home field. Again, we have a population of more than 700,000. Allowing one educated minister to 1,000 souls, we should need 700 such ministers—double, at least, what we now have. Connecticut, with a population of about half this number, has 240 educated ministers of the Congregational denomination alone. Give us in that proportion, for Congregationalists and Old and New School Presbyterians, and we should have 531 ministers, while the present highest estimated number is only 205, leaving a deficiency of 326. Again, we have in this State 99 counties, the least number of inhabitants in any one of which is 1,000, and the largest 21,581. Forty three, or nearly one half of these, mostly in the southern and eastern portions of the State, are destitute of any churches of the denominations represented in the American Home Missionary Society; while others of them not destitute of churches, are without ministers of Christ to preach to them. Within a circle, drawn by a radius of sixty miles from this place—Jacksonville—there are twelve destitute churches, four of which are in county seats. Some of these churches are able to raise from one half to three fourths of a minister's support, if ministers could be found for them; and they are generally furnished with comfortable houses of worship. To supply vacancies in such churches, we need at once, some fifteen ministers in this and other parts of the State. But to supply such churches, is but a small part of the work to be done. Home Missions must be aggressive. The Gospel must be preached, by those who are competent to preach it, wherever souls can be gathered to hear. There are hundreds of places in this State, where good congregations might be brought together from Sabbath to Sabbath to hear the Gospel from the lips of an educated, thinking, warm-hearted ministry. And such a ministry would here gather much fruit unto everlasting life.

In the southern section of this State, the Missionary Committee of Alton Presbytery continue to be most efficient helpers with us in the missionary cause. By thorough exploration, by indicating points of the greatest need and promise, by turning the attention of ministers to this field, and by keeping alive in their own churches a deep and pervading interest in the work, they have greatly facilitated the operations of the Society within their bounds, and contributed, in no small measure, to the securing of the happiest results. No where is the aid of the Society more indispensable or more highly appreciated. "Without the sympathy and active co-operation of the Parent Society," say the Committee, "we should be in utter despair. Not only should we make no advance, we should be unable to retain the ground already gained. Two thirds of the churches now established would languish and die. Under God, our hope for the spiritual desolations of Southern Illinois is in the American Home Missionary Society. It is the existence, the sympathy, and the active exertions of this Society in our behalf, which is leading us to do what we can for ourselves. Brethren, withdraw not from us your prayers and your aid. With them, we expect to see this wilderness bud and blossom as the rose; without them, we should see its wilderness aspect become more and more desolate and savage, till it should become a region accursed of God."

WISCONSIN.

The whole number of churches connected with the Presbyterian and Congregational denominations in this Territory, is 75; of ministers, 56. Forty four of these ministers have been in commission, the last year, from this Society; and 60 churches and missionary districts have enjoyed the benefit of their labors. The severe sickness which prevailed throughout the Territory in the Autumn, greatly embarrassed, for the time, the missionary work—public services on the Sabbath being, in many instances, suspended on account of the illness of the minister or extensive sickness among his people. None of the ministers in the Territory, nor any member of their families, however, were removed by death. Several of the churches have been visited with the special influences of the Spirit; and numbers have been gathered into them who, at the commencement of the year, were strangers to the covenant of promise. New churches have been formed; additional laborers have entered the field; houses of worship have been erected; pastors have been settled; Sabbath schools have been sustained wherever churches exist, and in many settlements where there are no churches and no regular ministrations of the Gospel ; academies and select schools have been established ; and a College will soon be opened for the reception of students. There is grateful evidence, therefore, of steady and healthful progress in the work of establishing permanently in this Territory, at so early a period of its history, those institutions, which are to train its sons and daughters, in all coming generations, for the duties of this life and the awards of the life to come.

"Great success," says the Agent of the Society, Rev. STEPHEN PEET, "has attended the efforts to establish and build up christian institutions in this Territory. But still the work is not done up, and does not seem even to diminish ; but spreads and increases on our hands. There are numerous settlements, and even vacant churches, which enjoy no stated ministrations of the Gospel. Some of them are visited, occasionally, by a missionary, or the Agent of the Society ; others never receive such a visit, and no efforts are made to feed and protect the scattered sheep in these settlements. After all that has been done, the destitutions of the Territory have not been supplied. Far from it. And such is the increase of population and the extension of settlements, that these destitutions, instead of being diminished, will increase, souls will famish and die, and the harvest will not be gathered, unless more laborers are sent into the field. The same principle, which was so happily adopted and so successfully carried out by the American Home Missionary Society, in early planting and sustaining the institutions of the Gospel in the southern section of this Territory, should still be acted on. A field actually wider and no less important and eligible, than that which called out the sympathy and the liberal contributions of eastern Christians, seven years ago, now lies unoccupied, and calls loudly for laborers. More than "Ten missionaries" are now wanted in Wisconsin. The cry comes up still from every quarter, "Send us ministers, send us good ministers—send them now."

IOWA.

Twenty nine missionaries have been in commission in this State during the year. Nine are settled pastors ; three of whom have been installed since our last report. Six churches have been formed ; two houses of worship have been completed—eight having been erected previously ; three more will soon be finished ; and four others, it is expected, will be built the coming season. A steady progress is thus being made, to establish the institutions of the Gospel on a permanent basis. There has been more religious interest in the churches, the past year, than in the year preceding. Seven of them have enjoyed seasons of special refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

"Iowa," says the Agent of the Society, Rev. JULIUS A. REED,

"is deeply indebted to the American Home Missionary Society. This Institution has established within our bounds forty-five churches of Christ, and supplied them, to a great extent, with a preached Gospel. It is questionable whether, without your aid, any one of these missionaries could have been sustained, as yet, in this State; and our churches would have been few and feeble indeed. These churches are feeble now, but they are exerting a powerful influence. The oldest Congregational church in Iowa, was formed May 5th, 1839, in a settlement which was then less than two years old; a few, poor, crowded cabins were the only dwellings it contained. Revivals have here been enjoyed, till the settlement is pervaded by a religious influence. The sheriff—well acquainted with the residents in other settlements—is a stranger here, having no business with this law abiding people. They have built a neat, brick church edifice; and their pastor can now go, in almost any direction, two or three miles, and gather an audience as large as the school houses will accommodate. This is a specimen of the influence which each of these churches, we trust, will soon exert. And if the American Home Missionary Society were to do no more for Iowa, than to scatter forty five such churches over a district as large as Massachusetts and Connecticut united, it would deserve the thanks of all coming generations, for having conferred on them an inestimable boon."

"But we must look to you," continues the communication, "for increased assistance. Only fourteen counties enjoy the entire labors of a single missionary each; 7 have only one half or one third of the labors of a missionary each; and 18 are destitute of Congregational and Presbyterian preaching altogether. Some of these counties are new, but they are rapidly filling up, and ministers cannot be stationed in them too early. It would be a matter of economy to add twenty, at once, to our present number of missionaries; and the interests of existing churches will suffer seriously, if five are not sent to our assistance without delay. Never again can the friends of Christ do so well as now, while our population is small and society in its elements, the great work which is here to be done, if this fair land is ever blessed with the institutions of the Gospel. Let them take just and comprehensive views of the future greatness of this valley, and of its influence upon the nation, morally and politically, and also of its influence, as a constituent part of the nation, upon the world, and they cannot but feel, that the diffusion of pure and undefiled religion throughout its length and breadth, is the great duty of American Christians."

CONCLUSION.

In this rapid glance at the progress of the missionary work in our own land, we see most abundant cause for gratitude and praise to God, that so much has been accomplished, by instrumentalities so humble. We have encouragement, also, in the blessing of God upon us hitherto, which should quicken our faith and hope and charity, and make us always abounding and ever unwearied, in our efforts for the enlargement and perfection of our American Zion. God has graven her upon the palms of his hands, and her walls are continually before him; and, therefore, we may hope, that whatsoever we put our hands unto, from a pure love to her advancement, will prosper.

We see, also, how urgent is the call on the friends of Christ for greatly increased efforts in the work of home evangelization. Every missionary district calls for reinforcements. Not a State or Territory in our western country, where five, ten, or twenty additional laborers are not importunately demanded; and where many times these numbers are not needed to give an adequate supply. And there are whole States and extensive Territories, alarmingly destitute of the means of grace, which are yet unoccupied by missionaries of this Institution, for lack of means to send them forth to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ. Strangers, too, are coming to our shores in masses hitherto unequalled, bringing their ignorance, their irreligion and their vices with them. Our population is rolling up its numbers, and receding farther and farther from our reach. And this receding, mixed population—whatever may be their character—are soon to become our rulers. Another census, and the sceptre, in all probability, will have passed from the eastern to the western states, never to be regained. What an amazing interest have we then, in bringing the immense multitudes, that are so fast peopling the vast and fertile regions of the West, under the power of the world to come! Connected as we are with them, in our political and civil destiny—in all that is dear to us beneath the sun—our only hold on them is in the Gospel of God our Savior. And the influences of this Gospel cannot be thrown around them too soon. Were the expense of it to be increased a thousand fold, it would, nevertheless, be the first dictate of political economy, as well as the first impulse of a renovated soul, to meet it. Meet it, we must. THE WEST MUST HAVE THE GOSPEL! We and they must live under its dominion; or the East and the West will one day go down together. For, the nation and kingdom that will not serve me shall perish, saith the Lord.

We ask every patriot and every Christian to ponder well the work in which we are engaged—its relations to the best interests of man—its relations to the kingdom of the Redeemer, and to inquire what the benevolent feelings of his own heart, what the will of his Lord and Master, would have him to do. We ask that the means may be proffered of greatly increasing, and that without delay, those instrumentalities, which alone can save our nation from the doom of those who forget God, and bring the myriads who are to people it, in all coming time, to the inheritance of the just made perfect. And, especially do we ask, at this time of declension and rebuke, that, from all who love the cause of missions, or their country, or the souls of men—from all who look for the coming and kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, the prayer may go up without ceasing, O LORD, REVIVE THY WORK IN THE MIDST OF THE YEARS, IN THE MIDST OF THE YEARS MAKE KNOWN; IN WRATH REMEMBER MERCY!

Relation of Auxiliary Societies, Agencies and Committees of Missions to the A. H. M. S.; Applications, &c.

State and other large Auxiliaries.

Most of the state Missionary Societies were in existence before the formation of the National Society, and some of them—as the Missionary Societies of Connecticut and Massachusetts—were among the earliest organized efforts in our country for sending the Gospel to the destitute. They have voluntarily connected themselves with the A. H. M. S., from a conviction that greater unity of plan and efficiency in action would thereby be promoted.

The terms by which the Auxiliaries are connected with the Parent Society, are such as to secure the following objects, viz :

First—The Auxiliary is not superseded or overshadowed by the National Institution, but, on the contrary, is invigorated and sustained by connexion with it. This is secured by the provision that the Auxiliary is the sole agency for this cause that operates on its field. It controls all appointments in the state to which it belongs. From it alone, so far as its means will allow, the feeble churches receive assistance. Thus a direct relation and strong attachment is cherished towards it, in the hearts of the ministers and churches.

Again—While the local operations of the Auxiliary are thus encouraged and sustained, its connexion with the Parent Society is such as to awaken an interest in the destitute beyond its own limits, and afford facilities for reaching them. It is not only a Society for local purposes, but it is also a branch of the National Society, and as such, has the control of all agencies for the collection of funds within its own field, and can direct the manner in which its surplus resources shall be expended beyond its own limits. Thus, the state and other large Auxiliaries are not merely organizations to help the Parent Society; they are integral parts of it, bound together in one whole by a common interest in, and free access, through the Parent Society, to the great field to be occupied, and governed by the same general principles and rules in carrying on their work.

Agents and Agencies.

Besides taking up contributions for Home Missions, the Agents of the A. H. M. S. exercise a general superintendence of the operations of the Society within their respective fields. By correspondence and personal visitation, they ascertain the wants of the destitute; assist them to obtain the preaching of the Gospel; and instruct and encourage them to develop their own means for its support. They receive applications for aid, and make such preliminary examination as may be necessary before submitting them for the action of the Executive Committee; and in other ways, labor to insure a judicious and economical application of the Socie-tive Committee, with as little delay as practicable, from the most authentic sources from which they can be obtained.

Such, briefly, are the relations of the American Home Missionary Society to the various organs, through which the community seeks to act out its missionary feeling. It will be seen that this plan secures the united action, in the missionary work, of those whose views of doctrine and church order admit of co-operation, and whose interests in the great field are essentially the same. This combination insures a homogeneous policy as to the manner and amount of appropriations, and the qualifications of missionaries; it has discouraged sectional feelings, and diffused throughout each part an interest in all the rest; and thus has formed ties between the West and the East, along which have passed, from the latter to the former, a silent and invisible current of moral influences, more valuable, if possible, than all pecuniary grants. At the same time, the connexion of the Parent Society with the various Associations that act with it, is such as to secure to them entire freedom in the missionary work, in their respective spheres, and an influence beyond them, in cultivating the waste places of our common country.

Applications for aid.

Feeble congregations, applying for aid in supporting the Gospel, are requested to embody in their applications the following particulars, viz :

The name of the church or congregation; the number of communicants, and the average number of attendants on public worship; the denomination and size of congregations immediately contiguous, with the distance to their places of worship; the total amount of salary which the applicants propose to make up; the largest portion of that salary which they can raise for the given time, and the least amount that will suffice from the Society; whether the minister for whom a commission is desired, is the pastor of the church, or if not, whether any arrangements are made, or contemplated in the course of the year, with reference to his installment. These statements should be signed by the trustees and elders or deacons, or by a committee of the congregation, and confirmed by the certificate of two or more clergymen of good standing, acquainted with the facts. Also—

The name and post office address of the minister whose services they desire to secure; his credentials; and the certificate of two or more ministers of known standing, as to his general character for piety, zeal and acceptableness as a minister of the Gospel, and his adaptedness to this particular field of labor.

Where the ecclesiastical body with which a church is connected has a "Committee of Missions" to act in their behalf, this Committee are the proper persons to certify the statements of the church, the standing of the minister and his prospects of usefulness in the place where his services are desired; and the application should, in all cases, be sent to them for their endorsement and recommendation.

As a general rule, the appropriations of the A. H. M. S. are for twelve months from the date of the application; at the end of which, if further aid be needed, a new application must be made, containing all the particulars above stated, and endorsed and recommended in like manner. And each congregation applying for renewed aid, should furnish, in addition to other testimonials, the certificate of the Missionary, that they have fulfilled their previous pledges for his support.

It is desirable that applications should be addressed to the care of the Agent, Agency or Auxiliary Society of the A. H. M. S., for the region where the applicants reside; but in case of doubt as to the name or residence of such Agent, or the existence of such Agency or Auxiliary, applications may be sent directly to the office of the Parent Society, addressed to one of the Secretaries.

's funds. At present, the Society has in its employ no money agents, or any whose services are not required for other purposes in the regions where they labor. The Secretaries of several of the larger Auxiliaries, are also the Agents for this cause in their respective bounds.

In certain districts, where the duties of an Agent are likely to be peculiarly responsible, there is associated with him a board of counsellors selected from the region of his labors, called an Agency. These Boards of Agency differ from Auxiliary Societies, in that they have no independent existence, but are appointed by the Executive Committee from year to year, and are governed by rules which the Committee prescribe. Their office is to counsel and direct the Agent in carrying out the principles of the Society, and to give advice in relation to such local matters as may be submitted to them by the Executive Committee. The persons composing a Board of Agency, are selected for their intelligence and interest in this cause, and their influence in promoting it; and are so distributed over the field as to secure a personal acquaintance with its condition. The Agent of the Society is also the Secretary of the Agency with which he is associated.

These boards of counsel might have not been necessary, had the ecclesiastical bodies on the ground been able and disposed to pay sufficient attention to the missionary work, and to act as its directors in their respective bounds. But the ministers composing them are usually scattered over a wide extent of territory, and meet but seldom, and only at seasons when they are much occupied with other business; and accordingly, it has been necessary in some cases to organize agencies for this specific work. But in other cases, Synods, Presbyteries and Associations have chosen to act as Auxiliaries to the Society, examining into the condition of the destitute within their bounds, and recommending the appropriate action for their relief. Ecclesiastical bodies thus related to the A. H. M. S. act through

Committees of Missions.

The A. H. M. S. has ever regarded the ecclesiastical bodies as the appropriate judges of the standing of their own ministers, and of the wants of the churches in their connexion. Accordingly, the commission issued to every missionary requires that his credentials be acceptable to that ministerial body of his denomination, within whose bounds he is appointed to labor. And the various Presbyteries, Associations, &c., are invited to appoint, each, a Committee of Missions from its own members to receive applications from its churches, and suggest to the Society the action proper in each case. Such a Committee constitutes the official source to which reference can be had for information and advice, in all matters pertaining to missions in the connexion to which it belongs. This mode of co-operation has been preferred by numerous ecclesiastical bodies, from the first formation of the Society. It guaranties to the churches of each denomination represented in the Society, that their respective claims shall be fairly considered, with all the advantage of having the endorsement of the body to which they belong. The advice of such a Committee, acting in the name and by the direction of the ecclesiastical body to which they belong, is regarded as the highest authority in matters pertaining to the standing of ministers and churches in their connexion, and has the same influence with the Society, as that of a Board of Agency appointed by itself.

There is one limitation to this influence, however, which ought to be stated. Should any ecclesiastical body so far swerve from the principles of truth and Gospel order, as not to retain the fellowship and confidence of the great body of the Presbyterian and Congregational churches in our land, that fact would cause its recommendations not to be respected, as a basis of action, by the Executive Committee.

As cases may occur in which the feeble churches may not be aware of the existence of any board of Agency, or Committee of Missions, through whom to apply for aid, a general provision is made, that applications may be vouched by any two ministers of known and approved standing, who can certify to the facts of the case. Information thus given is not sufficient, other facts are sought by the Execu-

Address at the Twenty First Anniversary,

By Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, of Indianapolis,

In support of the following Resolution :

Resolved, That the circumstances of the West require its ministers to be men of Apostolic stamp, and to labor on Apostolic principles.

It is hardly possible, said Mr. B., to convey to an eastern audience any correct ideas of the structure of western society. One must live in it, see it, and feel it. If one simply travels through the vast field, by the northern lakes, down the Mississippi, and up the Ohio, he will learn much, and may impart much valuable information. But his knowledge will chiefly respect the physical greatness of the West, with but a face-view of its moral and social condition. And one who has lived for years in the field, will find it difficult to convey a vivid and true impression of the material and interior structure of western society. It is unlike any other, I believe, that ever existed. I shall only attempt the representation so far as it is necessary to show what kind of men we need to labor in that field.

Although the truth which the Apostles preached and the principles upon which they acted, must be essentially the basis of ministerial work every where, yet there may be fields which, more than others, throw men back upon such support. Such is the case in the West. The work there requires almost the exact reproduction of Apostolic missionary work.

In the East, where for a long period the spirit of religion has exerted itself upon men, and, through them, upon laws, social institutions, civil polity, and upon all the permanent structures of society, there is an outside help to the preaching of the Gospel, often little suspected. For, where the truth has been well and fully preached, it enters into practical forms in the community. So that we may say, that there is more Christianity than could be found in the Gospel. Just as in the mint, a die, at first, has alone the "image and superscription;" but every coin that is stamped in it and goes into circulation, bears outside of the mould its form and lineaments; so every institution, usage, opinion, law, or public habit, which is formed by the Gospel of Christ, stands outside of that Gospel, a collateral help—a derivative image and adjuvant. Schools, colleges, public charities, and the whole social and voluntary organization are pervaded with the spirit of Christianity, and exert a specific Gospel influence on the community. All this makes the work of the ministry so much the easier; for the pastors find much of their labor done ready to their hand. But in a new country, no such definite character is to be found; every thing is unsettled, and only in the earliest stages of formation. There are no external supports to the ministers of the Gospel, and this forces them to go back to the Apostles for their models. They are to evoke that Christianity from its records in the Bible—they are to apply it to the inchoate but rapidly forming mass, to infuse it into every fabric of society. And in this work, they that preach the Gospel must themselves live upon the Gospel. There are few props and buttresses, very little outside help from established usages. A man must find his courage and strength and enterprise and reward, too, in his own heart;—a heart stored full of those views which made the Apostles, in yet worse circumstances, the happiest men alive.

The Apostles labored in a widely different field from that existing in the West. They entered upon their work among old and grown up nations. They had to break through the broadside of fixed and settled communities. The Gospel was a thorough innovation.

There was an established religion, broad-rooted prejudices, organized interests, civil institutions, the whole current and spirit of the age was against them, and every step was like climbing from crag to crag up the face of a precipitous mountain. It is not so in the West. There every thing is rushing together for a formation. It is like a mountain side after an autumnal rain; ten thousand streams are beginning and seeking paths around every root, and stone, and rock, that they may mingle together, and in yonder place become a river. In the newer states, all is in its weak and rude beginnings. Thus the ministry is not obliged to overtake society, but may take a fair start with it.

It is not the question whether the West shall have the Bible. There is no doubt about that. It must have it, and will. For God will put it there at any rate, first or last. The real question for the Church—and it is the one which the Home Missionary Society puts as its chief and characteristic question—is, whether the Gospel shall begin at the beginning. Shall it enter into western society as an original element? Shall society take its shape, and fashion all its usages, and bathe its whole form in the spirit of Christianity? Who shall build the schools? Under what influence shall a public sentiment be formed? Upon what basis shall civil and social usages rest? To every Christian that prays, "Let thy kingdom come, let thy will be done on earth as in heaven," God silently points to this immense region, with its congeries of states, into which, as into the bosom of a vast lake, are pouring ten thousand streams, each bearing and depositing the soil of the mountain side from which it flowed. Shall the Church be one of the forming and organizing elements of western society? Or shall it be delayed till that society has taken its form and fixed character from other sources, and when it will be necessary to fight at a disadvantage with a settled system? Let it be introduced now.

I propose to consider the work required at the minister's hand in the West, and the character of the ministry required for such a work. In many of the older portions of the West, the representations which I shall make are but partially true, and, generally, the labor to be performed in towns and cities, varies somewhat from that in rural districts, yet not so much as to require a special exception or any thing more than this general allusion.

The work required for the West, above all others, is organization work. Every thing is to be begun. Very little is ready to our hand. Comparatively speaking, the great business of the ministry should be to gather, fashion, and establish churches. I cannot tell how many letters I have received inquiring whether there were any places in Indiana, where a man could settle and be sustained. Taking their ideas of old and settled society in the East, multitudes seem to think that a place in the West means a snug little village shining on the edge of a beautiful prairie, or shaded by a romantic old forest, or looking at itself from the bank of a placid lake. Many men went there who seemed to think that wherever there were a few log cabins to be found, there was also a school and a church, with its Sabbath bell ringing out the weekly invitation to worship, that they should be appointed to labor in some snug little village, some ready fitted bird cage, with $500 or $600 a year salary, a nice parsonage for the wife and the little pledges, where they could go by railroad and steamboat, and have their baggage brought in, with comfortable study where they could write at leisure, and an affectionate people that would flock in on Sunday to listen to their well written sermons. Some parts of the West are so. There are no more such places for such men.

Such places are easily supplied. But there are a hundred points at which there ought to be churches, to one where there is one. How are they to be planted? They will not grow of themselves. They will not come by accident; nor sprout up like a root out of dry ground. If they are to exist, it is to be upon some man's self-denying labor. The only place which a right hearted missionary should seek is a place where there is work enough to be done. From the Alleghanies to the Mississippi, and from the Mississippi to the West—I do not know how far—and from the lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, there is enough to keep the right sort of ministers busy, day and night, as long as they live. The minister must form a church—he must gather a people together.

And what does gathering mean? Who are the people? They have come together from the four quarters of the globe, and every intermediate point of the compass. Here is a Carolinian; his neighbor is from Tennessee; this man came from Maryland, and that from Pennsylvania. There is a group of Kentuckians, and over against them a neighborhood of New Englanders. All came to the West in an adult state, with their local prejudices and social customs—with their education or their ignorance—their enterprise or indolence—their refinement or rudeness. They came to the West to get out of the cramp of a populous state, where land was dear and enterprise crowded and exhausting. For the most part, every man has a head, a pair of hands, and sturdy feet—a sturdy and growing family at his back; and this is his capital. Every man there is pushing for his maintenance first; then for competence, and then for wealth. Here are the materials. Among such a discordant mass brought into juxtaposition, but not yet amalgamated, the minister must live; feel the sympathies of life with them; take no side—be of no sectional interest—live for them, with them, like them, that by any and all means he may bring them to Christ. If he loves his work, it will (after a little time for the mind to adjust itself and digest the novelties) be easy to do it. But if a man follows the ministry, not for its sake, but for his own, let him keep out of the West; at least out of its rural districts. If with such a field one is disgusted and would seek a better—what would he have? The destitution of a people—their need of the Gospel—in other words, the hardness of the field, is the most explicit call to it. A farmer may well abandon granite rocks, and penurious soils, for ampler farms in the fertile bottoms;—but spiritual husbandmen may not.

All these different and discordant materials are thrown in to be moulded together into unity. If a mechanic has brick he can make a good wall, if he has stone he can do it with stone, or with timber or clapboards; but if he had to make his first course of stone, another of brick, another of timber, and a fourth of mortar with nothing in it, what sort of a wall would it be? Yet these materials had all been rolled in there and must be amalgamated. Geologists account for the fertility of the Mississippi valley by proving that its soil has been washed together from the great mountain chains on every side of this vast basin—and the geology of the soil is also the geology of the people. They, too, have been washed together from east, west, north and south. And as this process made the best soil, so, when the heterogeneous mixture of races in the population should be mingled into one by the spirit of the Gospel, the result would be the best cross-breed that the human race could afford. Here, the streets are so well paved you can scarcely wet your feet; the houses are palaces, and abound with all the luxuries of refined life; but if one of your ministers wishes to labor among us he must change his patterns. These learned dignitaries would be very much out of their latitude in our villages. I met brother S. at the Lane Seminary once, and told him that he must come to Noblesville, for it was a soil so hard that nobody could work it, and I wished him to try. He started, and at every house he paid for his meals and lodging, by preaching to them about their soul's salvation. He reached Indianapolis, poor in every thing but faith. There was no public conveyance to Noblesville—I could not borrow him a horse, and had none of my own to lend, so he went a-foot, without knowing or having an introduction to a single soul in the place. He went around ing merchants, farmers, and lawyers, who are engaged in the pursuit of wealth, the peculiar wants of the West cannot be met, at least until the millennium will pass by. Every year gives development to its wants. To those who wish to leave the right impression it is of the last degree of importance, that men who are resolved to grapple with things as they are,

that in such a field a minister must fall back almost wholly on his own resources, if he would sustain his heart and strengthen his hands, faith in the power of the Gospel. If a man were to enter the West, and should sit down to count up the chances of success on a business scale, after estimating the prejudices, the indifference, the jealousy of others, the sweeping tide of worldliness—if he observed those who have tried, how feeble is the light, and how feeble the faith of the few dispersed disciples—he will be discouraged of doing anything. The antecedent probabilities are so small, the scale of measurement, against success in all encounters is so great, against all such, and many more discouragements, the only supportable conviction that Christ is the wisdom of God, and that is the very word—the power of God unto salvation. The only way to do it. The Gospel must be pushed full into the market by men who will not take defeat. The high, calm, and steady soul must be—not victory or death—but victory at any rate to support a missionary ministry. They must find in the community, the sustentation of their faith and courage. Victory of the Gospel can do anything. No reliance must be placed on the community. The minister must cut himself loose from all other help, and rely up to this divine impulse of certain victory; he must plant the Gospel, Lord, I have gone for thee, whole and forever, and whom have I? Nothing can stand that. That is the wisdom of God, and if we had it in the head and in the heart, it would find its way to the hands and mouths. Without it a laborer is good for nothing, a harder thing than all this. He must be willing to sow. When a man sows his grain, he comforts himself with hope; when he plants an acorn, he expects that he and his children will reap; when he sets out an orchard, he anticipates that he shall reap.

endured for Christ, the brightest presages of heroic exaltation with him in heaven? It is nothing to do the foundation work, down beneath the surface, in all its roughness and toilsomeness; it is easy to feel as we progress, "I shall never see the top stone placed, I shall never dwell in the fair halls thereof—I shall die here in the wilderness, and all that I have done shall only make a foundation for some one to stand upon and bring the work up to the sight of men;" for over our heads is Christ, looking down with the sweetest sympathy and most cheering encouragement, and whispering in our ear both by night and day, "I that have suffered for you, will give you the privilege of suffering a little for me." And all around him shines heaven—his heaven, and our heaven—but just a step from us, soon to be inherited; and then who will care for what toil bent him, or what scars marked him?

And by this is suggested another qualification for a missionary ministry—that it be able to endure suffering with all cheerfulness. Some men go out with high, romantic ideas of what a western missionary must be, but fly in surprise from the first pain. Yet hear Christ's words to his apostles: "In this world ye shall have tribulation." The apostle also writes to his disciples; "Count it all joy when ye fall into divers trials," &c. These men declared that they were as the offscouring of the earth, that they died deaths daily, that if in this life only they had hope they were of all men the most miserable; and yet in all the world there is not a book so free from sorrowful expressions, so full of hope, joyous, exulting, overflowing hope. These men escaped from the clutches of tyrants. With the scourge yet stinging on their backs, plowed and furrowed with suffering, they sat down to write epistles, whose striking characteristics are peace, joy, hope, cheerful sweetness of love, and gentle but energetic benevolence. These writings breathe not of the gloom of a prison. No one would dream that their chains clanked while their pens wrote. Such was their faith; while we pigmies, boasting of our descent from the apostles—our apostolic succession—why, one tear, one heart-pang, one year's hardship, sends us dodging back over the Alleghanies, to sneak away into some comfortable village at the East. Not so of the apostles of old. They blessed God that they were counted worthy to suffer for his sake. This was to them a precious proof of his confidence in their faith. It was a privilege not to be thrown away on common Christians. If men think they can start schools and supervise them, build academies and overlook them, raise churches and feed them, bear poverty, reproach, the opposition of the sects, and all without suffering, they are very much mistaken. Is there in this house any young man who has thought of going to the West, and now feels disheartened at what I say? Young man, let me look at your face. You are not the sort of man we want; such men I know there must be. The spirit of Paul is not yet dead. I will not believe, that when the call is made, none can be found rejoicing to go forth and to labor in hardship where it will be indispensable to suffer for Christ's sake. At any rate, let those who go forth count the cost. Nowhere else, methinks, more than in the new settlements of the West, is there more solemn meaning to the words of Christ, "If any man take not his cross daily, he is not worthy of me."

I must mention one peculiar suffering in the missionary's family; men cannot suffer, they do not know what suffering is. It is the missionary's wife on whom the sorrows fall—fall first, fall heaviest. Yet though they are enervated by the unhealthy climate, though deprived of nine out of ten of the comforts of life, yet it is they who inspire courage into their husbands' weaker souls. They are willing gradually to wither away, to sleep on the prairies, and after years of hardship and suffering, lie down until they shall be waked by the last trump—patiently living, patiently dying—and all to hold up their husbands' hands in the work of the sanctuary. Such is the heroism of woman. The missionaries often could not stand, their souls would faint within them, without their wives. When Dr. Grant was last in this country, returning with him from a tour in the West he acknowledged to me, that there was no comparison between the sufferings and hardships the foreign missionary and the home missionary ; that those of the latter were those of the former in the proportion of ten to one.

Let none suppose that a ministerial life, because such, is one of gloom or despondency. I do not believe a happier band of men ever came together than I annually meet in the Indiana Synod. What is their joy ? What their pleasures ? They believe in Christ. They believe in heaven. They labor as they who think it cannot be long until the day star arise, and the day itself awakes. It is their joy to labor ; their meat and drink is to do the will of Christ—to grapple with rugged difficulties, to contest and conquer them ; under their hand bone comes to bone—and then they rejoice. Under their preaching revivals spring forth ; and then they rejoice. From the bosom of revivals churches are born, and then they rejoice. They rejoice to see the wilderness losing its asperity, and every year wearing a brighter face. They rejoice with manly sympathy, in the uprising of a whole community of States—feeling that they have contributed to form and fashion them. It is the joy of men who are taking part in the whole movement of society, who march forward with a whole generation, scattering the blessings of Christ at every step which they take. If this is not joy enough for any man, he has no business in the ministry of Christ.

For such a ministry, God never offered before so ample a field of glorious labor. If there is yet heroism in the human heart, if there is the high impulse of enthusiastic devotion, if there is in any a sympathy in the high endurance and noble self-denial of the Apostle, their ears will tingle and their hearts will burn at the prospect of laboring in such a field ; while the sluggard and timid, quiet-loving disciple only will fall down at the prospect, and hide himself from the great work of the American church, in our day. When a botanist enters our prairies, his heart swells with rapture. Sheet after sheet of new flowers he gathers ; one rolling plain rises above another, and every one furnishes a fresh supply ; so that he feels as if he could never grasp all the treasures thus lavishly poured out before him. So is it with the Christian. What a field is here ! There is no end, nor bound, nor limit but that of human strength. Yet this treasure is not in gold ready stamped, fresh from the mint, and ready for immediate circulation. It is to be found in rich veins of ore, which must be dug up, and smelted, and hammered and fitted to receive the heavenly stamp. Here is as much work as a man's heart can conceive, or his hand can do. It is no sounding work, no flash and show work, no mere surface work ; but hard, real, missionary work—a blessed work, which will find its reward in heaven. God has plainly pointed out this work to you. God has rolled over the burden upon your shoulders, and you must bear it. You must bring up your children with higher ideas of the christian ministry ; you must feed them with gospel food, and in gospel spirit, teach them to live by faith, and not by sight ; for they must not hold their lives dear unto them.

Do not tell me that I set up too high a standard ! It is no higher than the apostolic standard. You have the apostolic standard (that is, the highest) in law, in politics, in commerce, in manufactures, in everything else. In every walk of life are found many who act for earthly good with a thorough, enthusiastic, unswerving consecration of every power. Men are to be found everywhere who, for $2000 a year or less, will brave every danger, will live in the most unhealthy spots, bear the fever and ague, drag out existence around bogs and swamps, do anything and everything. They will go anywhere, bear any hardship, labor and trade day and night, and this only for mammon, for filthy lucre, for self, for pelf. It is a wonderful, but a mean heroism. But, for the cross, and for him that hung thereon, for heaven, for the church, for the souls of dying brethren—if there are no men to be found who, for these, are willing to encounter an unhealthy neighborhood, I could wish the church washed out and cleansed, that the old, apostolic spirit of Christ might return and reanimate her ! But there are such men—there must be ! There is never a need for men in God's cause, but, from somewhere or other, they come !—and they must come from among you.

May God speed that day! When God takes your sons and daughters for such a work as this, a loss like that will make you rich indeed. Methinks I can hear the prayers that a mother breathes over the heads of her sons who have become such ministers; I can hear the blessing that murmurs forth from the fathers' lips as they leave for their harvest field. Oh! I love New-England! No words can tell the yearnings of affection, with which all her sons look back to their native hills. Yet with all the warmth of my love, the best I can wish her is, that she may become the mother of an innumerable army of such ministers as shall faithfully do their Lord's work in the ready, whitened fields of the Great West!

The West.

The Day of Salvation for the West.

ARE the churches of this land aware of what is taking place in the Western portions of our country? Do they consider that a giant is growing up there, who will soon be able, and perhaps disposed, to bind them hand and foot, and work his own will respecting their most precious interests? Let the following facts concerning the growth of numbers and strength in the Western States be deeply pondered.

Increase of Population and Political Influence.

Ohio welcomed the first permanent settlers in 1788; now it is occupied by 1,732,000 people.

Michigan, to which the attention of emigrants was turned twelve or fourteen years ago, now has 300,000 people.

Indiana, admitted into the Union in 1816, has received a population of more than half a million since 1830, and now numbers more than 900,000 inhabitants.

Illinois, was organized a separate territory in 1810, and entered the Union as a state in 1818. From that date, its population trebled every ten years till the last census, and in the last five years, has risen from 475,000 to 700,000.

Missouri, which in 1810 had only 20,800 people, now has 600,000, having increased fifty per cent. in six years.

Iowa was scarcely heard of at the East ten years ago, and it is but fifteen since the only white inhabitants north of the Missouri line were a few Indian traders. More than 100,000 now make that beautiful land their home; 60,000 of whom have gone in during the last four years.

Wisconsin was organized eleven years ago; the marshals have just taken the census, and, from present appearances, the population can vary but little from 150,000, being an increase of one hundred thousand in five years. One portion of the territory, 33 miles by 30, which, ten years ago, was an unbroken wilderness, now numbers 37,000 inhabitants; and the emigration to that portion of the West is greater than ever.

As a consequence of this transfer of population, there is a steady but rapid transfer of POLITICAL INFLUENCE. In ten years, from 1830 to 1840, the East lost, by the change of the ratio of representation, 31 members in Congress, more than it gained by the increase of population; while in the same period, the West gained by increase of population, 11 members more than it lost by the change of ratio—making a difference of forty-two votes. The seven new states and territories above enumerated—to say nothing of the other western and south-western states and Texas—have increased, since the last adjustment of the ratio, more than a million and a half—enough to entitle them to 16 more members in our national legislature. How this augmentation of western influence is likely to effect our national welfare, may be judged from the bearing which the votes of the West have recently had on measures which have filled our country with excitement, have plunged us into a war with one nation, and nearly embroiled us with another, the most powerful in the world.

What follows.

The inference from these facts is obvious. Whatever is done for the West by eastern philanthropy must be done speedily. We have no prospect of any time in the future, when another such opportunity will be allowed us. There can never again be such a relative position of the friends of Christ to such a field. "An anomaly in the world's history is now transpiring among us—this rush in the tide of emigration toward the unsettled parts of our country. It is as if nature had found a vast vacuum somewhere in her dominions, which ocean, earth, and air were struggling to fill. The past has seen nothing like it; nor will the future, unless another continent be discovered, with another "Valley of the Mississippi" to be peopled. Once for all, in the course of time, this spectacle is exhibited. And of all the generations of men, to us "it is given, in the behalf of Christ," to act the part which such an emergency demands. It may be, that this strange phenomenon will continue through another quarter of a century; but it cannot be longer than that, before there will be a general occupancy of the present unoccupied tracts—at least, of those parts that furnish any special inducement to immigration. And while this period is passing, new communities, almost without number, as if by enchantment are springing up, whose moral and religious destiny is also receiving shape as suddenly. These circumstances create a necessity for faith and fortitude and vigorous action on our part, such as did not press upon our fathers; such as will not come upon our children. The last generation were too early, the next will be too late, to meet this exigency. With every call for help that comes to us from these infant communities, there seems to be blended the voice of God's providence and Spirit saying, "Behold now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation."

Capabilities of the West.

We have all heard, again and again, of its vast extent. After crossing the great river which divides it into eastern and western sections, you may trace one stream, the Missouri, from its source along a most beautiful and fertile valley, for three thousand miles, and when it mingles its turbid waters with the clear, crystal wave of the Mississippi, it is more than twelve hundred miles, by the channel it travels, from the ocean. Take the States and Territories this side of the Mississippi river, and north of the Ohio, and they may hereafter sustain, if as populous as Europe, nearly thirty millions of people; and if as populous as China,—and there is no reason why they may not be—forty millions. And this is less than one quarter of the valley. The whole area of it may be set down at one million one hundred thousand square miles; and with the population of China upon each square mile, we shall have one hundred and sixty-five millions of immortal beings growing up for eternity. Nor are we to forget that the country is as rich in resources, as it is broad and boundless. Never did mortal eye rest in silent rapture upon a finer soil, or upon more luxuriant productions. And the treasures that lie buried beneath the surface, are as productive and valuable as those which are above it. The lead and copper mines are among the best in the world. Iron and other useful metals abound. Building materials for cottages or palaces, possessing the properties both of beauty and durability are not wanting. In one word, every thing necessary for converting the wilderness into smiling harvest fields, and joyous and exulting cities, nature has furnished in abundance. God, too, who made this land of wealth and beauty, has opened the best channels of commerce, by their own waters among themselves, and, by their easy access to the ocean, unto the ends of the world. Their products may reach every clime.

Let a man who has his home, either by birth or emigration, in this great valley, stand upon some high bluff which overhangs the mighty "Father of Waters," and survey the extended, wide-spread and magnificent scene which surrounds him, and other parts of the globe will seem to lessen in his view. New England lies ensconced in a nutshell. The Atlantic slope is but the fringe upon the mantle of beauty which covers this fertile land. Let him send his thoughts up this picturesque stream, dotted with its thousand green islands, till it reaches, in the distant North, the gushing springs from which it issues,—or let him trace the same stream as it becomes deeper, and broader, and more majestic, on its way to the ocean; and you have a single water-course, in its meanderings, of three thousand miles in length! On the West, his country, as defined by nature, extends to the Rocky Mountains, and on the East to the summit of the Alleghanies; and these everlasting chains which bind a continent together are thousands of miles apart. Here is room for another Assyrian Empire, or for a second Roman.

It must have Help.

Here is spread out before us an embryo world, and that world is to be peopled by a race of giants; but whether they will be giant-angels or giant-demons, must depend on the beneficence of Eastern Churches and the grace of God. If left to themselves, the country is ruined. They have not, within themselves, the available resources of intellectual and moral self-preservation. Their means, even if they were disposed to apply them, are not adequate; and the will is often wanting where the ability is not. Without foreign aid, their population in its rapid increase, must soon fall under the influence of incurable ignorance, or receive its training from those whose principles and policy are adverse to our religious and political institutions. If Christians sleep on, as they have been sleeping, Roman barbarism will have that valley. There is danger, and the sooner the note of alarm is sounded, the better. If this note receives a proper response, the work, though difficult, can be done, and the destinies of this immense valley, for ages, perhaps till the Millennium and the end of the world, will be settled, as upon a solid and eternal rock.

We lose all if we lose the West.

There is already the home, and there will be the sepulchres of many of your brethren and sisters and children. They have gone out from our eastern fire-sides and schools—colleges and churches; and there they are to live, and leave their intellectual and moral impress upon the world, and die. And from that land, after having fulfilled an honorable earthly destiny, we would wish to see them take their glad some flight to Heaven. They will there leave their children, and their children's children, to stand up and bless or scourge that land, long after they and we are dead. To take care of them, is only to take care of a branch of our own family. To stand by their interests, social, intellectual and religious, is to protect the national brotherhood. The principle stated by Paul in his epistle to Timothy, is fairly applicable in this case. "If any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel."

The West will rule.

In a few years the rod of empire will be held and swayed in that valley. The people who shall be spread over those broad prairies, and settled along those large rivers, and cover the shores, and do business on the bosoms of those inland seas, will govern this country. Their numerical power, though but of yesterday, is already immense. On many questions of deep political interest, the West, at this day, holds the balance of power. It has already given us Texas and the Mexican war, whatever of good or evil there may be in them, and it had well nigh, at one time, opened the sluices of death upon us from another quarter.

If the people of that valley are to govern this whole land, with all its growing and almost boundless resources, then they should be educated for their post of honor and trust. And they cannot do this needful work for themselves. Every thing is too new for it. The wealth of the country is prospective and not yet available. Every thing is unripe and immature; and such an enterprise cannot be entered upon, with the hope of success in their present circumstances. They have not the men nor the means for it. But give the people time, to build their own houses, to turn over the soil of their prairies, which have been aggregating vegetable mould for ages; and to let into the dark forest, by the hard blows of the axeman, the sunlight of heaven upon their harvest-fields,—and then they will be able to found and sustain their own institutions, and leave us to do the same work, in its incipient stages, for a further and a still further West. And they too will join in this onward triumph of Christianity and letters.

Here and there; or, the Difference between the East and the West.

Here is the sanctuary, where we have been accustomed to worship from childhood. Here is the Sabbath bell, reminding us of the return of the day of rest. Here are our fathers' sepulchres, faithful, though silent mementoes of the value of the principles which they held, and of the worth of religion in life and in death. Here is the school house, a reminder of the lessons learned in our earliest years. Here is a well formed, vigorous, decided public sentiment, from which it is always difficult and perilous for a man to break away. A demagogue, a propagator of error, a rejector of religion here, must begin his work by a covert or open attack on these associations; he must weaken their power over the soul; he has a long work to do to detach the mind from its fastenings, before he can move it according to his will. But, in a new region, he finds all this, to a great extent, done to his hand. There is no ancient sanctuary, or Sabbath bell, or sepulchre of the dead, or school house, or established public sentiment, that can hinder his purposes; and his work begins at a point, to reach which elsewhere might cost the labors of his life.

Impolicy of too great diffusion of population.

It is in many respects beneficial for the interests of our nation and the world, that a large emigration to the new states should have taken place—that a field of such unparalleled attraction should be pre-occupied mainly by the diffusion of our own population, before the influx of foreigners could forestall us in the West. Still, christian philanthropy will ask, if there be not danger of carrying the policy of emigration too far—whether we have not already reached such a limit in the expansion of our elements of civilization, that a continuation of the process must weaken, if not destroy them.

No one, who has kept up an acquaintance with the enlargement of our home fields, will doubt that already the American churches have as much on their hands as they can accomplish for many years, if they would retain the ascendancy for spiritual Christianity in the portions of the United States already thrown open for settlers. Of the whole 1,300,000 square miles organized into states and territories of the Union, exclusive of Texas and Oregon, only one fourth lies east of the Alleghany mountains, while of the population, nearly or quite one half, live on the west of the same range. The great instrumentalities by which the people of the West are to be educated and saved, must, for a long time, come principally from the East, and be sustained by eastern funds. Take these away, and every form of philanthropic effort beyond the mountains must languish, if it be not entirely destroyed. The East has then to keep up and improve its own institutions, and save its own people, and also to perform a parental part for the salvation of ten millions of the West, scattered over three times as great a space as the same number occupy on this side of the Alleghenies, and who consequently can be reached only by nearly three times as great an expenditure of pecuniary resources and mental and physical labor.

The Pilgrims vs. the Spaniards.

"The territory of the United States is said to amount to about one-tenth, or at the utmost, to one-eighth of that colonized by Spain on the American continent. Yet in all the vast region conquered by Cortes and Pizarro, there are considerably less than two millions of people of European blood, so that they scarcely exceed in number the population acquired in about half a century in Ohio, and fall far short of it in wealth and civilization."

[Lyell's Travels in N. America.

What an illustration do these facts afford of the comparative value of Protestantism and Romanism, as elements of civilization!

What they say in Europe.

The full peopling of the Mississippi valley, an event not very far distant, will constitute, perhaps, the most important passage in the social history of man. Civilization commenced in the nooks and corners of the earth; where seas, mountains, deserts, afforded shelter to communities struggling for growth against the bleak winds of surrounding barbarism. Egypt, Phœnicia, Greece, the islands and coasts of Italy, were thus, one by one, placed at the head of the movement in the eastern world; each, as it were, a separate spot of firm ground, the dwelling of intellect, of science, of law and order, amidst the wild chaos of the yet void and formless continents. Slowly and timidly did civilization relinquish these fortresses, and spread over the neighboring plains. And even in the latest periods of history, Venice needed her lagoons, Holland her dykes, England her ocean, to secure the growth of those principles of government, industry and freedom, of which they have been appointed nurseries. And hence, it grew up as a fixed opinion among politicians, first, that free institutions could only flourish in countries of a limited extent and population; secondly, that the energy and action, even in despotic governments, were weakened by extensive dominion. The present century, so fertile in new circumstances and new ideas, has developed new principles of human society in this respect also, and the politicians of our generation must prepare to go to a school in which the maxims of Machiavel and Montesquieu must be to a certain extent obsolete, like those of Plato and Aristotle. We must accustom ourselves to the contemplation of space and numbers as the greatest future elements of political greatness. With war reduced to an art of rapid and decisive results; with the internal communications of peace so multiplied and improved, that the same social relations will subsist between kingdoms as now subsist between provinces of the same kingdom, while provinces become as parishes; no civilized nation can long keep its knowledge, its habits, its industry, its very spirit to itself; all will be sections of a great whole, between which relative sizes and population will form the principal distinctions. Nor will there be any practical limits to the extension of Empire. Steam will render the action of government on all parts of the political body, in ordinary times, immediate and certain; and thus secure centralization and unity. Steam will render the action of the people on the government, in great emergencies, irresistible; and thus secure freedom, if the people are true to themselves. Let us remember, that with a little increase of our present mechanical facilities, thought might be transmitted from one extremity to the other of a state as large as the old Roman empire in a few minutes, and troops despatched in a very few days; and it will be seen at once how absurd would be the application of political ideas formed in the infancy of society, to this its stage of new and portentous advance. These are not, perhaps, very attractive speculations; they disturb old and favorite associations; they seem to reduce many cherished traditions, much painfully acquired knowledge, to obsolete lore; but these things are so, and we must accustom ourselves to regard them and their consequences without shrinking. If the Americans preserve that tenacious spirit of unity which has hitherto so singularly characterized them in all their career of aggression, occupation and annexation, it is impossible to over-estimate the greatness of their future.—Edinburgh Review.

Learn from the enemy.

Let us learn a lesson from our opponents. During the year 1844 the Leopold Foundation gave for the advancement of Popery in Iowa, nearly $3,000, a sum nearly twice as great as was appropriated to the diocese of Maryland, and to others five-fold more populous than Iowa. Why is tenfold more given to Iowa, in proportion to its population, than to Maryland? Plainly because the importance of speedily occupying the former. The bishop appears to have at his command all the funds which his plans require. Valuable lots are purchased and churches built in our river towns, whether there are Catholics to occupy them or not. A building large enough to sustain a cross is erected as a landmark for the Catholic emigrant, and to accustom the people to their senseless ceremonies. Churches worth $3,000 or more are built, seemingly without effort, where there are no Catholics possessed of means to do it. While Protestants, with the utmost difficulty, can erect houses worth as many hundreds. It is reported that the bishop intends building churches at all our county seats. He is erecting school-houses and establishing schools for both sexes, where instruction is given free of charge, or nearly so, at our most important towns. Many Protestant children are drawn into them, and from them, into the Catholic Sunday schools; and then into their church.

The People will have Preaching.

I was recently invited by a minister of another denomination to assist him in a "big meeting," (in western parlance,) which was truly such. Long before the hour arrived, the house was crowded to overflowing, so that it was thought best to meet in the grove near by, and when the hour for preaching arrived, there were from five to six hundred people present. I never addressed a more quiet and attentive congregation. It was a beautiful day, and the sun shone clear and bright, but not a ray could penetrate the thick foliage which mantled the immense trees that surrounded us. And while I looked upon the attentive audience, with the full conviction that the most of them were as uncultivated as the wild forest-trees that overshadowed them, so far as religious training was concerned, notwithstanding they have had preaching of some kind ever since the first settlement of the country, I was forced to the conclusion, that if this moral wilderness ever "buds and blossoms as the rose," it must be by the blessing of the Great Head of the Church on the agency of your Society.

At the close of the meeting several came up and invited me to make appointments in their different neighborhoods, which I promised to do soon. I give the above statement to show that the people will attend preaching of some kind, and if they don't have the truth preached they will imbibe error, for preaching they will have, of some kind. If I had six Sabbaths instead of one, I could fill them all to advantage. This field is fast opening.

A Word to Eastern Christians.

Since I came to the West, I have learned the power of early impressions as I had not before. These new countries, are settled by immigrants from the older states. There their characters were formed—there they received their first impressions. Did they come under Universalist, Unitarian or Infidel principles? Whatever were their first impressions, like seed in a productive soil, they spring up here. One of my congregations is made up of seven different denominations; so powerful were their first impressions, that it is not possible ever to unite them in one church. They are united in me and will do something for my support, but they are "Associate Reformed," and cling to "David's Psalms"—Episcopalians, and hold on to the prayer book—Lutherans, &c. In this connection I feel like speaking to every parent and Sabbath school teacher in the older States, that they educate the young mind of every boy or girl, as if they knew that he or she was to be the nucleus of a church in the West. There is a lady who lives not far from this place, who exerts a greater influence in a church than either of its elders. She was one of its first members. Who was her teacher in New England? There is a man who lives out in the woods who originated on Plymouth Rock, and you might know it from what he has done. A few such men and women would make the "wilderness rejoice, and the desert bud and blossom as the rose." The ministers' Sabbath school classes and the parents of New England can furnish them.

Prejudice and Misrepresentation.

There is a preacher in this circuit whose very meat and drink is to denounce other denominations, although he pretends to be very friendly. He is quite a smart man, and is preparing a work for the press—yet he despises books, one would think from his preaching. He makes assertions about the East of which he knows nothing, and all to prejudice the people against me. My library is a great bug-bear. I preach written sermons a part of the time, and they are preferred by a good part of the intelligent; yet this man sets up his way as the only way under heaven that does any good.

This section has been overrun by a kind of preachers who are greatly skilled in ignorance, and turning it to the best account they can by raising a "hue and cry" against educated ministers who wear "long-tailed black coats," "preach for money," &c. Their influence has been most deleterious, and will not cease to be felt during the present generation.

Questions of science, falsely so called.

For a few months past we have had every thing to discourage us in the hope of a revival. We looked for one, we prayed for one. But the so-called "Scientific Lecturer" comes along, exhibiting the multitude and the greatness of his wonders, and then if we hope, it is "against hope." A number of these famous characters have been "displaying" in our village and community, as though it was their privilege to scatter blight and mildew wherever they chose. Irresponsible, itinerating lecturers are among the worst curses which infest our western communities. Besides diverting the attention from more serious things, principles of science imperfectly understood, more imperfectly explained, and falsely applied, are made to pander to the grossest forms of immorality and infidelity.

Vices which eat up the health and peace of neighborhoods, which inflame the passions and poison the virtues of the young, which lay the foundations for broils, and revels, and crimes, are here introduced as though nature had assigned for them the West as a general asylum. Nor is the indigent, ignorant, infidel, itinerating, irresponsible lecturer in the rear rank of vicious influences which we have met. But our communities here will soon, I trust, learn wisdom. It will soon be understood, I hope, that Mesmerism and Phrenology do not, in all respects, comprise the chief good of man.

Another obstacle to the success of stated preaching of the Gospel in this region, is that state of things resulting from big meetings, as they are here called. The Methodists and Baptists in the country have revivals, only when they "get up a big meeting;" and the same has been true of this church. Hence, it is the impression of many Christians, and others, that not much good can be accomplished without a big meeting. I am yet to be convinced that such meetings are, on the whole, profitable, where the stated preaching of the Gospel is enjoyed.

Influences operating upon Western Society.

A missionary writes—

I wish to tell you of the attractions presented here to our little world, last evening.—At the court-house, many were charmed with the syren voice of destructive error; at the school-house a "professor" pretending to have come from the Edinburgh school of Combe, excited the wonderment of people by his achievements in Animal Magnetism and his acquirements in the mystical art of Mathematical Phrenology. At the principal tavern, a company of thoughtless souls, forming a cotillion party, "chased the glowing hours with flying feet;" while in a retired apartment about 18 or 20 of God's children met to supplicate a descent of the Divine Spirit upon us. Although there was not among us that deep self-abasement, and humble contriteness of soul, that gave the truest indications of a revived state of feeling, yet there was an interest manifested and a spirit of prayer exercised, unusual for this people. I do sincerely hope and pray that this little spark may blaze up and spread over this community, like the fire over our vast prairie solitudes.

Proselyting.

The great object appears to be to get members. Any person that will give the hand and name, is taken in on trial for six months, and has a right to all the privileges of the church, without being baptized, or even indulging a hope of being a Christian. Of course a great many go back, and often are seven fold worse than they were before. This is one of the many difficulties with which we have to contend. My only hope in this matter is that the Lord reigns, and he loves the Church and the souls of men infinitely better than I do, and will make the wrath of man to praise him and restrain the remainder. His sheep know his voice and follow him, but will flee from strangers, for they know not the voice of strangers. The Lord's name be praised.

Too long neglected.

The village of H., though small, is growing, and I think will yet become a place of some importance. Its situation is favorable, in the centre of the county, with good water privileges, and a good soil around it. But the field has been too long neglected. The church has been asleep while the enemy has been sowing the tares. The inhabitants here, not having stated worship on the Sabbath, have become habituated to a neglect of the means of grace—to visiting, hunting, &c., on that day. Professors of religion have, in some cases, given up their profession and returned to the world, and are now as irreligious as others. I have often heard of the moral desolations of the West, and of backsliding professors there; now I see them, until my eyes are pained and my heart weeps at the sight.

I am glad I am here.

I am glad I am here. If no abler and better man stood ready to occupy this place, I am glad that I have come. I only regret that I came not sooner. May the Lord bless my labors.

In other parts of the county I have had calls to preach, and intend to do so on week day evenings. These scattered sheep in the wilderness should not be neglected. Though they are poor, and struggling hard at present to pay for their farms, and put up houses, &c., yet the Gospel should be sent to them. I rejoice in the prosperity of your Society. To appreciate fully its worth, a man must come to the West. I would that our brethren at the East could but see the West, in its present condition; I am sure they would bless God for the Home Missionary enterprise, and engage in its support with redoubled zeal.

Who are the adversaries?

As I have passed from cabin to cabin, I have learned who are most to be feared—not the infidel or sceptic, as such, but the professed minister without a Bible. It has been my custom to call at every house within my field. In one of my excursions, I found a preacher who had not even a Bible. For a library, he had only a piece of one, and that very old. He has a large family, works six days in a week on his farm, and preaches regularly on the Sabbath to people who, until I visited them, were also destitute of the Bible. Such men I fear more than the avowed infidel. Principles in western mind, are like seed in its productive soil. He teaches the people that ministers need not study, and need no support. He breaks up the distinction between the church and the world. I fear him and all like him. I offered a book to a minister of another order, the other day, and recommended it as useful; “but,” said he, “I can find no time to read; my business is to preach.”

Review of the first year in a new Country.

We came to the West with the expectation of suffering want. But we have thus far been happily disappointed. We live among a people generally poor, but we have been comfortably clothed and fed. Although my little church are as kind as they can be; yet it is through your assistance that I can say I “owe no man.” Whenever I mount my horse, enter my hired house, sit by my stove or table, lie down or rise up from my bed, I am reminded of your Society. As a parent it has “set me out in life.” I must say, we cannot express the gratitude which we feel that we are made so comfortable in the forest. Amid our many discouragements, we cannot but be cheerful and happy. I feel nerved to labor on, and with increased resolution, in entering upon my second year.

Changes for the better.

Previous to my coming here there had been no regular preaching in the place, and with the exceptions of brothers C. and J., your missionaries, who held a protracted meeting last winter, I am the only Presbyterian that has preached here. Formerly, Sabbaths were spent in visiting, drinking, hunting and horse racing, &c., &c. A Sabbath school had never been in existence here, and week day schools had been kept for only one or two quarters, and those of a very inferior grade. Now we have a quiet Sabbath, with very little drinking on that day, and the majority of the people are regular in their attendance on religious worship.

Grateful testimony in behalf of Home Missions.

The following voluntary expression of the writer's sense of the value of Home Missionary efforts, is from one among the first missionaries in Illinois.

When the history of the church in Illinois shall be faithfully written, it will be seen that many a poor minister of Christ has not only been greatly cheered, but supported in his labors, and many a soul has been born again, and many a church gathered, and many a community improved, elevated, refined and reformed, by the contributions of the pious and the benevolent on the other side of the mountains. When I call to mind what I have seen and felt of the destitutions of young Illinois—infant I ought to say—and compare that early period with the present; and when I connect with this the fact that the A. H. M. S. has been the chief agent under God in effecting this change, the whole process of which, from first to the present, has passed under my own eye, I cannot but pray the Lord to bless a thousand fold that glorious Society. And may He bless it! I use no Oriental hyperbole when I say to it, “May you live a thousand years!”—unless, indeed, the work shall be done up sooner. But let the churches know, that without such agency, the Valley—the nation—cannot be saved.

A Missionary's estimate of his position.

In laboring here, while looking at the field itself, my motto is, “Despise not the day of small things.” While looking at the relations of my field to the territory, and the relations of the territory to the country and the world, my feeling is, “Here is the place for me to act.” Others are indeed in higher and more responsible stations, doing, I hope, vastly more good. But yet I love to look to the relations I hold, and to think that perhaps I can send out from this far distant little spot along the line of those relations, influences that shall never end. As the vapors of heaven, wafted to us, from the ocean on every breeze, are here condensed, showered upon us and carried back again by the Father of Waters to their original source—thus enriching our soil and purifying the atmosphere—so can we, standing here where we are the objects of your aid, your sympathies and your prayers, if God prosper us, be almoners of yours, to communicate that which after enriching ourselves shall roll back its blessings upon you, and, with you, bless the world.

TWENTY SECOND ANNIVERSARY.

THE AMERICAN HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY held its Twenty Second Anniversary in the Broadway Tabernacle, New York, on Wednesday evening, May 10th, 1848. In the absence of the President, the HON. BENJAMIN F. BUTLER, LL. D., Vice President, was called to the chair, and the meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. JUSTIN EDWARDS, D. D., of Andover, Mass.

The Treasurer's Report was read by Mr. JASPER CORNING, Treasurer of the Society.

An abstract of the Annual Report of the Executive Committee was presented by Rev. MILTON BADGER, D. D., one of the Secretaries.

On motion of Rev. LEONARD BACON, D. D., of New Haven, Ct., seconded by Rev. Benjamin P. STONE, of Concord, N. H., these Reports were adopted and ordered to be published.

The following resolutions were also adopted :

On motion of Rev. WILLIAM T. DWIGHT, D. D., of Portland, seconded by Rev. SAMUEL S. SCHMUCKER, D. D., of Gettysburgh, Pa.,

Resolved, That the magnitude of the enterprise in which the Society is engaged, and our anticipations of complete ultimate success, should urge its friends to increased efforts on its behalf.

On motion of JOHN THOMPSON, Esq., of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., seconded by Rev. ALEXANDER KING, of Dublin, Ireland,

Resolved, That the thorough evangelization of the masses of the people is the only guaranty of representative democracy.

In support of these resolutions, appropriate and highly interesting addresses were made by Rev. Drs. BACON and DWIGHT, Mr. THOMPSON and Rev. Mr. KING, setting forth impressive the mission of the Christians of the United States to secure the evangelization of the increasing and spreading population of this country ; and urging this duty by motives drawn from the indispensableness of christian virtue to our republican institutions, as well as from our obligations to other lands, who may derive sympathy and assistance from us in their efforts to obtain the blessings of religious freedom.

The meeting was interested and enlivened by musical exercises, by the choir of the Tabernacle, under the direction of Mr. GEORGE ANDREWS.

The Benediction was pronounced by Rev. THOMAS H. SKINNER, D. D., of New York, after which the Society proceeded to elect officers for the ensuing year.

THE yearly progress of this Benevolent Institution is noted by the departure of its friends, even more impressively than by the augmentation of its results. The stone which we set up, at the end of each annual stage, is not only an Ebenezer, to show that "hitherto the Lord hath helped us," but it is also a monument, inscribed with precious names and obituary tributes to those who accompany us no farther. Thus, the voice which, at the last anniversary, began the exercises, by invoking the blessing of Heaven; and that which closed them, with an appeal for greater zeal and consecration, are forever silent to mortal ears. A Vice President of the Society, Rev. JOHN CODMAN, D. D., an early and earnest advocate for the establishment of this National Home Missionary Board; its intelligent and efficient supporter—long tried in personal labors, wise counsels and generous gifts—since the last meeting has left the scene of earthly toil for that of eternal reward. His neighbor and friend, Hon. SAMUEL HUBBARD, LL. D.,—also a Vice President of the Society—who had long been joined with him in philanthropic labors, was not in death divided from him. Rev. ASA T. HOPKINS, D. D., who addressed the Society at its last meeting, and WALTER HUBBELL, Esq.,—both highly valued members of the Western Agency for Home Missions in the State of New York—have suddenly been called away from eminent public usefulness and the warm regards of personal friends. Besides these, the Society mourns one of its most active and devoted Agents, Rev. ABIJAH CRANE, of the Central Agency, N. Y., and no less than eight of its missionaries, who have died within the last year.

But although its human promoters are thus, in rapid succession, passing away to higher spheres of service, the GREAT PATRON of the Society ever lives, to raise up for it new advocates and agents, and to crown it with new trophies of success. The resources and results of the year now closed, the number and spirit of the missionaries, and the divine approval which is sealed their labors, are leading features in our annual narrative, that almost cause us to forget the scenes of bereavement and trial through which the Committee have been called to pass, in the joy which we feel for deliverance, and for an increased amount of accomplished good.

The details of the Society's operations are embraced in the following

SUMMARY OF RESULTS.

The number of ministers of the Gospel, whose names are found in the preceding table—together with those engaged in superintending the missionary work, and who are mentioned hereafter in connexion with the respective Auxiliary Boards and Agencies—has been, the last year, 1,006.

Of these, 801 were in commission at the date of the last Report, and 205 have been since appointed.

They have labored in 27 states and territories, as follows : In Maine, 91 ; New Hampshire, 46 ; Vermont, 45 ; Massachusetts, 62 ; Rhode Island, 10 ; Connecticut, 41 ; New York, 187 ; New Jersey, 4 ; Pennsylvania, 45 ; Delaware, 1 ; Maryland, 3 ; Virginia, 5 ; District of Columbia, 2 ; North Carolina, 1 ; Georgia, 3 ; Alabama, 1 ; Tennessee, 7 ; Kentucky, 9 ; Ohio, 102 ; Indiana, 52 ; Illinois, 101 ; Michigan, 80 ; Missouri, 21 ; Wisconsin, 49 ; Iowa, 35 ; Texas, 1 ; under appointment for Oregon, 2—of whom one sailed in October last, by way of the Sandwich Islands.

Of the whole number in commission, 663 have been the pastors or stated supplies of single congregations ; while 343 have ministered to two or three congregations each, or have extended their labors over still wider fields.

The aggregate of labor performed is equal to 773 years.

The number of congregations and missionary districts supplied, in whole or in part, at stated intervals, with the preaching of the Gospel, is 1,447 ; while many others have shared in the occasional labors of the missionaries.

The instruction of children and youth in Sabbath schools and Bible classes, has been introduced into many new fields during the year past, and is now regularly maintained, in most of the districts visited by the missionaries, under their general supervision. In many instances, from three to six schools are taught in the various neighborhoods attached to a single church. In each succeeding year, a smaller proportion of them is suspended during the winter. Nearly all are furnished with libraries ; and in this respect important co-operation is derived from the East, particularly from the Massachusetts Sabbath School Society and the American Sunday School Union. The number of pupils connected with these schools cannot be less than 77,000.

The effort, which was noticed in the last report, for reviving the cause of Temperance under the sanction of religion—from which it had suffered a most unnatural divorce—is still prosecuted all over the missionary field. While in some sections, a re-action has been feared from the inefficacy of the legal enactments resorted to, the general interests of Temperance have advanced; and, what is particularly gratifying, the progress has been most manifest in some frontier districts. Thus, in Wisconsin, Iowa and Western Missouri, greater success has attended this cause than in many older sections of the missionary field. From the fact, that the organizations for this object are often formed in connexion with other denominations, and are not bounded by congregational limits, it is difficult to state with accuracy the number of subscribers to “the pledge” who properly belong to the congregations connected with this Society; but from the reports received, we are warranted in stating the aggregate as not less than 99,000, in the communities where the missionaries labor.

The amount contributed to benevolent objects by 668 congregations—the number from whom reports have been received—is $19,720. The Auxiliaries and Agencies of the Society bear testimony to the increasing readiness of the beneficiary churches to welcome the appeals of institutions for the spread of the Gospel over the earth, and to the almost universal observance among them of the Monthly Concert of Prayer for this object.

The missionaries of the Society have taken a deep interest and engaged personally in the circulation of the Bible in the respective communities where they labor. In most instances, this has been done in connection with local Bible societies, formed or nourished by their efforts. In two cases, grants have been made to them directly by the American Bible Society, to the amount of 373 Bibles and 491 Testaments, equal in value to $250 60.

From the American Tract Society, the usual grants of tracts to missionaries, for distribution in their personal labors, have been received, to the amount of 676,710 pages, valued at $437 81.

As nearly as can be ascertained, the number of persons added to the churches, in connection with missionary labor, the year past, has been 5,020, viz: by profession of their faith, 2,530; by letters from other churches, 2,490. But these numbers, though larger, by upwards of 600, than the sum of the corresponding returns in the last Report, do not afford an adequate measure of the spiritual prosperity with which God has favored the missions.

of the Society, More evident tokens of the Spirit's presence have been enjoyed by the churches, during the period now under review, than in any of the five years immediately preceding. No less than 96 congregations have been visited with seasons of special revival, some of them of great interest and power, and numbering, as the results, from 8 to 60 subjects each—and in one case, 90 are supposed to have passed from death unto life. The whole number of hopeful conversions reported is 2,521 ; while, in several cases, the numbers have not been mentioned ; and in many, the good work is said to be still in progress. These displays of divine power and mercy have been most signal at some rapidly growing frontier points, and in circumstances where the interposition was needed to give a timely direction to the spirit and aim of society. The revivals have saved not only the individual souls who have been converted in them, but in several instances, they have saved, we trust, the communities where they have been enjoyed, from the reign of infidelity and vice. The characteristics of these seasons have been remarkably similar, though in districts widely separated. Stillness, solemnity and order, have prevailed ; and in a large majority of instances, the awakenings have occurred in connection with the stated labors of the missionaries, assisted only, when help was required, by ministers in the neighborhood. The collateral and remote effects of these heavenly visitations, as well as the immediate benefits, surpass all human power of estimation. What joy has been carried into many a soul and many a household on the earth, as well as into the mansions of the redeemed on high ! What a moral revolution has been accomplished, when the depraved heart and the iron will, entrenched in the sophistries of scepticism, have been made to surrender to the constraining love of Christ ! What transformations of character in individuals, in families, in neighborhoods, when prayer and praise have taken the place of cursing and bitterness ; and when those who had been enemies, have set down lovingly together at the same communion table ! What benefactor of the Society, in view of such blessings, bestowed in connection with his offering, does not wish that it had been manifold greater ? Who will not make a covenant with God and his own soul, that hereafter his gifts and his prayers for this precious cause shall be more in proportion to its intrinsic magnitude, and its obvious necessity in this day of wonders ? The Committee deem it due to the honor of the Divine Spirit, to offer and to record their thanksgiving for these blessings of his grace ; and especially, that they have been bestowed on the more destitute portions of the field ; and at a time when the country is stirred by the confused noise of the battle and the warrior, and by the excitement of an approaching political campaign ; and when our countrymen, both within and without the Church, seemed to be borne away on the tide of worldliness and folly.

THE TREASURY.

Resources.—The balance in the Treasury, April 1st, 1847, was $282 79. The receipts of the succeeding twelve months have been $140,197 10—making the aggregate of resources $140,479 89.

Liabilities.—There was due to missionaries at the date of the last Report, the sum of $13,728 80. There has since become due the farther sum of $135,039 50—making the total of liabilities, $148,768 30.

Payments.—Of this last amount, $139,233 34 have been paid. There is still due to the missionaries for labor performed, $9,535 06; and their request for payments are daily coming to hand. Towards cancelling these claims, and redeeming other pledges already made, in commissions which have not yet expired—amounting in all to $52,652 52—the balance in the Treasury is $1,246 55.

COMPARISON WITH THE PRECEDING YEAR.

The particulars which have been noticed, when collated with the results of former years, show that PROGRESS is still the characteristic feature in the history of the Society, as it is of the country which it seeks to bless. The number of missionaries is 34 greater than in any former year; and of this increase, 28 are in the western states. The aggregate of labor performed is 60 years more than has ever been reported before. The churches have been strengthened by the addition of 620 persons more than in the year preceding; besides the fruits of the recent revivals, which are yet, for the most part, to be gathered in. There has also been an increase of some 5,000 Sabbath scholars, and of 2,000 members of temperance societies. Many of the congregations have been so strengthened that they will require no farther aid. Besides the slow, but still progressive efforts of others to relieve the Society from the burden of their support, they have cast into the treasury of the Lord, for various objects, $3,450 more than last year. It will be seen also, by an inspection of the Table of Missionaries, &c., that a large number of houses of worship have been completed, and many others begun or repaired; and that it is becoming more and more a matter of conscience and of praiseworthy ambition, among the western churches, to accomplish such enterprises without relying on foreign aid.

In respect to its financial interests, also, a merciful Providence has watched over this Institution. For nearly half of the year, a severe pressure on the Treasury retarded the payment of the missionaries in commission, and embarrassed the appointment of others. And yet, without a resort to any special efforts or appeals to the public sympathy, the blessing of God on the ordinary means of raising income, has brought in $23,479 16 more than the receipts for the period (not a full year) covered by the last Report; and $15,072 40 more than the income of any previous year.

These points of comparison are presented, as affording evidence to the Society that it labors not alone, unnoticed and unblest by Him whose command it seeks to fulfil. But we may not confine our retrospect to what has been done. There is another and a solemn account to be rendered by the Society, and the christian public of which it is the organ, for what is left undone. And this, it may be safely asserted, is more than commensurate with all that has yet been attempted. The fields yet unblest by this Society cry out against us. Every instance of a missionary planted in the West, has been followed by evidence that two or more others might have found equal entrance and equal success in the same general vicinity. Every church established, and every revival enjoyed, is a living reproach to us, that other churches and other showers of mercy, for which there was equal preparation, have not gladdened the hearts of men and angels. Meanwhile, the need and the desire of the destitute are augmented steadily. The mighty tide of human being rises and swells ceaselessly, by day and by night, and rolls its huge masses out further and further beyond all former bounds. The emergency increases. It is not factitious, it is one of Heaven's own ordaining; and it cannot be averted, but must be met by the people of God, as one of the greatest, in the grandeur of its probable results, ever assigned to a single age. It behooves the friends of Home Missions, if they would not see this work taken out of their hands, and given to men of bolder faith, more self-denial and holy enterprise, at once to increase its resources and the number of its missionary agents, and to go on hereafter in a ratio of progress corresponding to the widening space, the growing numbers and the eventful history of the country and its people.

The Committee but repeat the suggestion made in a former Report, that the addition of one hundred missionaries, may safely be presumed on for the coming year, if seasonable assurance can be given of a proportional increase of pecuniary means.

PRINCIPAL AUXILIARIES, AGENCIES AND MISSIONARY FIELDS.

MAINE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The number of missionaries in commission in the bounds of this Society, for the twelve months ending March 1st, has been 91. The receipts of the same period were $10,875 57, which, with a small loan of $50 03, has met the current expenses of the year, and discharged a debt of $532 52. Adding $143 received at the office in New York from Maine, and the total realized for Home Missions from that State, for the year, is $11,068 60.

In this section of the missionary field, there has been a long season of spiritual drought; but at the date of the annual returns, there were more auspicious appearances. In several places revivals of religion had commenced, but so recently, that the abiding results are yet rather matter of hope than of history. The feeble churches exhibit their vitality by manifesting an increasing desire to procure the stated ordinances of religion.

The field of Maine, which its Missionary Society has now cultivated for forty-one years, is large, and continually growing larger. "The breakings in upon the forest," remarks the Secretary, Rev. ELIPHALET GILLET, D. D., "open the way for extending the means of moral cultivation; and the supply of one place, in a wide desolation, multiplies the calls for an increase of labor in all the surrounding region; so that even success in efforts, instead of bringing the work to a close, only enlarges the theatre of operations. This will be the case for years to come as so much land remains yet to be possessed."

"There were originally only 39 churches that sustained the Gospel without aid from the Missionary Society; there are now 89, which support their own ordinances of worship; 50 churches that were once aided have become independent. If we could persuade 50 churches more to enlarge their subscriptions, so as to take the same noble stand, it would be an era in the missionary operations, and would give encouragement to the friends of the cause, in their labors to build up Zion. There would then still be left more than 60, to be cared for and aided in the support of the institutions of religion. One single year of the right hand of the Most High, refreshing and enlarging the churches, would give a different aspect to the whole face of things."

NEW HAMPSHIRE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The whole number of missionaries employed by this Society during the year, is 46; and they have performed an amount of labor equal to 37 years. Forty-nine churches have partaken on the stated ministrations of the Gospel and its ordinances.

The receipts of the Auxiliary for the year, were $5,593 53. There was paid for Home Missionary labor in the State, $4,740 24. A donation of $500 was made to the Parent Society; and the same direction was also given by the donors to $803 30; besides various individual donations, legacies and congregational collections, sent directly to the Treasury at New York, amounting to $649 92—making the aggregate actually applied to missionary operations, $6,693 46, of which $1,953 22 was devoted to the general purposes of the Parent Society.

No material changes have taken place in the state of the feeble churches of New Hampshire since the last Report. The special influences of the Holy Spirit seem to have been generally withheld; and the cause of temperance is stationary; and in some cases the traffic and use of intoxicating drinks begin again to make the land desolate. The feeble churches of this State have suffered greatly from the constant drain of emigration. "They are situated," says the Secretary, Rev. BENJAMIN P. STONE, "in towns that hold out the fewest inducements for successful industry, and nothing is more natural than that the desire should exist on the part of many whose circumstances will permit, to remove to our manufacturing villages, to the West or to other places, for the sake of improving their worldly prospects. Hence, there has been of late an unusual amount of emigration from those agricultural towns and districts in the State in which business is declining. No part of our community has suffered more loss from emigration than that of which our feeble churches are composed. It is believed, that had our feeble churches suffered no more comparatively, than our larger and more able churches have, from the removal of their most valuable members, a large proportion of them would now be able to sustain the institutions of religion without missionary aid."

Such facts as these are not to be interpreted as a discouragement of Home Missionary efforts in New Hampshire. Since, from the operation of physical causes, the districts above described will always be drained of a large share of the enterprise and business talent growing up in them, it is the more important to imbue them with sound christian principles, so that the emigrants may carry with them the seeds of truth, sobriety, and Gospel institutions wherever they go. Such congregations are the "poor," whom we are told we shall always have with us—the Lord's poor; and therefore, for his sake, as well as for their children's and the country's, they should continue to receive the fraternal aid of those whom Providence has delivered from the like dependence.

VERMONT DOMESTIC MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Forty-five ministers of the Gospel have been under appointment from this Auxiliary during the year past ; and the aggregate of their labors has amounted to 36 years and 9 months. On the first of August, Rev. CYRUS B. DRAKE, who had temporarily performed the duties of Secretary, was succeeded by Rev. JOHN F. STONE, who was appointed by the Directors to that office.

The receipts of this Society for the year were $4,778 15, which, with a previous balance of $563 34, made the available resources equal to $5,341 69. There was paid for missionary labors in the state, $4,797 49 ; and remitted by the Auxiliary to the National Society, $410 39. In addition to these contributions to the general cause, the sum of $512 24 was received by the latter from various churches and private contributors, making the total realized from Vermont for the cause of Home Missions, during the year, $5,720 12. It appears by a comparison with the Report of the previous year, that there has been an increase both in the number of Missionaries and in the resources of the Society.

From the last annual statement of the Directors, it will be seen that they take large views of the bearings of their home efforts on the national welfare. "Vermont," they remark, "can furnish some money, but more men. If the streams of her surplus population issued from communities educated and sanctified by the Gospel, she would do more for the world than if her donations merely were increased a million fold. Failing to retain her population at home, she is, for a little state, largely represented at the West, and in the business places at the East ; and she has constantly a large number passing through a course of education, into the professions and places of influence. Her quiet hill-sides have been the birth places of many now mingling in the activities of public life. But the multitudes who go abroad, will be what influences at home were adapted to make them. Vermont, to bless the world, must herself be blessed." And how much occasion there is to urge this upon the Christians of that state is evident from the facts adduced by the Directors. "Although for 29 years the Missionary Society has been going about doing good in our state, one-third of it, including a population of 60,000 is nearly destitute of the Gospel, and wholly destitute of that form of it which we prefer." "Not over five miles from where we now are, begins a moral waste, which stretches out in one continuous desolation, with a population of 12,000 without any Congregational preaching." "Are the churches willing to see the cause of Home Missions in Vermont languish ? Shall the feeblest churches be left to die, and 80 towns without a min- ister be abandoned to fanaticism and infidelity? It cannot be! We will not despair of seeing a brighter day dawn upon the moral desolations of our state."

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The number of missionaries in the employment of the Society for more or less of the year past, was 62. The number of dependent churches has been reduced from 58 to 54—nine having ceased to receive assistance, and five others having been added in their place. The general aspect of the communities aided is encouraging; though in some cases, the causes which have made them feeble are of a nature not easily removed, and are likely to render them for an indefinite period the proper subjects of sympathy and relief.

The contributions and income of the funds belonging to this Society, for the year ending March 1st, 1848, amounted to $24,314 70. The payments during the same period were, for missionary operations in the state, and for expenses, $7,157 67. The sum of $18,000 was remitted to the National Society, at different periods during the year, and afforded most timely relief from the embarrassments which hindered, and at one time threatened to suspend its onward movement. In addition to this direct assistance from the state Society, the Hampshire Missionary Society has paid into the general Treasury the last year $1,250. There was also received from legacies, $2,295 89, and from various other sources $2,987 30—making a total of $31,690 86 from Massachusetts, actually applied to the furtherance of this cause during the year past; and of this amount $24,533 19 has gone to win the great national field, on which the moral conflict for determining our destiny, is mainly to be waged. The Puritan fathers of Massachusetts, two hundred years ago, toiled and suffered and practiced the sternest self denial to lay the foundations of those institutions under which their children's children now find safety. It is the best testimony to the nature and tendency of the principles which they bequeathed, that a like spirit still lives and works in their descendants to carry out the great impulsive idea of the Pilgrims—that of being, to all time, benefactors to immortal minds.

The Report of the Secretary, Rev. JOSEPH S. CLARK, warmly seconds the appeals of the Parent Society for a more enlarged and vigorous attempt to evangelize the whole land. "If there be a country on earth," he remarks, "that may be loved with a christian love, it is this, whose destiny involves so many interests that are dear to Jesus Christ; so many that are identified with the extension of his kingdom among men. Why was this great continent kept secret from the rest of the world for more than 5,000 years? Was it not that there might be a place in reserve for unfolding some great purpose of divine benevolence, when the fullness of time should come? Was there nothing peculiar—nothing providential—in that sifting process whereby the wilderness was sown with the choicest wheat, and every thing else kept back till this should get root? And as the contest between truth and falsehood, spiritualism and formalism, Christianity and heathenism, waxes warm over the face of the whole earth, why is it that all eyes turn instinctively to this land, if it be not, as an English writer has said, that ‘on this land hang, in a great measure, the future interests of the globe’?”

RHODE ISLAND HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

This Society had, a year ago, a balance of $420 84. The receipts have since been—including $1,000 from the Connecticut Missionary Society—$1,736 58. The Society has expended for its missions $1,884 19, and the Parent Society has received from various sources in this State, $686 10.

Ten different missionaries have been in commission for some portion of the year, and 7 are now under appointment. The peculiar circumstances of the evangelical interest in Rhode Island have seemed to call for an immediate strengthening of its missions, even though the cost of doing it should exceed the average rate of aid granted to feeble churches in other states. The Secretary, Rev. JONATHAN LEAVITT, reports, that in some of those fields, the work will be short, in proportion to its expensiveness while it lasts. Four stations, it is expected, will shortly be self-supporting congregations. One, the most recently taken under the patronage of the Society, is “deemed bright with ultimate promise.” It has a beautiful church edifice erected by the munificence of the manufacturing proprietors of the village. “Two other congregations have furnished pleasant and commodious lecture rooms without contracting debt.” Another has repaired its sanctuary; another has made an outlay of some hundred dollars upon appurtenances of its house of worship; while a fifth is about erecting a tabernacle for the Lord.

The liberality of the Connecticut Missionary Society, in continuing its indispensable assistance, is appropriately acknowledged by the grateful churches of Rhode Island.

CONNECTICUT MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Forty-one missionary laborers have been in commission during the last 12 months in the field of this Auxiliary. Several congregations have lately assumed, or are about to assume, the position of independence of missionary aid. Two or three houses of worship have been repaired or improved, and others relieved from the embarrassments of debt.

The income of the Society for the year has been $7,512 97. It paid during the same period $4,174 49 for missionary purposes within the State; the sum of $1,000, as in former years, was appropriated to the assistance of the Rhode Island churches; and $4,500 were sent to the Parent Society for Western Missions. The latter Institution also received from legacies, and direct donations of individuals and churches in Connecticut, the further sum of $13,129 08; making an aggregate devoted to Home Missions, from this State, of $22,803 59; which is $5,282 09 more than last year, and $3,742 45 greater than in any preceding year. The portion of these contributions which goes to aid in the missionary work out of New England, is $17,629 09—or more by $3,224 18 than the largest previous sum similarly appropriated from this State.

This steady enlargement—secured almost wholly without any other agency than that of the pastors, and the circulation of missionary information—is fostered by the liberal tone which pervades the annual statements of this Society to the churches of Connecticut. The Secretary, Rev. HORACE HOOKER, in his last report, remarks, “This Society has so intertwined itself with other parts of the country, that its operations abroad are as much needed as they ever were at home. The still enlarging West, so full of hope and of fear to our country—of hope, if it is incorporated into the kingdom of Christ; of fear, if it should swell the empire of the god of this world—presents motives to awake our sympathies and draw forth our charities, such as were never before presented even by that valley of wonders.” “The grand peculiarity of the last year was the flood of immigration which famine in Europe rolled over the land. The distinguishing feature of the year to come will probably be an immense extension of our local limits. But if we fill the continent with the ensigns of our power, we must also fill it with Protestant Bibles and Protestant churches, with a Protestant ministry and a Puritan Sabbath, or our country is undone. There is no destiny, even of the Saxon race, which can save a republic without virtue; or secure virtue without the intervention of the Gospel and its institutions. To accomplish this may cost something; and so will the ruin of a mighty nation likewise cost something to itself, and something to the world.”

PHILADELPHIA HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Fifty-three missionaries have been employed on the field of this Auxiliary, (which embraces the states of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maryland,) and their labors have been distributed statedly to eighty different stations, chiefly in the new and comparatively destitute sections. Their zeal and fidelity are commended by the Society, and they are declared to be, as a class, "intelligent, pious, laborious, self-sacrificing, and efficient. Few are willing to endure, for the good of others, what they endure; and to no class of men is society more indebted for what promotes its true welfare."

The balance in the Treasury, March 1st, 1847, was $1,150 13. The subsequent income of the Society has been $7,609 45—total, $8,759 58. The missionary expenditure for the year amounts to $7,481 19; besides $800 remitted to the Parent Society for missions in the Mississippi valley. The latter has also received from various congregations, individuals and legacies, on the field of this Auxiliary, $2,655 85. The whole sum already applied to Home Missions amounts to $10,937 04—or $788 30, more than last year; while a balance of $478 39 is on hand towards redeeming pledges made for the coming year.

Besides the direct assistance in the form of pecuniary remittances, the Parent Society receives from the officers and members of the Philadelphia Home Missionary Society the moral aid of their sympathy and encouragement. "To increase the service in behalf of the Western and frontier portions of our country," say the Committee in their seventh report, "is highly important, and we desire respectfully to express our conviction, that God in his Providence is now calling upon his people in this part of his vineyard, to arise without delay, and devise and do more for them than hitherto they have done. If heretofore the West has excited the sympathies and shared the benefactions of eastern Christians and philanthropists, much more should it now receive their attentions. What it previously was, or seemed destined by its greatness to be, in its bearings upon the future history of the nation, has lost none of its interest by the progress of time; but its heterogeneous and augmented population, its extended and extending territories, have added an importance to it of late, to which no Christian or patriot, who rightly contemplates it can be indifferent."

Rev. ELIAS R. FAIRCHILD, D. D., who for more than eight years has discharged the laborious duties of Secretary and Agent on this field, resigned on the close of the year, and is succeeded by Rev. ROBERT ADAIR, who leaves the pastorate of a church in Philadelphia to take charge of this important branch of the Home Missionary work.

CENTRAL AGENCY, N. Y.

The event which has been most characteristic of the nineteenth year of this Agency, is the decease of its highly respected and useful Secretary, Rev. ABILAH CRANE. While the friends of Home Missions were attending its last anniversary, their beloved brother and faithful fellow laborer was rapidly going down to the borders of the grave; and two days afterwards, on the 14th of May, 1847, he fell asleep in Jesus.

For upwards of fourteen years, Mr. Crane had been the leading instrument in prosecuting Home Missions in the central portions of New York. In this work, his singleness of aim and the spirituality of his intercourse, acquired for him, in a remarkable degree, the confidence of the people, and the affectionate regard of his ministerial brethren. Ever studious of the substantial and permanent welfare of the churches, tender of the reputation and feelings of the pastors, and presenting a bright example of holy living, he was universally welcomed as a personal friend, as well as the foster father of the feeble and destitute churches. The abler communities among whom he was accustomed to go, preaching the Gospel of the kingdom; the scattered and the poor, who were gathered and sustained in the enjoyment of Gospel privileges through his labors; and those whose despondency he had cheered and whose difficulties he had healed, all appreciated his worth and mourn his loss. Death came to him an unexpected, but not an unwelcome visitant. It found him with his loins girded and ready to depart. Those who stood around his dying bed bear witness, that his last moments were "full of the glory of God and the Home Missionary work." It was beautiful and befitting, that themes which had been so associated in the prayers and labors of his life, should be thus blended together in the aspirations and triumphs of his dying hour. "Blessed is that servant whom his Master when he cometh, shall find" as diligently employed and as well prepared.

The suddenness of this bereavement, and the length of time which elapsed before a successor to Mr. Crane could be engaged, materially embarrassed the operations of the Agency, for about one third of the year. With the cordial concurrence of the friends of the Society in that section, Rev. WASHINGTON THACHER was appointed Secretary of the Central Agency, and entered on his work in August last. Although, at first, a stranger to the details of the business, he has met with encouraging success in re-arranging such departments as had suffered from the want of attention. The receipts in a little more than six months of actual collections, amount to $3,842 64. The payments within the year, were $3,746 00. It is proper to add that additional receipts and ex- penditures, upon this field, by the Parent Board at New York, occurred during the early part of the year, which are not included in the accounts of the Agency.

Forty-nine missionaries have been under appointment, within the limits of the Agency, since the last report; and by their labors 54 churches have been supplied for the whole or a part of the time. The Secretary reports that "three houses of worship have been erected, and two missionaries have been installed as pastors: and although, in the former part of the year, there was a general complaint of the low state of spiritual feeling among the churches, there has been a gradual improvement in their external condition. Divisions have been healed, errors have been corrected, houses of worship have been repaired, and the congregations enlarged, and solemnity and interest have increased, till there are now several revivals of religion in progress; and the hearts of many who have wept in silence over the spiritual desolations, are encouraged to hope that a general refreshing from the presence of the Lord is about to descend throughout this thirsty field."

WESTERN AGENCY, N. Y.

The receipts from the field of this Agency, since the last report,—exceeding the contributions from the same sources in any previous year—amount, in all, to $11,231 33; of which $2,816 77 were sent by the donors directly to the Treasury at New York, and $496 84 was specifically designated by the contributors to aid particular churches.

During more or less of the year, 68 missionaries have been in commission by this Agency, of whom 58 have received appointment since the last report. The number of congregations to which they have ministered, is 74. Besides these, 16 missionaries, laboring in 20 congregations, have been appointed directly by the Parent Society, without the intervention of the Agency; making 84 missionaries laboring in connexion with this Society in Western New York; and the whole number of churches aided on the same field, 93. Of the sum needed to sustain these churches, it is expected that about one-fourth will be raised by themselves in contributions to this Society. The confidence is expressed, that this portion of the State has now reached that point in its onward progress, where the Home Missionary receipts will be double the expenditures; and consequently, that one-half the amount collected will be paid over to the Parent Society, to be expended in promoting the cause in distant and more destitute portions of the land.

In reference to results, the report of the Secretary, Rev. JOHN A. MURRAY, remarks, that "The missionaries have not labored in vain. About twenty have been blessed with revivals that have brought many into the kingdom of Christ. Thirteen have reported 238 hopeful conversions; and twenty-nine, 233 additions to the churches, 135 on profession of their faith. Six houses of worship have been built, and one that had been sold for debt has been redeemed. Four new fields have been taken up, and eight have given assurance that they will need no further aid. There is scarcely a Presbyterian or Congregational church in western New York, that is not favored with a religious teacher. The word of the Lord is published throughout all this region. Our missionary churches are 'edified; and walking in the fear of the Lord and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, are multiplied.' "

Western New York affords a striking illustration of the value of missionary efforts in opening streams of salvation in dry and thirsty places, where no water is. "Within the memory of the living, the first missionary pressed his way into this region, then an almost unbroken wilderness. Where now is a population of 800,000, in 1790 there were but 105 families, comprising 1,081 souls. There were then fewer persons in Western New York, than now regularly assemble for worship in some of our large congregations. But at that early day the voice of the Home Missionary was heard, like that of John the Baptist preaching in the wilderness, 'Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.' From the beginning, the Gospel has been proclaimed. Almost every Presbyterian and Congregational church, as it came into existence, was helped by Home Missionary liberality. The original churches in Buffalo, Rochester, Lockport, Geneva, Auburn, Canandaigua—and indeed, in all our cities, large towns and villages—were aided in this way, in sustaining the early ministers of their choice. 'The word of the Lord grew and multiplied.' From small beginnings the enterprise has moved forward. In almost every town in western New York, it has planted churches, which, though in some cases feeble and dependant, are increasing in numbers and strength; and are destined to fill this part of the State with truth and righteousness. What has been said of Massachusetts, may with equal truth be said of this section, that 'she is more indebted for her wealth and prosperity to her preachers of the Gospel than to any other earthly cause.' It is the Gospel that has invigorated the arm of industry, and blessed the people with temporal prosperity."

The Missionary Committee of the Presbytery of Rochester, acting in connection with this Society, has extended aid to six of the missionaries on our list, in supporting as many churches. The contributions derived from this source during the year, were $1,405 39.

WESTERN RESERVE AGENCY, O.

Since the mode of conducting Home Missions on the Western Reserve was changed from an Auxiliary to an Agency, there has been a steady increase in the amount accomplished, as well as a better foundation for future success. Thus, the receipts of the last year amount to $2,667 09, which, with $284 75 forwarded by the donors to New York, is $2,851 84, from this field—nearly $400 more than has ever been received in any previous year since the action of the Board was restricted within its present limits. Other donations, not immediately available, have been secured, to the amount of $850. The number of missionaries has also increased from 34 to 40.

A general review of the churches, among whom this instrumentality is employed, furnishes ground for encouragement. It is believed that more conversions have occurred than in some former years. Six houses of worship have been completed or begun, and there is a general increase of vigor in the management of church matters. But "my encouragement," says the Secretary, Rev. MYRON TRACY, "is from the fact, that our own destitutions are beginning to be felt, and a general interest awakened for their supply." "The careful examination of our wants has favorably affected the hearts of many, and they are ready to put forth new and increasing efforts for the prosperity of religion within our bounds. Two-thirds, or about 130 of our churches are too weak to sustain for themselves the regular ministrations of the Gospel. And in about 150 of our townships, no church of either the Congregational or Presbyterian denomination has yet been organized. Other denominations are, no doubt, doing much good within the bounds of this Agency; but it is a fact ascertained to the satisfaction of those who have examined the subject, that a majority of our whole population have no home for religious worship: a majority are in no sense connected with any religious denomination in sustaining the institutions of the Gospel. These facts are beginning to be known and felt by the leading ministers and others, on the Reserve, to a degree that justifies the expectation of greater efficiency in this branch of christian enterprise." "Another fact," continues the Secretary, "which awakens hope, is, that applications for missionary aid have of late been unusually numerous and pressing"—thus showing the increasing sensibility of the destitute to their own condition; "and these applications are mostly for the support of ministers who have but recently entered the field"—a circumstance indicative of growing ministerial strength. But still, in this, as in all the extended harvest field of the West, there is an urgent call for laborers—for men who can endure hardness as good soldiers, and find attraction to such communities in the command and promise of Christ, and the rewards of grace, rather than in the prospect of worldly emolument and ease.

MARIETTA AGENCY, O.

In the nine counties comprised in this Agency, there have been employed for a whole or part of the year past, 14 missionaries, the aggregate of whose labors equals 12 years; and upwards of 20 different congregations have shared in their ministrations. The amount expended by the Agency for the support in part of these labors, was $441 64, the balance being paid by the Parent Society.

Two of the assisted churches have enjoyed deeply interesting seasons of the special visitation of the Holy Ghost, by which they have been much enlarged and strengthened.

The Rev. THOMAS WICKES, Secretary of this Agency, who is also pastor of the church at Marietta, has continued his valuable services in making collections, and superintending their application. In his report is the following gratifying testimony to the happy results of the system of operations, which this Society began twenty years ago, by sending out Rev. L. G. Bingham and Rev. A. Pomeroy, to explore the country and organize its missionary interests. "In looking over the field," says the report of the Secretary, "there are several points which attract special attention by the great things accomplished in them, and which may serve to give the most cheering encouragement to the friends of Home Missions. The great things to which I refer, are the entire regeneration and redemption of some of the most wicked, irreligious communities to be found in this region of country. Of such places, four especially deserve notice. Some of these were notorious for their ungodliness. They were given up to the reign of iniquity; and no fields seemed to be more unpromising as to any good being accomplished; while in all of them irreligion was the prevailing influence. In one of these, there was one pious, praying woman: in another, no praying souls at all; so that Satan may be said to have had entire possession of these communities. In the other two, there was a handful of salt, but a very small handful. Wickedness in every form reigned in two or three of these places without let or hindrance; though it should be stated, that no false churches or systems of error had gained a footing. Your missionaries entered these fields, and the change has been wonderful, glorious; and it has been rapid too, accomplished within from three to ten years. These places have been redeemed from wickedness and irreligion. Flourishing churches have been planted, and instead of abounding, outbreaking iniquity, on every side, the fruits of religion are developed; there is order, peace, sobriety; there are sanctuaries, the worship of God in public, and piety in the how hold. The contrast between these, and the fruits which formerly ripened and hung in clusters in these dark places, is delightful indeed, and shows WHAT THE GOSPEL CAN DO."

"There are still numerous other places within the bounds of our Agency, as dark and irreligious as were formerly those of which I have spoken, which stand in perishing need of the Gospel. But the great question with us is, How can we send it to them? Where are the means? The men who are sent must be sustained almost entirely from abroad; for the people do not come here for the bread of life, and therefore will not contribute their money to provide it. They must first learn its value. There is one point, especially, of the above character, which should be occupied as soon as possible, it being one of more than usual importance, for its rapid growth and prospective increase."

CINCINNATI AGENCY, O.

This branch of our associated efforts has also been favored with an increase of laborers and resources. Forty-nine missionaries,—eight more than last year—have been in commission; and the receipts amounted to $2,969 28, of which $2,724 53 were paid for labor performed on the field. The increase of these contributions, above previous annual collections, has not been made up by the enlarged donations of a few, but has been derived from a general addition to the gifts of many churches. Besides the above, the Parent Society has received from this field $1,400 as the proceeds of legacies, and a small amount by direct contribution from individuals and churches.

In pressing the claims of Ohio and Indiana on the Society for a greater proportion of its attention, the Secretary of this Agency, Rev. HENRY LITTLE, reminds us, that there are, in both these states, large sections, to which no missionaries have yet been sent. Much of the country for 60 miles back from the Ohio river, lying between Portsmouth and Marietta, and a similar portion higher up, is still a wilderness, unbroken by missionary culture. Nearly one-third of the southern end of Indiana has been almost entirely neglected. The same general statement may be made of the middle of the eastern portion, and of the adjacent counties of Ohio, and of the North Western section of the latter state. Indeed, when it is considered, what changes occur in twenty years; that, already, in some parts, a generation has grown up without the Gospel, and, of course, with no associations for it, but many prejudices hostile to its introduction; and that the population of these states is meanwhile doubling every ten years, the language of the Agency seems to be fully justified, viz.; that "if all the present energies of the Society, were brought to bear upon Ohio and Indiana alone, they would not be more than the salvation of souls and the kingdom of Christ demand of the American Church." This increased necessity is owing greatly to the altered condition of the country since the first enterprises of this Society in that region. "Seventeen years ago," says the Secretary, "we were organized under the imposing title of an 'Agency for the Western States.' The whole valley was our field. In the South, we did much with our Agency and missionaries to build up the churches. We looked North upon the great territory of Michigan, with a few scattered inhabitants and here and there a feeble church. We looked West, and Illinois was as far as we could see; and our eastern friends had hardly heard the strange names of Wisconsin and Iowa. It would surprise the christian world, to have presented, in one view, what God has given to the Home Missionary Society the privilege of doing on this wide domain. The missionary work has increased seven fold; and our operations, as an Agency, are now restricted to parts of Ohio and Indiana, whose wants still bear an appalling disproportion to our most successful exertions."

"Yet upon this field, there have been great and cheering changes in seventeen years. At points where there was in each a little missionary church, there are now two strong churches; and in many others where there was none, and in some where there were no people, we have churches able to sustain themselves, and to help liberally to sustain others."

It is an interesting fact, that in the field of this Agency, which, from the prevalence of fevers over its rich alluvial soil, has generally been supposed to be less favorable to health than some other sections of the West, but few missionaries have fallen by disease. There has been more or less sickness, and some have supposed their labors and exposures to the effects of the climate would shorten their lives; but of the hard working, self-denying men, who for the last fifteen or eighteen years have entered that field, and have borne the heat and burden of the day, nearly all continue to the present time.

MISSOURI HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

From the Treasurer's account, we learn that there has been an increase in the receipts of this Auxiliary of $650 above the amount last reported, making for the year, $1,359 49. Four missionaries have been sustained by these funds for the whole or a part of the time. The Parent Society have had in commission on the same field, 21 others, to 5 of whom the Auxiliary also furnished a part of their support.

The period now reported has not, as a whole, been characterized by seasons of revival; yet several of the missionaries have been favoured with the special presence of the Holy Spirit within a few months past. Precious above all estimation have been the fruits of such a refreshing, enjoyed by one of the churches aided. Three months since, it numbered only about a dozen members, divided in feeling and low in religious zeal; but now they are cemented in brotherly love, and glow with the desire of doing good. More than twenty have been added to their number, of whom some will materially increase the efficiency of the church. Several other communities, enjoying missionary labors, have also been refreshed and strengthened; and it may be said with truth, that all the missionary fields have made advances in real strength and stability, since the last anniversary. In many congregations, a most laudable spirit is manifested in respect to providing houses of worship. In addition to what was reported last year, several communities are now favored with good houses in which to assemble for religious purposes. One, in particular, at Troy, is mentioned as being built of brick, well finished and provided with a bell. It is free from debt, except to a small amount, and is worth about $1,600, which has been raised by the people without foreign aid. Another, at Glasgow, of nearly the same cost, has just been completed and dedicated to the service of Jehovah. Four others are in rapid progress, and will doubtless be finished before another anniversary. All who can appreciate the value of a convenient edifice, desecrated by no secular and incongruous associations, and always at the command of the church for its own spiritual uses, will readily understand how important are the facilities thus secured to these missionary brethren, for accomplishing their great object.

This important State, approaching the largest in the Union in extent, and equal to any in physical advantages—divided through its whole breadth and skirted on its eastern border by those great highways of the nations for emigration and commerce, the Missouri and Mississippi rivers—still sends up its urgent call upon the compassion, not to say the justice, of the churches and ministers of the older states. The increase in the means of evangelization is lamentably slow. It is almost appalling to contemplate an expanse of territory so wide, in the choicest portion of the temperate zone, with scarcely a mile square of waste land, capable of so great agricultural products, containing so much mineral wealth, and already beginning to exert such political power—a region into which the population has been pouring since 1810 at a rate which has doubled it, on the average, every seven or eight years, and over which Popery is doing more to spread itself than in any other western state—and yet, to meet this emergency, to direct this accumulating moral and physical force to salutary ends, to give an evangelical nurture to the rising institutions of this great people, the Protestant ministry is painfully inadequate. The denominations represented in this Society, and those in doctrinal sympathy with them, probably have not in Missouri more than one minister devoted to the sole work of his office, for every ten thousand souls. "I wish," says the Secretary, Rev. J. B. TOWNSEND, "that I knew how to spread out our wants before our friends at the East, and especially before the ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ, in truthful colors. I cannot believe they would leave us to contend alone against so many obstacles, which present themselves in the way of the extension of the Master's kingdom and the salvation of souls. We have several vacant fields, of great importance, where good and faithful men would receive from the people a large share of their support; where churches are formed, which have comfortable houses in which to worship, and where the missionary would be welcomed with open arms and warm hearts. Other fields there are, deeply important, where some labor has been expended and small churches formed; yet for want of some one to follow up what has been done, these vines are drooping and ready to die. There are other fields, again, never occupied by our missionaries, yet holding out strong inducements, if we only had the men and the means to enter in and possess them."

Rev. ARTEMAS BULLARD, D. D., to whom every evangelical interest in Missouri is so largely indebted, has within the year rendered valuable service in a voluntary agency of several weeks for the Society.

MICHIGAN.

The number of missionaries in commission in this State during the year now reported, has been 80—three more than during the previous twelve months. The receipts for the same period were $1,982 49—more than double the previous annual collections on the same field. This encouraging advancement is owing, doubtless, to the influence of the Divine Spirit on the churches, reviving their zeal for whatever pertains to the welfare of Zion, and bringing many precious souls to the knowledge of the truth. At the time when the annual returns from this State were made, several of the missionary churches were sharing in the refreshing showers or the fertilizing dews of heavenly grace. One pastor writes, "The Lord is in mercy pouring out his Spirit in this village. The stout-hearted are yielding and coming over to the side of their rightful sovereign." Another says "The Lord is in the midst of us; and some have recently been hopefully converted." Another rejoices to be able to say, "The Holy Spirit is among my church and congregation; there is deep solemnity throughout the whole place." Other churches have been quickened in spirituality, and a deeper process of self-scrutiny and applicatio of the truth is apparent. But a small part of the results of these seasons of awakening can be enumerated, owing to their recent occurrence.

The Agent of the Society in Michigan, REV. CALVIN CLARK, remarks in his report—"There is evidently a growing interest in Home Missions in this State. This is evident not only from the increase of contributions already mentioned, but from the increasing calls for missionary labor." With all that Home Missions have done for the 'Peninsular State,' the openings for laborers and the desire to obtain them are greater than ever. A short time since, the county of Saginaw had no Presbyterian or Congregational minister; they greatly need one. The county of Ottawa, at the mouth of Grand River, has been entirely destitute. Recently a minister has gone there and finds a vast moral waste. A missionary at the county seat of Allegan, says, "I do not know how to abandon the hope of a missionary for the western part of this county. The tide of population is setting upon the western borders, and the lake shore and the country at the mouth of our beautiful Kalamazoo River must soon contain a dense multitude." In the mining region on Lake Superior, one or two self-denying missionaries are much needed; and to such as are suited to the service, a ready entrance and cordial support would be granted.

It is well worth the consideration of the thoughtful lover of his country, whereunto the resources of our vast agricultural states, under the hands of a people of such vigorous and aggressive spirit, are to grow. Look, for example, at this region of Michigan—how much it has suffered within twelve years, and how it has risen above all the hindrances to its physical and social progress. Its financial affairs are much improved; the public works are sold, and a large share of the public debt has been paid. The Central Railroad is expected this year to reach the Lake, and soon to advance to Chicago. The crowds pressing on to the West, and the abundant products of wheat and wool, for the raising and sending of which to market, Michigan has such admirable facilities, must unquestionably make her Eastern and Western highways great thoroughfares. Meanwhile, the location of the new capital in the central part of the State, has let in hundreds of people, and with them the enterprise and wants of civilization, where a few months ago was only a dense forest. With these has gone a church of Christ; and already a missionary of this Society is there, endeavoring to set up the standard of piety fast by the high places of legislation. In another section, a band of christian emigrants from Holland, fleeing from the disabilities imposed upon them in their native land, have opened settlements which they aim to pervade with the spirit of the Gospel.

Last year, 170 Presbyterian and Congregational churches had a salutary influence over the State, and the number has been enlarged by the formation of many others. It is a matter for devout thanksgiving, that along with secular advancement, there has been such an encouraging progress of religious organizations; and it is generally conceded that the missionaries of this Institution, and the benefactors who have sustained them, have contributed to this progress more than any other human agency.

The number of missionaries employed in this state, since the last report, has been 101; which is 9 more than were previously in commission. The churches on the same field have contributed towards the expense of these appointments $1,701, which is a handsome advance on the collections of the previous year—especially, when it is considered that most of the churches are yet in that early stage, when the burdens of erecting houses of worship and making other necessary arrangements for the establishment of social institutions, press most heavily upon the community.

In reviewing the history of the missionary churches of Illinois for the last three or four years, we have reason to believe that many obstacles which they have encountered are now removed, or, at least, greatly diminished. Those years have been years of trial, in which the chaff has been winnowed from the wheat. There were few revivals, and there was nothing in the external circumstances of the Church to stimulate her activity; while, on the other hand, the full force of temptation and trial was bearing on her members. It was a season in which the love and steadfastness of professors were put to the test. Some could not abide the searching process, and went out from the spiritual family of Christ, because they were not of them. But others who were approved, were made manifest. This period of comparative desertion has been, we trust, a season in which God was preparing Zion for future triumphs. The Agent of the Society, Rev. WILLIAM KIRBY, informs us in his report, that "the present season has been the most remarkable for revivals that has occurred for six or seven years. In every direction," he adds, "we hear that God is pouring out his Spirit, and drawing men unto himself. In some instances the work seems to have been of extraordinary extent and power, while no remarkable means or agencies have been employed for its promotion. All denominations of Christians have been blessed, but none, I believe, more than those which co-operate with the American Home Missionary Society. These seasons of special interest are upon the increase. Could the friends of the Redeemer, who are laboring by their prayers and contributions to build up his cause in this Great Valley, be transported to the scenes in which the missionaries labor, and see w their own eyes the ingathering of the harvests, they would be amply repaid for all their self-denial. They would see that God is indeed with his servants, and that their labors are not in vain ; they would see the spiritual building rising before them, its lively stones polished after the similitude of a palace, and growing into a holy temple in the Lord."

"The friends of Home Missions have also the satisfaction of knowing, that during the past year, several churches within the bounds of the State have passed the helpless period of infancy, and will look to them no more for aid in sustaining the institutions of the Gospel. They are resolved to go alone ; and, in this independence of foreign assistance, will doubtless be doubly blessed, in the enjoyment of the Gospel themselves, while the aid they relinquish will go to supply the means of grace to others. There are many more on the eve of a similar trial. Each successive year will witness an increase of churches, able to sustain themselves without pecuniary assistance. Such is the encouragement furnished by our past experience in the liberality of these churches, that I venture to predict, that in ten years from this time they will do more to support the ordinances of religion than is called for within the State ; and this, notwithstanding that new organizations are yearly demanded, which are feeble in their beginning, and will need much aid to carry them forward to a successful issue."

The wide extent of missionary ground in Illinois renders it impracticable for a single Agent to accomplish all that is needful for the wisest application of the sacred charity committed to our trust. At the urgent solicitation of the friends of Home Missions in that region, and with the conviction that the measure could no longer be deferred without injury to the cause, the Executive Committee have resolved to appoint another Agent for Illinois ; and have requested Rev. ARATUS KENT, of Galena, to accept that appointment. Mr. Kent has signified his willingness to engage in this work ; and only awaits the completion of arrangements for the supply of his place at Galena, to enter fully on the duties of the Agency in the northern part of the State ; while the central portion will be occupied, as heretofore, by the labors of Mr. Kirby.

The southern section of the State, which has long been regarded as an exceedingly needy and difficult missionary field, continues to improve in its character and prospects, under the system of co-operation with this Society, adopted by the Missionary Committee of the Presbytery of Alton. That Committee have furnished towards the support of missionaries within their bounds, the last year, $349 47. Some signal displays of converting grace have recently been made in this section of the state ; ministerial support by the people is beginning to be felt to be a duty ; the cause of Temperance, and of Sabbath schools, receive increasing favor ; and the value of an educated ministry is more highly appreciated.

WISCONSIN.

Forty-nine missionaries have been under appointment in this Territory, since the last report. Under their labors there has been a decided advance of the churches in numbers, stability and order ; and during the latter part of the year, several of them have been favored with revivals of the Lord's work. In these cases, as in those which have occurred in other Western States, the last season, the characteristic feature has been the prevalence of great stillness and solemnity, and an unusual depth and pungency of conviction of sin in the subjects.

The missionary labors of this Society in Wisconsin were contemporaneous with its first organization as a territory, and have been prosecuted with a ratio of increase even greater than that of the population, though still far behind its spiritual necessities. In 1836, when this region was detached from the jurisdiction of Michigan, and when the population was only 11,600, a missionary of this Institution commenced his labors among them. Five years afterwards, in 1841, when the population had become 33,000, nine missionaries were in commission. In 1844, the number of inhabitants was 75,000, and of missionaries thirty. In January last, the census showed the population to be 213,000 ; and the number of ministers in that state, connected with its ecclesiastical Convention, is 70, of whom 49 are in commission as missionaries. Not far from 250 years of missionary labor have been performed there under the patronage of this Society, at the average expense of only about $160 for each year. The whole benefit of these labors it is impossible to measure ; but the progress secured may be estimated by such facts as these. Where, in 1836, there was but one church organization, there are now 85—some of them containing from 150 to 200 members—and 30 houses for the public worship of the Most High. Six congregations, fostered by the early aid of this Society, have ceased their dependent relations, and several others are fast advancing towards the same result. A good degree of similar success has attended the labors of other evangelical denominations. But it should not be concealed, that the interests of spiritual religion in Wisconsin are still in no small jeopardy. Three-fifths of the people have gone thither within five years, and of course are yet so pressed with the first wants of a new country, as to be comparatively unable and indisposed to provide for their religious welfare. Among them, moreover, is a large proportion of foreigners, embodying much infidel and Catholic influence. What has been so auspiciously begun, should be prosecuted with redoubled energy. There is abundant testimony, of the most & cided character, that had it not been for the timely and efficient aid of the American Home Missionary Society, the moral condition of that region would now be deplorable; and that should its zeal and liberality be suspended, the effect would be most disastrous. "Withdraw your aid," said an intelligent gentleman of that State, "and in five years a great proportion of our churches must break down." The friends of Home Missions are therefore committed, by every consideration of compassion for souls and of duty to their Master, to go on here, as they have commenced, to make full proof of the power of the Gospel, as the true and only sufficient regenerating principle in human society.

The Rev. STEPHEN PEET, whose labors as the Agent in Wisconsin, for nearly seven years, have been largely concerned in the progress above stated, resigned his Agency in March; and as yet no definite arrangements have been made for conducting the future operations of the Society on this field.

IOWA.

Of those denominations which operate through this Institution, there are in Iowa 52 churches and 43 ministers, of whom 35 have been, the past year, under commission as missionaries. In the same time, nine ministers have entered this State and two have left it.

Occasional conversions have occurred in most of the churches, yet few of them have been favored with any special effusions of the Spirit. The Shunem church, in the New Purchase, has been blessed; and a revival of singular interest has been enjoyed at Durango, near Dubuque, resulting in the organization of a church where previously not a praying family could be found. The churches at Bentonsport and Dubuque were, at the last accounts, sharing in precious outpourings of the Spirit; and the hope was entertained of more extensive awakenings.

During the year, five churches have been organized, six houses of worship have been completed, and two more commenced, of which one will soon be ready for use. Four other congregations expect to build during the coming summer. This disposition to help themselves, so honorable to the infancy of the missionary churches in this new region, is still more manifest in other respects. Those which have not been burdened with the erection of houses of worship, have increased their pledges to the support of the missionaries, from 10 to 100 per cent. They are also adopting systematic efforts to aid the various causes of benevolence. One missionary, in view of the wants by which he sees himself surrounded, declines further assistance; the church of another has assumed his entire support; and another will do so at the close of its current year. Two other similar cases may be hoped for before the next anniversary. Surely, the Eastern churches should be animated to extend their fostering care far and wide in these frontier settlements, seeing their benefactions are bestowed upon a grateful people, and are productive of such rapid results. Who could have thought, when the first church was formed in Iowa, ten years ago, that so soon there would be fifty-two, besides those of other denominations; that sixteen of those churches would, in 1848, worship in their own sanctuaries, erected at a cost of from $300 to $4,000 each—seven of them without any aid from abroad, and two more with only trifling assistance?

And all this religious enterprise has been elicited by the Divine blessing on the timely intervention of Home Missions. The report of the Agent, Rev. JULIUS A. REED, affirms, that "not one of those churches could have sustained the institutions of the Gospel unaided. The ministers who are now here could not have come without assistance, or if here, they could not have continued in the work without traversing large districts, enduring great privations, and still laboring almost in vain. Had we received no aid from abroad, I am fully persuaded there would not now be six efficient churches in our connexion in this State."

"The causes which have produced such rapid growth of numbers and of necessity on our western borders, are still in full operation. Twenty-five counties in Iowa are destitute of all Congregational or Presbyterian preaching whatever; four receive missionary labor for a small part of the time; twelve have one missionary in each; and only seven have a more liberal supply. The population, now reckoned at 125,000, already stretches up our rivers from forty to one hundred miles further than our missionaries have penetrated; and soon all the space enclosed by the constitutional boundaries of the state will be sprinkled over with the dwellings of men. Our destitutions, we fear, must increase upon our hands, and fields now beginning to bud, must wither like the desert. We greatly need ten additional missionaries to supply the destitute churches and settlements in the older counties, and missionaries cannot be stationed too soon in one half of the twenty-five counties now unoccupied. O that the churches would come up to the work of supplying the whole land with the preached Gospel, and give, as they are fully able to do, a devoted minister to every destitute settlement within our borders!"

CONCLUSION.

From the foregoing illustrations of the great field, and of the Society's attempts to cultivate it, it is evident that the undertaking to supply the Gospel to our countrymen has one element, that insures its vitality for an indefinite period to come; and that is, its largeness—its ever-expanding growth. This cause will not soon languish for want of an object—the philanthropy of its friends can never stagnate for lack of motive—so long as there is new territory to be occupied at home, or influence to be sent abroad. Human sagacity can set no limit to these efforts, which does not continually recede as we advance towards it. The survey we have taken of our Western Missions shows, that there is not one of them which does not require its ministerial force to be doubled without delay. This is the conviction of all evangelical Christians at the West. In whatever else they may differ, here all agree; all call for help—immediate help. They tell us, that with some of the good seed of the kingdom, there is an abundance of tares; that fanaticism is there, in every varying form; that skepticism has chosen that region to repeat its old experiment of society without a God; that Romanism meets them in all the leading points of traffic and influence, dazzling the multitude with her imposing structures and ceremonies, affecting a zeal for liberal principles in education and government, and allying herself with political questions so as to exert a controlling influence on the civil welfare of the West. We ourselves see changes going on, which, were they not so noiseless and steady, would startle us into activity. We see the population of the Great Valley growing so much faster than that of the East, that in 1850 the former will be to the latter as 5 to 4; and in two years the western states will have a majority of a million and a half of people—enough to send twenty representatives to Congress, and to turn, if they choose, the scale of national legislation. We see the effect of annexation and conquest in widening the sphere of our work, and greatly increasing the moral obstacles to its prosecution. Moreover, who can foretell what additional burdens may be thrown upon us by the disturbances in Europe? The example of our civil liberty and our free churches has told with amazing power on the venerable abuses of the old world. Sparks wafted from our altars have lighted there, and the fire they have kindled has been smouldering and creeping silently among the structures of ages, until, at length, it bursts forth with irrepressible fury, and wraps all Europe in flames. What is our duty to the nations, what to ourselves, in circumstance like these? Can we expect the evangelical churches of Britain and the Continent to do much for the great cause of human salvation, further than to keep themselves from being swept away in this whirlwind of revolution? And where, but to the conservative power of our republic, baptized into the name and Spirit of Christ, can the friends of free principles and evangelical truth look with hope? It is not improbable, that in some portions of the agitated states, civil discord may long continue. Private affairs must suffer; domestic ties and business relations will be sundered; myriads, amid so many changes, can never again feel at home in their native land. Political schemers and visionaries may fail to re-construct the society which they have disorganized. Institutions and prejudices that have reposed on their foundations for centuries, may be upheaved and dashed by the explosion; but they who fired the train will not be able to collect and reduce again the ruins to order and beauty. Whatever else may happen—whoever succeeds, and whoever fails—immense numbers of immigrants, the debris of European society, will inevitably be cast upon our shores. These will join the accumulating crowds who have entered our States—for the last year at the rate of 800 a day—and will take their places without delay at the polls, and in all our social affairs, and contribute their full share in the determination of our future character and destiny.

Here, then, is an emergency, such as God has not imposed on any other nation. It is one that calls for a degree of consecration to which, we fear, our christian people are yet strangers. It requires a faith, an energy, a perseverance in prayer and giving and action, to which we have not yet attained. It is needful that we should all be missionaries; that we should "teach, every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord." The least that we can do, is to send out and sustain the living ministry. And we must do this in season. The world will not wait for us, as it has done in times past. Causes produce their results quicker than they were wont; elemental principles work out their issues sooner, in a day of steam-ships and electric telegraphs. And we cannot afford to lose longer time; we must see to it, that every man in the land has the offer of the Gospel, and is made to understand its terms; that we have everywhere missionaries, in such numbers and of such spirit, that they shall out-labor all other laborers, and out-teach all other teachers. And in this effort, the alternative is, success or ruin. Such are the causes mingled here, and so intense and rapid their action, that unless the Gospel gain the ascendancy, like those States which have already gone down to the grave of nations, we too shall perish in our sins—perish as a Church; perish as a free republic; perish as a great moral and political light held up to the view of all the kirkdreds of the earth!

But though such are our dangers, we cannot admit that they are yet our fears. There is so much in our national history, that looks as if God intended to use the American people for the salvation of the world, that we expect to see them more and more fitted for this high destiny. And surely, the experience of this Society, as well as that of other institutions for home benevolence, confirms such a hope. The hand of God has visibly been in its progress; and his Spirit is even now ratifying its labors by the seal of his converting grace. Everywhere, a growing success attends it. Everywhere, the voice of approval and gratitude rewards its sacrifices. Everywhere new openings are announced, and new pleas are urged for operations on a larger scale. It is impossible to compare the principal fields where this Society has labored, as they were when it was organized, with what they have now become, without feeling how precious is that Gospel which works such transformations; how beautiful on the mountains, and on the savannas of our land, are the feet of them who preach it; and how blessed are the people whose prayers and alms, in sustaining those heralds, have come up as a memorial before God!

It is, therefore, with confidence in the Divine approval and aid, that the Committee now invite their associates in this Institution to a more vigorous prosecution of Home Missions, than ever before. The time for this has come. The destitute who have nowhere else to look, expect it. The churches who have built up this Society expect it, and will sustain it. Christ expects it, and will crown it with success. He, "whom not having seen, we love; in whom, though now we see him not, yet believing, we rejoice," IS WITH US; and so long as we labor in obedient faith, he WILL BE with us, always, even to the end!

Relation of Auxiliary Societies, Agencies and Committees of Missions to the A. H. M. S.; Applications, &c.

State and other large Auxiliaries.

Most of the State Missionary Societies were in existence before the formation of the National Society, and some of them—as the Missionary Societies of Connecticut and Massachusetts—were among the earliest organized efforts in our country for sending the Gospel to the destitute. They have voluntarily connected themselves as Auxiliaries with the A. H. M. S., from a conviction that greater unity of plan and efficiency in action would thereby be promoted.

The terms by which such Auxiliaries—acting on the principles of the Parent Society, undertaking the supply of the destitute within their own bounds, and paying over their surplus funds to the Parent Institution—are connected with the Parent Society, are such as to secure the following objects, viz:

First—The Auxiliary is not superseded or overshadowed by the National Institution, but on the contrary, is invigorated and sustained by connection with it. This is secured by the provision that the Auxiliary is the sole agency for this cause that operates on its field. It controls all appointments in the state to which it belongs. From it alone, so far as its means will allow, the feeble churches receive assistance. Thus, a direct relation and strong attachment is cherished towards it, in the hearts of the ministers and churches.

Again—While the local operations of the Auxiliary are thus encouraged and sustained, its connection with the Parent Society is such as to awaken an interest in the destitute beyond its own limits, and afford facilities for reaching them. It is not only a Society for local purposes, but it is also a branch of the National Society, and as such, has the control of all agencies for the collection of funds within its own field, and can direct the manner in which its surplus resources shall be expended beyond its own limits. Thus, the state and other large Auxiliaries are not merely organizations to help the Parent Society; they are integral parts of it, bound together in one whole by a common interest in, and free access, through the Parent Society, to the great field to be occupied, and governed by the same general principles and rules in carrying on their work.

Agents and Agencies.

Besides taking up contributions for Home Missions, the Agents of the A. H. M. S., exercise a general superintendence of the operations of the Society within their respective fields. By correspondence and personal visitation, they ascertain the wants of the destitute; assist them to obtain the preaching of the Gospel; and instruct and encourage them to develop their own means for its support. They receive applications for aid, and make such preliminary examination as may be necessary before submitting them for the action of the Executive Committee; and in other ways labor to insure a judicious and economical application of the Society's funds. At present, the Society has in its employ no merely collecting Agents, nor any whose services are not required for other purposes in the regions where they labor. The Secretaries of several of the larger Auxiliaries, are also the Agents for this cause in their respective bounds.

In certain districts, where the duties of an Agent are likely to be peculiarly responsible, there is associated with him a board of counsellors selected from the region of his labors, called an Agency. These Boards of Agency differ from Auxiliary Societies, in that they have no independent existence, but are appointed by the Executive Committee from year to year, and are governed by rules which the Committee prescribe. Their office is to counsel and direct the Agent in carrying out the principles of the Society, and to give advice in relation to such local matters as may be submitted to them by the Executive Committee. The persons composing a Board of Agency, are selected for their intelligence and interest in this cause, and their influence in promoting it; and are so distributed over the field as to secure a personal acquaintance with its condition. The Agent of the Society is also the Secretary of the Agency with which he is associated.

These boards of counsel might have not been necessary, had the ecclesiastical bodies on the ground been able and disposed to pay sufficient attention to the missionary work, and to act as its directors in their respective bounds. But the ministers composing them are usually scattered over a wide extent of territory, and meet but seldom, and only at seasons when they are much occupied with other business; and accordingly it has been necessary in some cases to organize agencies for this specific work. But in other cases, Synods, Presbyteries and Associations have chosen to act as Auxiliaries to the Society, examining into the condition of the destitute within their bounds, and recommending the appropriate action for their relief. Ecclesiastical bodies thus related to the A. H. M. S. act through

Committees of Missions.

The A. H. M. S. has ever regarded the ecclesiastical bodies as the appropriate judges of the standing of their own ministers, and of the wants of the churches in their connexion. Accordingly, the commission issued to every missionary requires that his credentials be acceptable to that ministerial body of his denomination, within whose bounds he is appointed to labor. And the various Presbyteries, Associations, &c., are invited to appoint, each, a Committee of Missions from its own members to receive applications from its churches, and suggest to the Society the action proper in each case. Such a Committee constitutes the official source to which reference can be had for information and advice, in all matters pertaining to missions in the connexion to which it belongs. This mode of co-operation has been preferred by numerous ecclesiastical bodies, from the first formation of the Society. It guaranties to the churches of each denomination represented in the Society, that their respective claims shall be fairly considered, with all the advantage of having the endorsement of the body to which they belong. The advice of such a Committee, acting in the name and by the direction of the ecclesiastical body to which they belong, is regarded as the highest authority in matters pertaining to the standing of ministers and churches in their connection, and has the same influence with the Society, as that of a Board of Agency appointed by itself.

There is one limitation to this influence, however, which ought to be stated. Should any ecclesiastical body so far swerve from the principles of truth and Gospel order, as not to retain the fellowship and confidence of the great body of the Presbyterian and Congregational churches in our land, that fact would cause its recommendations not to be respected, as a basis of action, by the Executive Committee.

As cases may occur in which the feeble churches may not be aware of the existence of any Board of Agency, or Committee of Missions, through whom to apply for aid, a general provision is made, that applications may be vouched by any two ministers of known and approved standing, who can certify to the facts of the case. If the information thus given is not sufficient, other facts are sought by the Executive Committee with as little delay as practicable, from the most authentic sources from which they can be obtained.

Such, briefly, are the relations of the American Home Missionary Society to the various organs, through which the community seeks to act out its missionary feeling. It will be seen that this plan secures the united action, in the missionary work, of those whose views of doctrine and church order admit of co-operation, and whose interests in the great field are essentially the same. This combination insures a homogeneous policy as to the manner and amount of appropriations, and the qualifications of missionaries; it has discouraged sectional feelings, and diffused throughout each part an interest in all the rest; and thus has formed ties between the West and the East, along which have passed, from the latter to the former, a silent and invisible current of moral influences, more valuable, if possible, than all pecuniary grants. At the same time, the connection of the Parent Society with the various Associations that act with it, is such as to secure to them entire freedom in the missionary work, in their respective spheres, and an influence beyond them, in cultivating the waste places of our common country.

Applications for Aid.

Feeble congregations, applying for aid in supporting the Gospel, are requested to embody in their applications the following particulars, viz:

The name of the church or congregation; the number of communicants, and the average number of attendants on public worship; the denomination and size of congregations immediately contiguous, with the distance to their places of worship; the total amount of salary which the applicants propose to make up; the largest portion of that salary which they can raise for the given time, and the least amount that will suffice from the Society; whether the minister for whom a commission is desired, is the pastor of the church, or if not, whether any arrangements are made, or contemplated in the course of the year, with reference to his instalment. These statements should be signed by the trustees and elders or deacons, or by a committee of the congregation, and confirmed by the certificate of two or more clergymen of good standing, acquainted with the facts. Also—

The name and post office address of the minister whose services they desire to secure; his credentials; and the certificate of two or more ministers of known standing, as to his general character for piety, zeal and acceptableness as a minister of the Gospel, and his adaptedness to this particular field of labor.

Where the ecclesiastical body with which a church is connected has a "Committee of Missions" to act in their behalf, this Committee are the proper persons to certify the statements of the church, the standing of the minister and his propects of usefulness in the place where his services are desired ; and the application should, in all cases, be sent to them for their endorsement and recommendation.

As a general rule, the appropriations of the A. H. M. S. are for twelve months from the date of the application ; at the end of which, if further aid be needed, a new application must be made, containing all the particulars above stated, and endorsed and recommended in like manner. And each congregation applying for renewed aid, should furnish in addition to other testimonials, the certificate of the missionary, that they have fulfilled their previous pledges for his support.

It is desirable that applications should be addressed to the care of the Agent, Agency or Auxiliary Society of the A. H. M. S., for the region where the applicants reside ; but in case of doubt as to the name or residence of such Agent, or the existence of such Agency or Auxiliary, applications may be sent directly to the office of the Parent Society, addressed to one of the Secretaries.

Addresses at the Twenty Second Anniversary.

Address of Rev. William T. Dwight, D. D., of Portland, Me.,

In support of the following Resolution :

Resolved, That the magnitude of the enterprise in which this Society is engaged, and our anticipations of ultimate success, urge its friends to increased efforts in its behalf.

The circle of influence in which most men are destined to walk, is narrow. Here and there are seen a favored few who sway multitudes around them, who become landmarks and beacon lights to future men and ages ; but as to the vast majority, their power to do good or to do evil is relatively little. Yet what we cannot effect singly we may often secure by combination, and there are few associations, indeed, in connection with which we may hope to accomplish so great an amount of good as when co-operating with this Society. The Resolution speaks of the magnitude of the enterprise in which, as your Report informs us, it has, now been for twenty-two years engaged, and if we would distinctly perceive this, we should survey the vast extent of country over which it is diffusing its missionaries. Its field of labor begins at the St. Croix, and extends through the whole of New England, it thence stretches through New York and Pennsylvania westward, including the regions watered by the Ohio on the one side and those great insular seas on the other; and thence embosoming "the Father of Waters," extends southward to the Gulf, and is now also widening into Texas and Oregon. Its area is six, if not eight, times that of the British isles, and is scarcely inferior to that of southern Europe. Rome did not achieve the conquest of Italy for centuries after she had assumed a distinct existence, but your Society, within twenty-two years from its organization, has spread its protecting wings over many times a larger territory than her kings and consuls ever dreamed of subjecting. Our population moves not westward with the rapidity of the bird, but we have already covered regions so wide that the bird of swiftest wing would tire in flying over them. In the little State in which I reside; for the words, little and great, Sir, are relative words merely; in Maine, whose area is not far from that of Scotland or Ireland, we think much of our own subordinate enterprise, in which eighty missionaries are engaged; but your Society is now employing more than a thousand missionaries! And this vast region, as we know, is yearly widening, just as the circle spreads outward on the lake's smooth surface. The youngest child here present may yet see an unbroken line of villages from the Atlantic to the Pacific; and throughout this whole immense region, wherever thousands of now feeble churches are to be nurtured into strength, or ten thousand churches not now existing are to be summoned into life, your Society, with other kindred associations, is to operate. You must occupy this vast territory by your thousand missionaries, and speedily by your two thousand and your three thousand missionaries, scattering everywhere the seed of life, if you would not consign it to hopeless sterility and death.

But this is only one aspect of the magnitude of the enterprise; the discordance of the moral elements, which intermingle throughout the great western valley, doubles the labor of this Society. The minister in New England and in the neighboring States addresses a homogeneous congregation on the Sabbath; in habits, customs, creed, language, sympathies, his hearers can respond harmoniously to him and to one another. But the dialects of Babel were not more diverse than are, geographically, the classes which are aggregated together in the West. First, there are the two great masses of Americans and Europeans, and then each of these masses is composed of numberless subdivisions. The Yankee, the Dutchman from New York, the emigrant from the State of William Penn, the Southerner, the Creole, are all represented; and there also we see the Norwegian, thither Germany, once the officina gentium for ancient Europe, now sends her sons from every kingdom, and grand duchy, and principality, and free city. There also meet the North and the South Briton, the phlegmatic Hollander, the volatile Frenchman, (he can be serious enough, as we now see, whenever necessary,) the poor, half civilized native of Catholic Ireland, with the wanderers from sunny Italy and Spain. Never was there such a congeries from distant climates and tongues since the days of imperial Rome, when Dacian and Hun, Celt and Goth, Gaul and Moor, Parthian and Persian, were all swept thither as to their common centre and formed one vast fermenting mass. Yes, Sir, our missionaries are there to preach the Gospel to our brethren who are born free-men and to the native subjects of European despots; to Protestants and Catholics, in the numberless denominations of the one, and in the dead unity of the other; to religionists of every name and temperament, and to skeptics as diverse—the Campbellite, the Mormon, the follower of Kneeland, and every other. Milton's Chaos, with its warring atoms of hot and cold, and moist and dry, was not more discordant than are these moral elements which are thus most strangely mingling. Now, it is the professed design of the Home Missionary Society, it is the very end and aim of its institution and operations, to bring these repellent elements into harmony, to fuse all these diverse materials into one great homogeneous mass: and what enterprise can surpass this in its magnitude! We, whose home is here in the East, can scarcely conceive of its arduousness; neither our Puritan ancestors who laid the foundations, nor their descendants who are still busy in erecting the corresponding fabric, have undertaken so exhausting a task. Arduous as it is, it is equally noble and august, and what an amount of effort, of prayer, of self-denial, of perseverance, does it not require; an amount to be never stationary, but steadily augmenting!

Yet, even these are not the entire difficulties which are to be surmounted. A mediator between two hostile parties may be greeted as the personal friend of each, and may thus succeed in reconciling them to one another. But your Society sends out many of its missionaries among those, who are directly hostile to its great object and to its agents. I need not evince this by speaking particularly of that wild, fierce, independence of spirit which distinguishes the West—a spirit which prescribes to itself its own laws, and which so often breaks through the laws of the land, as mere cobwebs, when fettering its motions. In that rank soil, bordering on one side the deserts of the savage and stretching on the other towards the genial, healthy cultivation of our own region, the moral vegetation, if often rich, is also often deadly. Neither shall I but momentarily allude to the wide spread infidelity of that region, the fairest soil for the skeptic and his coadjutors to be found on the western continent. In our own happy region the infidel is ordinarily ashamed to avow himself, he must combine with his fellows and even then blurt out his dogmas in the disguise of a popular reformer: or, like other ill omened birds, he deems himself safe only when in darkness. But the infidel of the West is not thus restrained; he may trample on the Bible, the Church, the Sabbath, and every pillar even of natural religion—often indeed unsupported and condemned by the majority around him, but often confident that those who are with him are more than they who are against him. But I must distinctly allude to one influence, which is ever pre-eminently hostile to your Society and its missionaries—that of Romanism. It is Romanism, substituting its traditions, its decrees of councils, and its encyclical letters from the Vatican, for the Bible; it is Romanism, with its interceding priests on earth, with the interceding virgin, and the host of interceding angels and canonized saints above, instead of Him who ever liveth to make intercession for His followers: it is Romanism, with its constant sacrifice of the mass, instead of the one great propitiation which Christ has offered: it is Romanism, with its cathedrals and consecrated churches, and solemn processions, and splendid vestments, and vesper chants, instead of our sanctuaries and spiritual worship; which you are there constantly to encounter. Her characteristic spirit has never changed. She is now, as ever, at heart, the enemy of civil liberty, because she knows that civil liberty is the ally and protector of religious liberty,—which she dreads still more, for her despotism over the conscience has ever been essential to her supremacy. Yes, Romanism will assume every Protean shape to beguile the unwary, but she is still the same in every age, unchangeable and irreconcilable.

And now tell me what other enterprise transcends this in its magnitude; either in the arduousness of its difficulties, or the grandeur of its results? It is a great work to raise the acorn into the giant oak of the forest, which defies the storms of centuries. We trace a great work, when we follow the rill southward from its first bubbling fountain, until swollen by the accession of a thousand larger and lesser tributaries, it pours its vast current, as "the Father of Waters," into the Gulf. The demagogue with all the other drummers and trumpeters of faction, and the two great parties around whose skirts these camp-followers always hang, deem their enterprise of electing a President every four years one of unequalled magnitude; an enterprise, whose appropriate results, together with most of the actors, are speedily lost in the midnight of oblivion. The work of the military chieftain, and that of the patriotic statesman, are also, in many of their issues, but temporary; but Gabriel and Michael might gladly co-operate in the labors of your Society. Aiming at the conversion and sanctification of these multitudes from the new world and the old world, seeking to edify in the faith these thousands of feeble churches, you are co-workers with the Highest, you rise into sympathy with the Savior, and into assimilation to His excellence.

But will this enterprise succeed—will it succeed? The hope of ultimate success, I need not remark, is indispensable to all persevering effort. The most patient instructor strives not to enlighten the pupil whom he sees to be fated to imbecility. The patriot, who discerns that his country's liberation is hopeless, strikes no longer the useless blow, but despairingly sheathes his sword. Nay, it is not irreverent to assert that the heart of Infinite Love itself would falter in its pulsations, were it to foresee failure in the execution of its designs. Jehovah perceives that His power is commensurate with His love, and He therefore rejoices in all His works. I would then observe, that our anticipations of ultimate success also urge us, as the friends of this Society, to increased efforts in its behalf. And did these anticipations rest solely on the simple instrumentality which its missionaries are employing, there would be a firm basis. This is the preaching of the Gospel, "the foolishness of preaching"—as so many deem it; the simple preaching of God's word, accompanied by pastoral instruction and other auxiliary means. You are restricted, or in apostolic language "shut up," to the use of this instrumentality, and you need none other. Were yours the policy of many associations, you might substitute indeed their machinery, their arts, for the word of God. Then you might send forth your missionaries to inculcate anew the philosophy of Plato or Aristotle, or import a shipload of French reformers to propagate the wonderful discoveries of St. Simonism and Fourierism. You might adopt the splendid pageants, and solemn forms, and Protean wiles of Romanism; or you might seek to ally the Church to the State—a union whose necessity is still asserted by some good men in England. Strange as is the delusion, they embrace it in their ignorance, and we must pardon them. But this Society, I repeat it, is "shut up" to its one simple instrumentality, the foolishness of preaching. And where, Sir, if not in this very matter, shall we discern how absolutely "the foolishness of God is wiser than men?" The preaching of the Gospel by penitent, forgiven men is not the worthless lever of Archimedes which, when rightly applied, was to change the position of the earth, or of so much dead matter, the thousand millionth part of a hair's breadth; it is the instrument to raise up the deathless spirit from the midnight and mire of sin, into fellowship in holiness and bliss with the Almighty. It is the preaching of your missionaries—not of Gabriel and his associates, for how could Gabriel discourse to men of the guilt of sin which he had never contracted, or of the need of forgiveness which he had never felt, or of the joys of salvation which he had never anticipated?—it is the preaching of your missionaries which is to cure and transform all this fierce energy into the meekness of the Gospel, which is to animate unnumbered hearts, now spiritually dead, not with a transient Promethean fire, but with the immortal flame of holiness. Here are sympathies awakened in those who preach and those who hear which begin at the Cross and rise upward to the throne of God. The instrumentality is like that of the rod of Moses—all powerful whenever God speaks the word. We need no other, we disclaim every other, for in this we see the pledge of ultimate success.

But hark! some one amid this audience may be saying, in the spirit of those who stood on this platform yesterday morning, "Why, the man is pleading for his own craft; he is one of the collateral descendants of Demetrius of Ephesus. He is indeed magnifying his office with a witness." Were there no Bible as our unerring oracle, there would be some point in such a rejoinder. Then they might again prate in some other language than that of blasphemy, or of ignorance worse than heathenish, about the Jesus of the former day as being superseded by the Jesus of the present day; then they might continue their efforts with some little hope to drive the ploughshare through the Church, the Sabbath, and the ministry of reconciliation. What, as the result of long years, have they accomplished? They have been applying their strange fire, but has the sacrifice ever been kindled from above? They may continue their efforts for years to come, but with no different issue. Some of them will probably die of mortified pride and vanity, in their own houses or in madhouses; some of them may return to common sense and common decency; and some may continue floundering from one quagmire to another, till they sink from our sight. Let us leave them!

pity, rather than in anger. The foolishness of preaching will, in its results, baffle all their predictions.

Have we not also another argument for success, in the supremacy of the American mind at the West. To pander to national egotism is always a paltry business, and this platform is the last place for it, but who knows not that in our own country the American mind, wherever it acts, takes the lead? America has been defined, in rather colloquial style, as being "Young John Bull, with his coat off;" and it is the American mind to which the preaching of the Gospel—this instrument of transcendent power—is precisely adapted. We are not accustomed to bow to authority as a substitute for reason, we demand sufficient evidence as the ground of our belief. "Come now, let us reason together," is the language of Jehovah, and this is the process by which the American conscience and heart is to be gained, at the West and at the East. Your missionaries need not shrink then, Sir, before the priests of Romanism. I know that many have been for years sounding the alarm concerning the fearful growth of Popery, as if ere a generation passes away, we were all to become serfs of the Man of Sin. So the poor, ignorant Romanist himself believes, and is already proverbially asserting that in twenty years American Protestantism is to become virtually extinct. Columbus who discovered America was a Catholic, Ferdinand and Isabella who sent him on his enterprise were of the same faith, and the then reigning Pope gave it his sanction; reasons enough, doubtless, to satisfy the emigrant hither from Ireland or Spain. But is the American mind to put on the livery of Romanism? I have seen within the past year the peasantry of Belgium and of France, nor can I wonder at their subjection to the triple crown of Rome, or rather to the superstitions inculcated by an artful priesthood. But what well educated Frenchman is a Roman Catholic, except from motives of policy? He knows not, even in idea, the nature of evangelical religion, and he must then call himself Romanist or skeptic. But will the American mind at the East or the West become the vassal of the Vatican? Will it prefer traditions and encyclical letters to the Bible; or the missal, in its unintelligible language, to our pure forms of worship; or the priest, as its confessor and absolver, to Him who seeth in secret? We have grown out of childhood, and are not to be dazzled by cathedrals, and gilded vestments, and painted windows. Our countrymen are men, and have put away these childish things; except here and there a few, who ought to be ashamed of themselves that they have learned no better. America, to become the handmaid of Romanism! Our country, with its Bibles, its free institutions, its educated ministry, its revivals of religion, its eighteen millions of Protestants—the land of all lands, where the tendencies of the two faiths are to be perfectly developed—to bow the knee to the Papacy, now in its dotage! If thus it is to be, then let them all go; let them go. Neither our country nor our faith will be worth preserving. But ere this shall be, the stars in their courses will a second time fight against Sisera. It is the dream of superannuation to augur otherwise.

Let me add,—The success attendant on your past labors is the pledge, the assurance, of your ultimate triumph. Let him who is desponding here, read the monthly Reports of your missionaries for the last five years, and he will despond no more. Wherever the pioneer of civilization has gone, levelling the forests, and opening the roads and enclosing the fields, there your missionaries have speedily followed, and soon churches have been gathered—sanctuaries erected—the dew of grace have plenteously distilled, and harvests of salvation have ripened for the Lord's granary. The transformation already wrought has outrun faith and hope, and how then can we doubt as to the issue? True, the contest between truth and error is still waging; never was the strife hotter than at the present moment, but judicious observers assure us that the victory is essentially already won. Where one American renounces the faith of his fathers, there are five conversions from Romanism. Yes, the skies are rapidly brightening, and the Sun of Righteousness is soon to rise full orb'd, dispelling forever these dense fogs and poisonous damps with his beams. Let us be but true to this Society, let every kindred association be duly strengthened, and under God, THE WORK IS DONE!

Address of John Thompson, Esq., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.,

In support of the following Resolution:

Resolved, That the thorough evangelization of the masses of the people is the only guaranty of Representative Democracy.

Our Country! its dangers and its hopes are themes of ever increasing interest. Well inquires the poet,

"Breathes there a man of soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said
This is my own, my native land?"

and whose heart does not heave with quicker pulsations, when he contemplates her welfare and her destiny? Stand upon some spur of the Alleghanies and look out upon the wide scene unfolded to the eye—upon the broad savannahs of the South; the lordly Ohio, dividing empires; upon the Father of Waters, sweeping through 3,000 miles of territory to the Gulf!—and away above, rich fields of grain skirted by the Lakes of the North, pouring their silver tides to the ocean:—See the wing and wheel of commerce upon every stream,—the hill sides dotted with flocks,—the valleys waving with corn,—our immense line of sea coast with its bays and harbors ploughed by the prows of every clime; and more than all this, 20 millions of souls working out, in their acts and history, that problem of political problems—whether man is capable of self government, and whether the form of government we have established is the most wisely adapted to secure such a result, of liberty to ourselves and our generations!

Sir, we may ordinarily suffer ourselves to grapple with the little, and the low. We may bound our vision by a narrow horizon, and run our feverish race of to-morrow in the footsteps of to-day; the circle of trite wants and petty cares, may absorb us from the cradle to the grave; but not thus is duty fulfilled or glory won;—not thus is the spirit that outwings the seraphim brought up to the measure of its immortal accomplishments, or familiarized with those splendors which make at once its light and its enjoyment. Let us rise to higher objects; let us look over a wider field; our country furnishes both. Observe the character of our population! It is diverse, yet homogeneous; it has great complexity of intellectual and moral aspect, and is yet pregnant with the elements of coalition. High in the van, and over all, predominates the Puritan element;—born in England, baptized in Holland, and transplanted and nurtured in the new world, it hath all the hardness of her granite hills, and the tenacity that divides forever among family lines without extinction; it enlarges by distance, and multiplies by division;—across the Sound, the Hudson, the Delaware, the Potomac; it grasps hands with Southern chivalry, and mingles the gracefulness of the high-souled cavalier with the steadfast severity of primitive manners. Along the Alabama, and the Mississippi, the blood of the Spaniard and the Frank mingles with the Anglo-Saxon and the German, and creates a race on this new virgin field, with novel ideas and sterner force;—while intermingling like threads in the woof of population are the masses that pour in streams of emigration upon our shores. The careless, impulsive, warm hearted Irishman; the frugal German; the fiery Gaul; the gallant Pole; losing their nationality among the people of the Eastern states; or preserving it longer in their neighborhood settlements skirting the beautiful prairies and openings of Iowa, Wisconsin, and Illinois.

This is the rough material. How is it employed? What the nature of its pursuits? In the cities, commerce, pleasure, fashion, are in the ascendant; here centre the consuming classes; while over the surface of this wide empire, are spread the manufacturers, the artisans, the farmer, the producing population, earning their bread by the sweat of their brow, with less of temptation, and less of guilt. As a general rule the instinct of selfishness governs the work of the hand, and the toil of the mind; wealth accumulates; the physical lords it over the intellectual; and in the race for competence and ease, where each starts or something like terms of equality, there is little leisure for the profundities of science, or the gracefulness of art. But we have not yet seen ourselves! This is not the nation; it is the material, not the building; it is the massive physical; the body, and not the soul.

The social and moral direction and impetus of all this mass of population, wealth and energy—what is it? Whither is it tending? This colors our character and marks our destiny.

Population and wealth only, may give little indication of either.

Austria has population and wealth; yet until within a few days the Austrian yoke lay more crushingly than ever upon the necks of her down-trodden millions, who were not permitted to see a newspaper, if they could read it, which had not passed the eyes of Metternich and his minions.

Russia has wealth and population; yet the stupid Muscovite is transferred with the estate on which he is born and dies—an eternal hereditary serf, not able to comprehend the modernized policy of a court and camp that in all but its democratic tendencies idolizes the march of the 19th century, and thus widens daily the intervallum between the power of the throne and the masses that uphold it.

France has wealth and population; yet she is uneasy as the troubled sea, and impelled by a great want, theorizes, and theorizes frantically, her mind filled with alternate hope and horror, with former successes and former failures. Liberty! liberty! Equality!—her everlasting cry, whether in the mouth of Mirabeau or Danton, Napoleon or Lafayette, Lamartine or De Tocqueville.

Spain, Ireland, Mexico—all have population and wealth, yet no repose, no security, no happiness. Even Italy seems waking from the sleep of ages, and dares indulge the hope of a deliverance, she will never have accorded from the power she supplicates; she already begins to feel that she will secure her political rights, not by asking, but by taking.

Where lies the difficulty? The sciences were studied, the arts born and nurtured on the soil they occupy. The taste of the world does them homage, and performs her pilgrimage to the homes they yet inhabit. Temples and shrines, gorgeous with wealth, hoary with years, and made affluent by the offerings of unnumbered worshippers, lift tower and turret to the eye, rebuking Passion into Silence, and Irreverence into Awe!

Where lies the defect? Armies and navies spring forth at the bidding, and every foot of frontier bristles with ramparts of flesh and steel. Have we not all the elements of empire? Soil, population, wealth, industry, arts, sciences; are not these the certain instruments of happiness? By no means! They are the shell, not the kernel!—no nation can either prosper or last without popular virtue—not the virtue of the ancients—not fortitude, bravery, stoicism, patience, nor the thirst of glory, or the heroism that scorns even death;—but christian virtue, the virtue of the Bible, in all its purity, and life, and generous consecration! Religion, Protestant religion, is our great national want, as it is our great national security. Our strength and perpetuity depend upon the people, in a sense far more significant than can be applied to other governments. In the language of Milton in his "tenure of Kings and Magistrates," adopted by our Declaration of Independence, the sovereignty is in the people inalienably, and is imparted only by representation, which is likewise the theory of our national and state constitutions; then how can we live, if the masses want intelligence or virtue. Under different governments, where the few rule, if the few are enlightened and religious, the government may go on; but here, where all rule by representation, and where one representative, chosen by one vote, in some far corner of the republic, may cast the die of peace or war, wrap around it the weeds of sorrow, or bathe it in tears; how doubly important that every voter have a head to perceive, and a heart to feel his responsibility to his country and to his God. And mark well if the august experiment France is now making a third time within about half a century, eventuates any better than the former ones, it will be because she introduces the elements of christian morals into the effervescence of her political life; she can be saved, no better by the reign of socialism or philosophy, than by that of the goddess of reason. I do not believe any nation can endure on the basis of democratic equality and universal suffrage, unless through the influence of a pervading Protestant Christianity. Men may struggle and philosophize, and electioneer, and make constitutions and laws, but all in vain, it will end in despotism or anarchy. No people can run the course of America, unless inspired with the religious principles and faith that most prominently distinguishes America.

The Morals of Politics and of Legislation! Who hears of them? Where are they discussed? by what party meeting? How many representatives recognize and avow the authority of Jehovah in their doings? The servant is not above his masters. The officer is not purer than those who send him. He is their mouth-piece, exponent, chosen to answer their expectations and consummate their wishes. How is our National Congress to be purified? I answer, by purifying those who send them, the People. By what means shall this be effected? By the Tract, the Bible, the Christian Church and Ministry. There should be no voting where there are no Christian influences to keep things even. Not that I would amalgamate, or connect the Church with the State, as a machine to be wielded as an instrument of secular power; it mars her beauty and destroys her spirituality. She can no more shout in the rear of a mob than carry the train of royalty. She abjures all connexion by political ligaments with state authority, because her kingdom is not of this world. But her spirit and principles are the only cement of popular institutions. It is in this aspect that the Home Missionary Society acts as a great engine of self-preservation. It has done more in our new settlements to keep the fountains of political influence and power pure and safe, than all others together. It furnishes the living, breathing, speaking mouth-piece. The Tract is lost or destroyed, the Bible lies unopened upon the shelf, and has no voice to arrest the tides of worldliness and vice that flood our new and sparse settlements, but the patient Missionary sees, and speaks, and prays; he warns, and counsels, and consoles; he is a man, with fine sympathies, and feelings, and speaks to men of like passions with himself; who know how to appreciate his sacrifices and self-denial for their good; and the eye, the ear, the soul, are arrested, and God is invoked, honored and loved. Besides, there is something far more potent in the establishment of a church in a new settlement, than is often imagined. As a Politico-economic instrument, it furnishes a rallying point, and a refuge; it hath a prestige that elevates and ennobles; a home-like and familiar interest, that makes it a point of radiation, as well as of concentration, which imparts an influence at the same time that it receives an homage. There may be neither "marble dome, nor lofty spire." A few timid spirits may gather into the log dwelling, through whose openings the winds whistle and the stars look down, but there, in the piety of that spiritual gathering, is a power, that will hold steady the pillars of state, on which rests the immense dome of twenty-eight sovereign confederacies.

He who gives to Home Missions a liberal support, takes care of himself—builds a palace for his children. What speaks to the soul with more interest than the inquiry, What will be the fate of my children when I am gone? Alas! that in the strife of selfishness and mad ambition, we should look so much to the present and so little to the future; grasping like children the bauble of the moment; and heed not that the foundations of our national security are sinking.

I call, not only upon the Christian, but upon the patriot, the lover of his country and of his race, the believer in his country's institutions—who looks with pride to the flag that indicates her existence and her glory—I call upon him to cease his feverish chase after men and office; to look away from the high in power and influence, down upon the masses that create them. Here is the root of the tree that has death or healing in its leaves. Here the bubbling fountains that need the cleansing of religious principle before they spread over the surface of the body politic. Our power lies in no gleaming spear, or floating admirals; these are but its instruments and appliances. It dwells in the workshops, the manufactories, on the open fields, by the firesides, in the homes and haunts of our wide spread population; and this virtue comes not of nature; it is a foreign element and must be first implanted in each individual.

So vital is the labor of Home Missions that it would be a national blessing to increase its income tenfold, from the national coffers. In the year ending in 1847 about $120,000 were expended in all its outlays, while we have spent fifty millions in conquering a sister Republic, and perhaps may spend twenty millions more for territory we do not need, and which would come to us when inhabited, like Texas, by the free consent of its own population.

And yet, war demoralizes only. No one on the field of carnage, ever became a better citizen or a better man, without a miracle. But the Home Missionary goes out with no "plumed troops, nor pride, nor pomp, nor circumstance of war," but in a quiet, unostentatious way, toils day after day, with a zeal that knows no abatement, and a self-denial that pioneer life alone can equal. Like the elements, his efforts are without noise or commotion, but like them, he makes the desert smile with beauty and the waste places to be like the garden of the Lord!

Already many tremble at the experiment of popular suffrage; the strife, fury, recklessness, violence and perjury at the polls, in many places, give mournful augury of our safety, and keep away numbers who fear to mingle in the conflict; unprincipled demagoguism and strife for office stimulate, rather than repress this.

Where is the conservatism? Where the safety? No where but in those religious principles which the Home Missionary inculcates, and which are to save us, if we are saved.

The commotions of other nations add fearfulness every hour to our position. We stand a beacon to the world! Anchored as on a rock, we see the wrecks of the past floating by us; thrones, dominions, principalities, powers, all the pomp and affluence of empire hurrying by into the womb of oblivion! Popular intelligence and virtue alone can preserve us: these are the twin stars that illumine the gulf and stream along the night of time. Oh that we may awake before waking will be in vain!

Political power, with the steadiness of destiny itself, sweeps onward to the sunset. In vain we question the wisdom of legislators, our doings must be with their masters. Year by year, thousands upon thousands swell this army, until they wield the functions of a political omnipotence. The young giant of the West, as we say figuratively, grows every moment; already his step upon the deck of the ship of state makes her quiver and tremble in every joint. He must be softened, humanized, christianized, or he can wreck us all with a blow of his colossal arm. Constitutions, laws, governments, political checks, balances and restraints, are the green withes of the Philistines that are severed like the flax; they have no inherent power, they afford no security, except as they embrace and secure the moral respect of the community. The pulsations of the great popular heart must beat responsive to moral authority. Our moral and religious educational influences are the sole remaining elements to give permanence to a democracy.

The experiment has been tried over and over again without this, and failed. Without this, sooner or later we fall into the reign of licentiousness or terror. We go back to despotism, or forward through blood.

God only can save the republic, and Home Missions seem his right arm, for such an accomplishment. Let the man that looks to his country's welfare sustain them; that confides in our free institutions, sustain them; that hopes in the advancement of his race, sustain them; that fears his God and loves Zion, sustain them; and then, when in after years this agency does its work of beneficence, and carries forward its holy achievements, it will give endurance to the amity of these confederated republics, and overleaping state lines and geographical limits, pour the sweetness and love of a universal brotherhood, through the hearts of its increasing millions. And while other nations rise and fall, while anxiety, and commotion, and blood darken, or even crimson the picture of their folly or their fate, we shall stand impregnable on the firm foundations of religious principle, exemplifying the happiness and glory of that nation whose God is the Lord.

Home Missions.

The Home Missionary Society, a Society for the World.

While success in christian effort is all from God, there are some nations as well as individuals, that possesses peculiar qualifications for extensive usefulness. Such being the fact, it is not paying too high a tribute to intellect or power, nor is it trusting too much to an arm of flesh to say, that the conversion of men possessing extraordinary powers for usefulness is specially to be sought. Admit this, and it follows that our countrymen have special claims upon us. They are not the ignorant, half-starved hordes of Asia, nor the debased, half-brutalized masses that swarm in numerous other portions of the pagan world. They are good and true Saxon men, with the intellect, energy and perseverance of the old Puritan stock. Convert them, and they will be worth something to the Church in her conflicts with the hosts of error and sin. One can chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight. Let their great hearts and intellects become imbued with the spirit of our holy religion—let the impulsive power of divine love become to them the main spring of action, and, under the whole heaven, there are no men better adapted than they to become workers together with God in the world's conversion. Evangelize America, and you bring into the field a nation peculiarly adapted to prosecute the work of universal evangelization. Need we proof, then, that the Home Missionary Society is prosecuting a great and an important work, and that it should be far more liberally supplied with funds than it has hitherto been? It is no enemy, nor even rival of the Foreign Mission enterprise. It forgets not that the field is the world—it is striving to leaven those particles which, in their turn, shall most effectually leaven others, and to place the light of life in the hands of a nation possessing more than ordinary power and facilities for diffusing that light through all lands. If we estimate aright our national position, what Judea was to the Gentile world, and more than this, we may be to pagan nations. Placed on the tops of the mountains, we cannot be hid. If we are thoroughly illuminated with light from the celestial glory, till turret, and hill top, and temple are bathed therein, then “—— Shall our radiance stream afar, Wide as the heathen nations are,”

and we shall become as beacon lights in the loud, dark night storm, to guide men, long tossed upon the oceans of error, to a haven of rest. Nations yet unborn shall feel our influence, and call us blessed. We reach then this result. THE HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY IS, IN FACT, THOUGH NOT IN NAME, A MISSIONARY SOCIETY FOR THE WORLD.—[Rev. Mr. Brierty.]

Achievements of Home Missions.

At the lowest calculation, two thousand of the churches in this country, of our denomination, owe their existence and continuance, one or both, to the cause of Home Missions. Blot from our map these two thousand churches of our Lord Jesus Christ, put out the fires that burn upon their altars, seal up the innumerable streams of christian influence, and how disastrous and blighting would be the effect upon all the interests of the church and the nation!

But, if we would have any adequate conception of the effects wrought by these missions, we must do something more than sit down and count up churches and ministers and Sabbath school scholars and communicants, whether by thousands or tens of thousands. We cannot reckon here by the head, as patriarchs used to do in the case of their sheep and oxen and camels. There are unseen influences streaming out in every direction from this agency, innumerable as the stars of heaven, and more potent than they are numerous. Every church it plants is a city set on a hill, and a beacon-light on the perilous coast of life, pouring its celestial rays upon all the surrounding midnight, warning off the tempest-tossed from inevitable ruin, and guiding them into the port of safety. Nothing short of the effulgence of the judgment day can discover the legion of secret, silent, and yet all-powerful influences of even a single one of these churches.

But we shall yet see greater things than these. What Home Missions have done is but the small dust of the balance compared with what they are destined to do. We have no idea that God is going to let us off so. We expect to have the poor with us, if not always, many years yet, and enjoy the luxury of doing them good and sharing their burdens. There remaineth very much land in that eastern heritage yet to be possessed, yet to be reclaimed from the power of the devil and given to the saints of the Most High. And we anticipate long years of iron-service, and severe trial of our faith, before the light penetrates all our extended and unbroken forests, and the songs of salvation are echoed all along our northern frontiers, and roll their numbers down our numerous valleys, stretching from the Canadas to the Atlantic. And what is true of what we sometimes term “the great East,” is truer still of greater West and South. There is a Herculean task yet to be performed, a long and a mighty struggle yet to be made. This we ought to understand, and buckle on our armor, and get ready for the work.—[Rev. E. Thurston.]

A Lesson from the Past.

Where do we now send the Gospel? To India, to Syria, to Persia, to Africa. But has it never occurred to you that these very countries have ever had the Gospel, ever received and believed it; and that, long before we or our fathers had it, or were even in existence as a nation? How comes this, then? The answer is, they neglected the gift of Heaven—they suffered the lamp to go out—they closed the eye, and so became full of darkness. Shall we follow the example of these nations? Shall we permit this country to become an irreligious and unchristian land? If we do so, I ask not how long it will be ere our foreign operations cease, but how long ere these very nations, whom we have reclaimed from heathenism, shall be under the necessity of sending missionaries to our shores!—[Rev. J. Haven.]

Importance of the A. H. M. S. to the next generation.

I have a family of children, whose welfare in time, and whose eternal salvation is to be secured or lost in the great valley of the West; and what father, standing at the head of a large family, can follow them down the stream of time, and not deeply desire that they and their posterity may all have their characters formed under the institutions of the Gospel—that all may be partakers of salvation! For securing this end, my hopes center in your Society more than in any earthly instrumentality. May the Lord continue and greatly augment its blessed influence, till our whole land shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.

How shall the Victory be gained?

The attentive reader of the details of the battles in Mexico, can be at no loss to account for the success of the American arms. So far as human agency is concerned, the result has been owing to the contempt of life compared with conquest, manifested by the army, and especially by its officers. In every position of peril, no matter how great the odds against them, a stern and invincible will has borne them on, in the very teeth of bayonets and batteries. To be shot, stabbed, blown to pieces by bombs, is no consideration, if it be the price of success. Such perfect recklessness as to their own safety, such utter abandonment even of life, has never been exceeded in any troops.

Now, from the conduct of our soldiers in this unhappy war, cannot some good be gained, in the example which they set to the followers of the Prince of peace? With a devotion to the interests of Zion, such as the warrior shows for the quarrel of his country, what might not be achieved? And does not the infinitely nobler aim of the Christian warrant such a degree of devotion? Results transcending in magnitude the fate of empires hang on the conflict. The Captain of our salvation has shed his own blood for each, for even the humblest of the people. Would they go into the moral strife that now is waged, with a determination to succeed, cost what it might of wealth, or health, or life—did each feel, "It is not important for me to be rich, but I must be useful;—it is not essential that men should honor me, but it is essential that their souls should be saved; it is not necessary that I should live long, but it is necessary that I should live to some good purpose"—what could stand before them? With a free toleration and defence by the civil law; with facilities for diffusing truth, such as no other age or nation has enjoyed; how soon might their active zeal fill all the land with the light of truth, and with peace, order and happiness.

The West.

Growth of the West.

Every paper that comes to us, tells of the mighty energies of the West. One speaks of a line of canal boats fifty-three miles in length; another tells us a ship has just left Chicago, spread its white sails to the western breeze, and that it is to find no rest for its keel, until the flag of our country shall wave in the port of a foreign land; another tells us that there are at this moment ten millions of people in the great Valley of the Mississippi. How can it be? we exclaim. Fifty seven years ago the first settler of Ohio bade adieu to his friends here, to go to a place upon which at present is built Marietta, a town which is now engaged largely in ship building, for the commerce of the ocean. Michigan, thirty five years ago, had scarcely an inhabitant! now, more than three hundred thousand warm hearts are beating upon her soil, and her sons count up the profits of their ample fields in the year that is past, in eight millions of bushels of wheat. Such has been the growth of the whole West. A few years since, in a birchen canoe, I was paddled all along the shores of Wisconsin, from Chicago to Green Bay, a distance of several hundred miles, seeing scarcely a white man. Last year it was my good fortune to go along the same shore, and over the same waters, and I passed the large towns of Sheboygan, Southport and Racine, and when far off on the waters of Lake Michigan, I beheld the city of Milwaukee, looking like a sea sybil with its "tiara of proud towers." But I cannot describe the change that has taken place on the lakes in the brief time allowed me. The traveller may leave Buffalo to-day, in one of the lake steamers, and in twenty-two hours the keel of his noble vessel shall scrape the golden sands of Illinois—nearly 1100 miles to the westward. His eye will have gazed upon the soil of five of the States of this Union, as well as upon the possessions of Queen Victoria.

The Infant Giant of the West.

The astonishing value of the trade already carried on, upon the Mississippi and its tributaries, may be seen from the following facts which were presented in a report by Thomas Allen, Esq., to the Chicago River and Harbor Convention.

It states that "the steamers plying to St. Louis number 251, and that the whole number on the Western waters amount to 1200, valued at $16,000,000—4000 keel and flat boats are to be added. In 1846 the receipts at New-Orleans, from the upper country of the Mississippi, amounted to $77,000,000. The total value of the whole commerce afloat is $439,000,000, being double the amount of the whole foreign commerce of the nation."

Who, at first thought, would have imagined that the business done on this great "inland sea," is double in value the whole of the foreign commerce of the United States. And if this be so now, what will it be fifty years hence?

A railroad has been surveyed and will soon be in progress from Chicago to the Mississippi, (at Galena,) to connect with the great chain at Buffalo, Boston and New York. The moment this is opened, there will be an immense rush of eastern immigrants to Northern Iowa. It will then possess all the advantages which Wisconsin and Northern Illinois have enjoyed, of being in the vicinity of the great lakes. There is a vast tract of country west and northwest, stretching away for hundreds of miles, as rich in soil, as well furnished with streams as any settled state, and unsurpassed in salubrity of climate by any section of our land. What a field will it furnish for Home Missionary efforts, and how important that the present settlements should be supplied with the means of grace.

This growing strength of the West is almost wholly directed by unsanctified mind. The pecuniary and physical resources are in the hands of men who are mad after the world; and instead of assisting in educating and evangelizing the region around them, they are often the most efficient agents in flooding it with intemperance and error. How obvious the truth, that whatever the East may do for conversion of the West, must be done soon, or it can have little hope of success.

The West Receding.

Our town continues to improve rapidly. I am informed, on good authority, that more than one hundred houses are under contract to be built this summer, mostly of brick, and among them a second large hotel, and some fine private dwellings. Upwards of forty buildings are already commenced. A few days since, five teams and several families crossed our ferry, going west to California. "Westward the star of empire takes it way." We used to be in "the West" beyond the Mississippi, but it is far ahead of us now.

The West for the Sake of the World.

A circumstance that occurred recently within my observation, suggests a thought worth mentioning. In going down the river (Mississippi) a few weeks ago to attend Association, the single boat on which I was embarked took in 20,000 bushels of grain, destined to New Orleans, and thence to Mexico or Europe. Eight thousand bushels were raised within three miles of the little town where it was shipped. The thought occurred to me, if this whole western valley were densely peopled and under cultivation, who can estimate the amount of its productions? And if holiness to the Lord were inscribed on all the farms, and stores, and shops, what a flood of wealth would pour into the treasury of the Lord for advancing his cause! How important to evangelize the West, for the sake of the world, to say nothing of its own interests and the interests of our country! Home missionaries are here sowing seed, the fruit of which will be seen in after years, in the part which the [then] rich western churches will take in the Foreign missionary work. I feel that I am not laboring alone for Iowa, or for the West, or for the United States, but for South America, India, China, and Africa. The tributions and missionaries of our churches will by and by go east via the Atlantic, and west via Oregon and the Pacific, and meet on the other side of the globe, and encircle the earth. O! what an influence will go forth from this grand centre of wealth and population, when 50 or 100 millions shall be congregated here, and thousands of churches shall be established, and railroads shall bring us within a few days travel of the two great oceans that wash our shores, and open a highway to all nations!

Present Poverty and prospective Wealth.

With all their natural wealth, the new states are poor—poor, I mean, in available, circulating property. The wealth is in the soil, and cannot readily be converted into cash. While the avails of the New England States are $37 to each inhabitant; and those of the South Western $61; those of the North Western are but $41. I sometimes think that, all things considered, Christians in the West make far greater sacrifices to support the Gospel than their more able brethren in older portions of the country.

The Work that is going forward under Missionary Auspices.

I really believe that, did the churches at the East understand the importance and usefulness of your work, in all its importance, their coffers would be open to almost any desirable extent. When collecting funds at the East for our church, I almost universally found, that a man who had been here, would give me five dollars, who, in like circumstances, would otherwise have given but one.

He who estimates the good done by the missionaries of your Society, by merely numbering the societies formed, the churches erected, and the membership of the denomination, has taken a very short-sighted view of the matter. The great mass of the population here, were raised in states, whence they came with prejudices strongly in favor of denominations other than ours. There is no want of preachers here, to keep those prejudices alive. Most of these are very ignorant—poor expounders of the word of Truth. When brought in contrast with men of better acquirements, their people become ashamed of them and demand men of more intelligence and refinement. This demand must be heard. Improvement must come; and though slowly, still improvement does come, in the different orders that are here.

Again, the multitudes, spreading over these vast plains, and rolling onward continually towards the Rocky mountains, are a chaotic mass. Every thing needs to be done. General systems of public instruction are to be planned, school districts organized, and a universal interest in the whole subject of education created and diffused through the community. Now politicians have their schemes of ambition to attend to, and think of little except what public opinion demands. In regard to these things none will take a deeper interest, and experience a more watchful care than those of the clerical profession.

Grand River Country, Mo.

If you look on the map of the state and trace the valley of Grand river in its length and breadth, you will count eleven counties, or a region probably more than equal to the state of Vermont, in which I live "solitary and alone," as it respects brethren of my own denomination. Since I came here, I have buried a wife and known the sorrows of widowhood. When I started to this country, I desired to find a place in which no other laborer had been—I chose a place wild and unprepared for the laborer's hand. I found it, but I have often shrunk from my task and almost regretted my choice; but I am here with better health generally than I enjoyed in New England, and nothing which ought to discourage me but the want of the reviving influences of the Holy Spirit.

Happiness in the Missionary Work.

Though it requires a travel of near 2000 miles to reach this place from my native city, though there is no grace or cultivated sensibility to be found in the humble tenements scattered upon the edges of the neighboring ravines, I am perfectly content. There is work and more than work enough for me to do. Those that attend my ministrations go not to criticize, but to receive them with gladness and singleness of heart. That God directed me to the far West to commence my ministerial labors, is a matter of devout thankfulness. Hardship or want of any description are perfect strangers. The field in which I labor is made up of poor miners, I know, but as I visit their humble cabins and see their frugality, I sometimes fancy that they are very much like the Mansfeld miner, and in the providence of God, who knows but some honest John Luther in the West, may have a son attending the preaching of your missionary, that may become as illustrious as Martin, the Reformer, who certainly possessed fewer advantages!

The new Iowa Purchase.

Thousands are rushing in to take possession of that portion of country abandoned by the Indians. It contains six millions of acres, and is of the same size as that which was open for settlement on the 1st of May, 1843. The select portions, having been discovered and watched for years by the eager immigrant, are now seized, claimed and marked, and will, in many instances, be contended for till some rival claimant or speculator can exhibit a certificate of entry from the general land office. Towns and villages will soon spring up west of us, and that which is now the frontier, will become the centre of a large and wealthy state. Shall its infancy be consecrated to God?

The Important Moment.

The country around us is fast filling up. Miles of new fence have gone up this season, upon all the roads leading into town. As the spring opens, the whole country assumes a richness and luxuriance that leaves little to be desired for man's earthly dwelling. The myriads that must find a home in this region, in future years, no one can compute. How unspeakably important to plant early among this people the institutions of religion—to anticipate the many evil influences which are here, and, if unchecked, will flourish with all the luxuriance of prairie vegetation. May God strengthen the friends of Home Missions, and enable them to do more in this blessed work!

A Large Field.

A few weeks since, I was cheered and refreshed by a visit from two brethren of our Synod, who came near 300 miles to survey our ample field, and catch a glimpse of scenes that affect a pious heart. It was pleasant to accompany them 40 miles, to the residence of a Home Missionary, and there, in sweet fellowship, dedicate ourselves anew to our Great Master at His own table. Such seasons are of rare occurrence here; and who will blame us if we prize them? These brethren have returned to their own field; and, as I was returning to mine, the question would frequently be on my lips, When will some of my eastern brethren come and set up half way houses, at which I may call and rest, while enduring the fatigue of a hard day's ride, to visit my now nearest neighbor of the mission family?

The Half has not been told.

I am fully satisfied that the Gospel would not be sustained in this new country without foreign aid. And although much has been said to show the importance of the preached Gospel in giving character to our rising community, yet it seems to me almost impossible that any mind can be fully impressed with its vast utility, without personally witnessing its effects. When we stand in the midst of these rapidly rising settlements, and observe the restraining, purifying, and elevating influence of the word of life wherever it is faithfully dispensed by your missionaries, we may well exclaim, "the half has never been told."

A Sight in Iowa.

On a beautiful prairie now filling up with neat and comfortable dwellings, six years ago there was not a house to be seen for many miles; I believe not one on the whole prairie—eighteen miles in length. Taking a new route a few days ago, I saw the most thickly settled and best portions of the prairie, and as I rode along between farms and crops of grain that would make our eastern farmers stare, and reflected that probably not one in twenty of the proprietors of that fertile soil was a servant of Him whose is "the earth and the fulness thereof," I prayed that his claim to all those broad and waving fields might ere long be acknowledged.

The Missionary indispensable.

Facts, over our whole land, show conclusively that churches cannot be gathered and sustained, in our new settlements, without missionary aid. Leave a community without a minister preaching, and without a church believing the truth, and you leave them to certain moral and religious ruin. But (to say nothing of what has been done in our eastern States, and this is very much,) without the aid of Home Missionary Societies, most of all the valley of the Mississippi would have been, at this day, without such ministers and churches. And unless there shall be hereafter a very vigorous prosecution of the Home Missionary work, millions upon millions of that rapidly increasing population, will soon be removed entirely from the influence of such ministers and churches.

A Missionary's Care for the Converts at an Outpost.

Who is to watch over the tender lambs? Who will train them up as devoted, efficient laborers in the Lord's vineyard? We are indeed anxious in regard to the results of the meetings, but we have no less anxiety in regard to the care of the new born souls after we are compelled to leave. There is no one to look after them, and we know of no one who will come to take charge of this flock. We can be with them but a few days. Our own flocks must be fed, and other fields are calling for similar meetings. Now what shall we do for a minister? Can you do any thing for us?

The great Diffusion of Labor.

My field is so large that it requires me to ride about 200 miles a month. Some places I visit once in two months; at these places I hold two-days' meetings. Of course, some of the people forget the time. Other places I visit regularly once a month. Not unfrequently many appear serious; but by the time I see them again, "birds of the air have caught away the seed sown," if any. It requires a continuation of influence to do much good. I am at home only one Sabbath in each month. The number of denominations is large; all have their turn, and all preach in the same house, which is a public building. My congregations are usually large and attentive.

Need of Instruction.

A few days ago, I rode up to the door of a dwelling and handed a man a few tracts; after looking at them for a moment, he looked at me very earnestly, and inquired what they were.

Hundreds of children are growing up here without any mental or moral culture. Parents have gone back in the woods, some three, some five miles; there, in the midst of the forest, erected their log cabins; and there, like the wild deer, their children bound through the openings and seldom hear of the God that made them.

When I look at these children and reflect, how soon the rising generation will sway our nation, I am constrained to cry out—My country! Oh, my country!

Dear brethren, no tongue can tell, no pen can describe the emotions of your missionaries, when they cannot comply with the urgent requests from their fellow-men who are starving, to break unto them the bread of life. The thought of their necessity is overwhelming. Can you not send some more help into this land of moral desolation? A few more years and it may be too late.

This seems to be a favorable time for the furtherance of all the great and leading benevolent enterprises of the age. Ignorance is dispersing, and prejudice giving way, and the community show a disposition to listen to solid and scriptural argument; and I am mistaken if the day is far distant, when this whole population will be redeemed. We trust that the Great Head of the Church will smile propitiously on our West, and furnish you with the means requisite to the accomplishing of the great object.

Fruits of Home Missions.

O, what a change has taken place in —! Good order, general attendance at worship, general regard for the Lord's day, and very general sobriety and industry, where, but a few years ago, drinking, gambling, rioting, were common and characteristic. One of the members, in walking with me to the house of God, a few Sabbaths since, and directly in front of it, remarked, that but two years before he had seen the whole space covered with groups of men, on the Sabbath day, engaged in gambling with cards, and other devices—concealed from the road, a few rods distant, by the bushes and trees that there intervened; guns and rifles then customarily filled the woods with their reports, not only in killing game, but firing at marks for liquor. Seldom, now, is that sound heard, except at a distance. Bless the Lord, O my soul, for the good which has been accomplished in that, among other places, by the American Home Missionary Society! For I speak the sober truth in saying that, whatever other agencies have been employed in the case, (and there have been such,) that of the Home Missionary has been the main instrumentality in accomplishing the change.

In casting my eye over portions of this state where I am acquainted, and marking the changes which have taken place within a few years, I find that the scattered sheep in the wilderness have been searched out, churches organized and built up in the faith and order of the Gospel; religious societies formed for sustaining the ministry; meeting-houses erected and dedicated to the solemn service of the triune God; souls converted; Sabbath schools established and continued in successful operation; temperance societies commenced and sustained, and poor inebriates by scores, hundreds, and thousands, made sober, and many of them religious; and thousands of other happy influences exerted,—and all mainly through the agency of the A. H. M. S.—It is a thought which fills my heart with emotions of gratitude and courage.

An Abstract of the Treasurer's Report was read by JASPER CORNING, Treasurer.

An Abstract of the Annual Report of the Executive Committee was presented by Rev. MILTON BADGER, D. D., one of the Secretaries.

On motion of Rev. HENRY LITTLE, of Madison, Ind., seconded by Rev. ROBERT ADAIR, of Philadelphia, Pa., the reports were adopted and ordered to be published.

The following resolutions were also adopted, viz :—

On motion of Rev. DARIUS H. ALLEN, D. D., Professor in Lane Seminary, O., seconded by Rev. PARSONS COOKE, D. D., of Lynn, Mass.

Resolved, That greatly increased efforts in behalf of Home Missions are demanded by the exigencies of the country and the providence of God.

On motion of Rev. RICHARD S. STORRS, Jun., of Brooklyn, N. Y., seconded by Rev. NATHANIEL HEWITT, D. D., of Bridgeport, Ct.

Resolved, That the work of establishing throughout our country an evangelical ministry is now the grand work for the world's conversion, and should be prosecuted with an enthusiasm corresponding to its magnitude.

On motion of Rev. JOSEPH C. STILES, of New York, seconded by Hon. REUBEN H. WALWORTH, LL. D., of Saratoga, N. Y.

Resolved, That the sublimity of the missionary work, at the present time, especially in our own land, should inspire the people of God with greater faith and self devotion for its advancement.

The Society was addressed, in support of these resolutions, by the gentlemen by whom they were respectively introduced. The missionary field in its expanded and still expanding extent ; the relations which the conversion of this country is to bear to the conversion of other portions of the earth ; the encouragements afforded us in prosecuting this enterprise ; as well as the inspiration derived from its intrinsic nobleness, and from the promised aid of the Holy Spirit, were among the themes of eloquent remark.

The choir of the Tabernacle, under the conduct of Mr. JAMES L. ENSIGN, executed anthems and other music selected for the occasion.

The Benediction was pronounced by Rev. DAVID SMITH, D. D., of Durham, Ct.

The object of this Society shall be, to assist congregations that are unable to support the Gospel ministry, and to send the Gospel to the destitute, within the United States; also to co-operate with evangelical Christians in the support of Home Missions in nominally christian countries, to such an extent as the funds of the Institution may justify.

such agency or agencies for appointing missionaries, and for other purposes, as the interests of the Institution may require; and shall make an Annual Report of their proceedings to the Society.

ART. 5. The Treasurer shall give bonds, annually, to such amount as the Executive Committee shall think proper.

ART. 6. Any person may become a Member of this Society, by contributing annually to its funds; thirty dollars paid at one time shall constitute a Member for life; and one hundred dollars paid at one time shall constitute a Director for life; and any person on the payment of a sum, which, in addition to any previous contribution to the funds, shall amount to one hundred dollars, shall be a Director for life. An executor, on paying a legacy of two hundred and fifty dollars to the funds of this Society, shall be a member for life; and the payment of a legacy of one thousand dollars shall constitute him a Director for life.

ART. 7. Any Missionary Society may become Auxiliary, by agreeing to pay into the Treasury of this Society the whole of its surplus funds, and sending to the Secretaries for Correspondence a copy of its Constitution and Annual Reports, mentioning the names of its Missionaries, and the fields of their operations.

ART. 8. Every Auxiliary Society, which shall agree to pay the whole of its funds to this Society, shall be entitled to a missionary or missionaries, to labor in such field as it may designate; at least to the amount of its contributions; provided such designation be made at the time of payment.

ART. 9. The officers of all Auxiliary Societies, shall be, ex officio, Directors; and annual contributors to their funds shall be members of the Society.

ART. 10. This Society shall meet annually in the city of New York, on the Wednesday next preceding the second Thursday in May.

ART. 11. No alteration shall be made in this Constitution without a vote of two thirds of the Members present at an annual meeting; nor unless the same shall have been proposed at a previous annual meeting, or recommended by the Executive Committee.

TWENTY THIRD REPORT.

As we commence the review of another year, we would pause, for a moment, and listen to the admonition which comes up to us from the graves of honored associates, patrons and fellow laborers, saying, "Be ye, also, ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Three of the Vice Presidents of the Society—Hon. CHARLES MARSH, LL. D., Hon. DAVID L. MORRILL, LL. D., and Rev. ELIPHALET GILLETT, D. D., who commenced the year with us, have given us their last counsels, performed their last deeds of benevolence on earth, and gone to their reward on high. They took a deep interest in the organization of this Institution, held official relations to it from the beginning, and contributed largely of their influence, their substance and their personal toils for the accomplishment of its objects; and, we cannot doubt, that they now rejoice with us, in the themes of our contemplation, with a joy which we can comprehend, only, when it shall be our blessedness to survey the results of missionary action, from the hills of immortality. The Rev. Dr. Gillett had, also, sustained to a Branch of this Institution—the Maine Missionary Society—the relation of Secretary, for a period of forty-one years; during the last twenty of which, he had devoted his entire time and strength to its service. He sought its prosperity with wisdom and kindness, with energy, perseverance, faith and a spirit of self-sacrifice. As the wants of the destitute, the trials and privations of his brethren, were ever on his heart, so words of encouragement and hope continually distilled from his lips. The missionary work, which had so engrossed him in life, and the goodness of God which had so long spared him to labor for its advancement, were the last themes to linger upon his tongue, as it was trembling in death, or call forth from his spirit, as it was struggling for its emancipation, ascriptions of praise. But, he is gone. And others, of kindred spirit, whose sympathies, benefactions and prayers have been given to this cause so freely, are gone likewise. The missionary, long tried in the service of his Master, with many souls gathered as the seals of his ministry; and the youthful herald, girding on his armor for toil and endurance on the distant frontier, have been summoned from their earthly cares to the rest of heaven. And we have been spared, to labor on in the vineyard of God—to see his favor dispensed upon efforts to build up his kingdom, his Spirit poured upon many churches in the wilderness, the field of our culture greatly enlarged, and the signs multiplying and brightening, that he whose right it is to reign will soon reign on earth as he does in heaven. Here, then, would we record our tribute of thanksgiving and praise; here, consecrate all we have and all we can command anew to Christ; and here invoke his special presence and blessing in all our future pathway.

The details of the Society's operations are embraced in the following

SUMMARY OF RESULTS.

The number of ministers of the Gospel, whose names are found in the preceding table—together with those engaged in superintending the missionary work, and who are mentioned in connection with the respective Auxiliary Boards and Agencies—has been 1,019.

Of these, 827 were in commission at the date of the last Report, and 192 have been since appointed.

They have been distributed in 26 different States and Territories, as follows :—in Maine, 89 ; New Hampshire, 41 ; Vermont, 50 ; Massachusetts, 67 ; Rhode Island, 10 ; Connecticut, 45 ; New York, 186 ; New Jersey, 4 ; Pennsylvania, 49 ; Maryland, 4 ; District of Columbia, 2 ; Virginia, 7 ; North Carolina, 1 ; Georgia, 1 ; Kentucky, 7 ; Tennessee, 7 ; Ohio, 94 ; Indiana, 51 ; Illinois, 110 ; Michigan, 73 ; Missouri, 25 ; Wisconsin, 58 ; Iowa, 33 ; Texas, 1 ; Oregon, 2 ; California, 2.

This distribution gives to the New England States, 302 ; the Middle States, 239 ; the Southern States, 15 ; and the Western States and Territories, 463.

Of the whole number in commission, 698 have been the pastors or stated supplies of single congregations ; 218 have ministered to two or three congregations each ; and 103 have extended their labors over still wider fields—many of them embracing the destitutions of a county, or of several counties, or those lying within the limits of an ecclesiastical body.

While aiming at the establishment of a permanent ministry, the Society thus avails itself, so far as its means will allow and suitable men can be found and circumstances seem to require, of whatever is advantageous in the itinerant system, in its adaptation to the wants of a sparsely settled community, to the gathering and organizing of churches on our frontiers, and as introductory to the institution of the pastoral relation.

The aggregate of ministerial labor performed is equal to 808 years.

The number of congregations and missionary districts supplied, in whole or in part, at stated intervals, is 1,510 ; while many others have enjoyed the occasional preaching of the word.

Eight missionaries have been in commission as pastors or stated supplies of churches of colored people. Thirteen have preached to Welsh, and 25 to German congregations; and two to congregations of Norwegians—one of them through an interpreter.

The Committee feel it to be of great importance to meet the foreign population, which is coming in such numbers to our shores, wherever we may, with the preaching of the Gospel in their own tongue, until they shall become so far Americanized that they can comprehend it in ours. The greatest difficulty which we experience in enlarging this department of our labor, is in obtaining preachers of suitable qualifications—giving evidence of a thorough acquaintance with experimental piety.

Sabbath school instruction has been pursued, as heretofore, with system and interest on the part of the missionaries. It is one of the first things to be established in gathering a congregation, and is justly regarded as an invaluable auxiliary to family training, as well as a fruitful nursery for the church. It is not unusual, in our new settlements, for a missionary to have two, four or six Sabbath schools under his care, in different directions from his main preaching place; one, the last year, has had ten; another has supplied thirteen with libraries. Great encouragement has been given to the missionaries, and lasting good accomplished in their congregations, by the liberality of the "American Sunday School Union," and the "Massachusetts Sabbath School Society," in furnishing schools with suitable libraries.

It is a reflection that must be grateful to every christian heart, that not less than 83,500 children and youth have been carefully instructed, the last year, in the Sabbath schools and Bible classes under the superintendence of the missionaries. This, of itself, is no mean consideration for all it has cost the churches to sustain these missionaries at their posts.

We would here also make grateful acknowledgments to the "American Bible Society" and the "American Tract Society" for their liberal grants, the one of Bibles and Testaments, the other of Tracts and bound Volumes to missionaries of the Society, especially to those who have gone to Oregon and California.

The progress of Temperance, in the congregations of the missionaries, we cannot note so accurately in statistical returns, as in the earlier years of the reformation; inasmuch as the pledge is not so universally the test of temperance principles. Associations, in some sections of the country, have been injudiciously managed, and have brought the cause, temporarily, into disrepute; and little can be accomplished, in this form, until these organizations give place to those which shall secure more general confidence and respect. Temperance, however, is preached as a religious duty, and urged as a matter of principle, no less than ever; and many missionaries report that their churches are temperance churches, their congregations temperance congregations, and some of them, that there are no intoxicating drinks sold in their townships or counties. Those who are pledged to entire abstinence, are so connected in these associations with other denominations, that their number cannot be stated very definitely; from the reports which we have received, however, we may safely say that, in the communities where the missionaries labor, the number of pledges cannot be less than 105,000.

The contributions to various charitable objects, reported by 598 missionaries in connection with 702 congregations, amount to $20,157 74. This item and those of a similar character in former reports are valuable, not only as they show a large amount annually returned by the churches aided for the furtherance of benevolent enterprises, but, also, as they exhibit evidence that these churches are coming up to manhood, in the cultivation of habits which will make them most efficient helpers—as many once missionary churches now are—in the work of evangelizing the nations. In but few places, is the cause of Foreign Missions more justly appreciated, or the Monthly Concert attended with more interest, than by the great body of the missionary churches.

The additions to the churches, as nearly as can be ascertained, amount to 5,550; viz: 2,706, on profession of their faith; and 2,844, by letters from other churches. Many of the congregations of the missionaries, in the remoter West particularly, have been visited, within the last few months, with special effusions of the divine Spirit. Sixty-five missionaries, in their recent communications, make mention of revivals of religion, and report no less than 1,194 hopeful conversions. Many of these revivals are still in progress, and intelligence is reaching us, almost daily, of new triumphs of God's grace over worldliness, infidelity and sin. It has been made especially manifest, in these scenes of spiritual quickening, that God delighteth to honor those outward and ordinary means, whereby he has purposed, of old, to communicate unto his people the benefits of redemption. He has made "the reading, but especially the PREACHING of the word an effectual means of convincing and converting sinners, and building them up in holiness and comfort, through faith unto" a hope of "salvation."

A revival of religion, in any place, is an unspeakable blessing. But in a new country, where every thing is unsettled, the materials of society discordant, and the restraints which are thrown around men in our older communities unknown, an outpouring of the Spirit of God, not only gathers many souls into his kingdom, but, by its refining and assimilating power, it, not unfrequently, puts a new phase upon the whole structure of society, and gives a character to its institutions and influence for all coming time.

Surely, then, every individual, who has contributed of his substance to sustain the preaching of the Gospel in our new settlements, will feel his soul stirred within him to unite with his fellow laborers, in giving thanks to God and the Lamb, for such precious exhibitions of his grace.

And with reference to the future, the one request, which the Committee would urge upon the friends of this Institution above all others, is, THAT THEY ACCOMPANY THEIR BENEFACTIONS AND FOLLOW THEIR REPRESENTATIVES TO THE DESTITUTE AND PERISHING WITH THEIR PRAYERS, and that, day and night, without ceasing, and with that faith which knoweth no denial, they invoke upon the ministry of the word, at every missionary station, the power of the Holy Ghost. In that power is all our hope. Without it, the watchman will lift up his voice in vain, the sinner will die in his iniquity, and the land will be cursed by the atheism of its inhabitants. But, if the Spirit shall be poured out—as in days of old, and as is promised in these latter days—our wildernesses shall bud and blossom as the rose, and our country, in every section of it, and from every heart, shall send up a sweet smelling savor unto God.

THE TREASURY.

Resources.—The balance in the Treasury, March 1st, 1848, was $1,246 55. The receipts of the succeeding twelve months have been $145,925 91; making the resources of the year $147,172 46.

Liabilities.—There was due to missionaries, at the date of the last Report, $9,535 06. There have since become due $144,281 21; making the total of liabilities $153,816 27.

Payments.—Of this sum $143,771 67 have been paid. The remainder—$10,044 60—is still due to missionaries for labor performed. Towards cancelling these claims, and redeeming the additional pledges on commissions which have not yet expired—making in all $61,340 38—there is a balance in the Treasury of $3,849 00.

PROGRESS OF THE SOCIETY,

ACHIEVED AND DEMANDED.

By comparing the results of the past year with those of the preceding, we find gratifying evidence that, however much the Society may have come short of realizing the hopes of its conductors and friends, it has, by the blessing of God, been able, not only to retain the advanced position which it occupied at the last anniversary, but this year, also, to make still further progress.

The receipts of the year exceed those of the last, by the increase being derived mainly from the contrib churches. The number of missionaries is 13 greater; of labor performed, are 35 more than were noted in port. Sixty-three congregations more than in the pre have been blessed with the preaching of the Gospe added to the churches; and 6,500 more children inst Sabbath schools. This year, we have also found WEST; which had been here, and there, and every yet we had not been able to reach it. Before we co it was gone. Fifty years ago, it seemed to be in C York; forty years ago, in New Connecticut; twenty in Indiana and Illinois; and fifteen years ago, to b the passage of the Upper Mississippi. But, this year its permanent settlement on the shores of the Pacif are calling unto us from thence for the bread of life—unto the Atlantic—deep calling unto deep. And sponded to this call, as best we have been able. On is already in Oregon; having reached it, in June last of the Sandwich Islands. Another, for that Territory this port on the twenty second of November; and wh from, the propitious winds of heaven had taken him Cape and were wafting him fast along the Pacific co this, his voice, we trust, is the voice of one crying in t tant wilderness of our land, “Prepare ye the way o Two missionaries for California, also, went out in the from this city to the Isthmus; which left, December reached Monterey and San Francisco, as we learn it last of February; and we hope soon to hear that door of usefulness has been opened unto them ther who was to have been, at this time, on his way to jo been suddenly called, with his devoted companion, mediate presence of their Lord.

We have four men, then, in these two Territories are they among the scores of thousands who are their home? We mention the fact, that they have the foundations of many generations in this infant gratitude to God; and yet we hardly know, whethe of congratulation to the friends of missions that the so large, or of self-abasement and despondency that That the number of laborers in this section of the been more than doubled, and in other new and de ments greatly increased, is not that the call for them urgent and the prospects of usefulness most invit men of promise and self-devotion could not be found: we have gone to the utmost extent of our pecuni accomplishing what has been done. The Society h ment funds, obtains no loans, and contracts no debts, except with its missionaries for services rendered. The scale of its operations is graduated, every year, by a careful reference to what may reasonably be expected to be the amount of its cash receipts. The appropriations were commenced, the last year, on the presumption that its receipts would considerably exceed those of the previous year, as the record of the past and the indications of the future seemed abundantly to warrant. But on the first of January, it was found that the receipts had actually fallen below those of the previous year, so that an amount of $8,000 was then due to missionaries for labor performed and reported, which the Society had no means to pay. This deficiency seemed to have arisen, in part, from the peculiar exigencies of another department of benevolence, and the extra efforts which were made in its behalf. In consequence of these efforts, individuals had diminished their contributions to missions at home, and the annual collections of churches and congregations, in different parts of the country, had been postponed or passed by for the year. But the missionaries in our new settlements were not in circumstances to dispense with the pittance of aid which had been promised them; and it became necessary to direct the chief energies of the Institution to their relief. We owe it to the sympathies of the friends of missions, but more to the providence of God in placing legacies at the disposal of the Society towards the close of the year, that we have been able to report so large an amount of payments, and a small advance in expenditures on former years. It has been painful, however, to the Committee to check the work of expansion, at a time when it was so much needed,—to refrain, not only from seeking to enlist many more young men in the service of the Society, but from giving encouragement even to those who were ready to go forth and bear the heat and burden of the day in the most difficult parts of the vineyard. But, there was no alternative left them. It would not have been safe to commission an additional missionary, much less to increase the missions on our Pacific coast—the expense of which, at the present time, is not surpassed by any of the missions in the foreign field. If similar embarrassment to the conductors of the missionary work, and disappointment to those who are looking for its advancement, are to be prevented in future, it must be by more system and regularity on the part of its friends in forwarding their contributions, and by a liberality which shall expand with the growth of the country, and be proportionate to the imperiousness of its wants and the claims of a world, so soon, we trust, to be redeemed unto God through the instrumentality of his people.

The progress we have made the last year, in work accomplished, is indeed so small, compared with the increased demand, that we must go back a little, to gather sufficient encouragement to inspire the hope of accomplishing great things in years. If we look back over a period of ten years, we can discern our ship has made good reckonings, though she may be moving so slowly now. The advance on receipts that period, has been $63,361—or more than 76 per cent. number of missionaries has increased from 665 to 1,019 years of labor, from 473 to 808. And if we examine fields which have been occupied, we shall find that in 1839 there were 160 laborers only, in our western states and territories. In 1849, the number is 463—an addition of 303; or, in other words, six sevenths of the increase on the whole field, has been accomplished in part of it which is so soon to decide our political destiny. We had but three missionaries in Wisconsin, where now there are fifty eight; and we had then a less number, than we have now in California. To settle in Iowa—where President Munroe, years previous, would colonize the Indians, so that they might be forever undisturbed by the encroachments of white men, was bold an adventure then, as embarking for the valley of Mexico is now; and the reports of the missionaries, as they followed the Indian trail or the pointings of the compass, or encamped in the unbroken forest in their search after the scattered remnants there, were scarcely less marvellous and exciting to the friends of missions, than the experience of our brethren in the Sierra Nevada can be now.

If we shall make corresponding progress for ten years more, what a work, under God, may we not see accomplished! The like increase of receipts,—would put at the disposal of the Society more than $250,000, and, under its direction, would open new men; and a similar distribution would give to our western states and territories, and our new settlements wherever they are, a greater number of laborers than are now employed in the whole field of the Society's operations. But, why should it take ten years in realizing this progress? Is the enlargement of our boundaries delayed? Does the tide of emigration wait for the providence of God to linger? Or is the way already prepared for our Christianity to lengthen her cords in every direction, to make her stakes strong—to take up her march over the deserts and across the deserts and plant down her institutions fast, three thousand miles nearer the great work to be done among Pagan nations with but a single ocean to intervene?

Why may not these results be reached in five years? Why may not be greater progress than that, which, as Christians, we ought to make, under the high responsibilities which are devolved upon us?—or greater than that revealed in the signs of the Redeemer's coming? Let of this Institution increase its resources but $20,000 and, with God's blessing, the results of the last ten years MAY well nigh be wrought out in five. And that this increase is practicable we have the fullest assurance. For the resources are in the churches; and the motives for their development are unnumbered and mighty. And not only so, but in each of two years within the last ten, an equal advance has actually been made. And it can be done again. An increase of fifteen per cent., on the collections for the last year, will do it for the year to come—will give the Society an additional income of more than $20,000. This, then, is no visionary calculation; and we trust it will be no delusive hope. We would enter upon the labors of another year, in the confident expectation that it will be realized. We ask the friends of the Redeemer, therefore, in sober earnest, under a deep sense of our responsibility and in anticipation of meeting them and our perishing fellow countrymen shortly at the judgment seat, if they will not enter into their closets and shut to their doors and inquire of their Father who seeth in secret, if he will accept at their hands an offering any less, the coming year, for the advancement of a cause which he has so signally marked as his own!

INSTRUMENTALITIES FOR FUTURE PROGRESS.

We would say a word, in this connection, in regard to the instrumentalities which must be relied upon to secure the increase proposed. It cannot be done by Agencies. The Society has no Agents devoted, exclusively, to the business of collections—none that would not be needed, if no collections were to be made. Its Agents are superintendents of missionary districts; and their services are indispensable for the judicious disbursement of the Society's funds. So far as their other duties will permit, they give attention to collections, in those sections of the country whence the resources of the Institution are chiefly obtained. In other parts of the field, they act as general missionaries—exploring uncultivated ground, preaching to the destitute, inspiring them with hope, and preparing the way for the institution of the pastoral relation, or where this relation exists, for the transfer, from the Society to the people, of the entire responsibility of ministerial support. It has ever been the policy of this Society to spread before the community, as extensively as possible, the fullest information, both in regard to its operations and the condition and wants of the destitute, and depend, mainly, upon an intelligent, large-hearted, christian liberality to furnish the means for prosecuting its labors. Every lover of his country and of the kingdom of Christ, then, we would regard as an Agent of this Society, and as duly authorized to act in its behalf, with reference to the progress proposed. To the Pastors of the churches we have ever looked, for their generous and efficient aid; and we have not looked in vain. The encouragement which we have received from many of them in regard to the future, confirms us in the persuasion, that no more available agency than theirs can be relied upon, either for the advancement which we have named or for permanent prosperity; and that the PASTORS OF THE CHURCHES have only to WILL it, and the course of this Institution is ONWARD, from this time forth, even unto the end.

COMPARATIVE RESULTS.

The following Table gives a comparative view of the amount of receipts, expenditures, number of missionaries, new appointments, congregations and missionary districts, years of labor performed, additions to the churches and pupils in Sabbath schools, for each of the twenty three years of the Society's operations. It also exhibits, in the tenth column, the average expenditure, each year, for a year of missionary labor, obtained by dividing the sum total of the expenditures of the year by the number of years of labor performed. And in the eleventh column, by dividing the sum total of the expenditures of each year by the number of missionaries employed, is shown what the average to a missionary would be if the expenditures were equally apportioned among them.

Remarks—1. From the foregoing table, it appears that the sum total of the receipts of the Society, for twenty-three years, is $1,897,257 13. The years of labor performed amount to 11,431; and the additions to the churches to 94,421.

2. The average expenditure for a year of missionary labor, for the twenty-three years, is $166 ; for the first thirteen years, it is $167 ; for the last ten years, it is $165.

3. The average expenditure for a missionary, for the twenty-three years, is $117 ; for the first thirteen years, it is $114 ; for the last ten years, it is $125. Showing that the same amount of labor is now performed by a less number of men than in the earlier years of the Society's operations.

* Of these, 24 labored in France and Switzerland, under the direction of the Evangelical Societies of Paris and Geneva.

REMARKS.—1. In explanation of the comparatively large number of missionaries in the Middle States and the increasing number in the New England States for several of the earlier years, it should be remarked that, at the organization of this Society in 1826, the missionaries of the United Domestic Missionary Society, whose responsibilities it assumed, were transferred to it, and that the greater portion of them were in commission in the State of New York. The New England State Societies, also, became integral parts of the National Society, in several successive years—the Maine Missionary Society and the Vermont Domestic Missionary Society in the third year of its operations; the New Hampshire Missionary Society, in the fourth year; the Connecticut Missionary Society, in the fifth year; and the Massachusetts Missionary Society, in the seventh year.

2. In the New England States, it will be observed, there has been but little increase of the number of missionaries, at any time, since the auxiliary relationship of the State Societies was completed. Since 1837, the number has diminished, and is, this year, 29 less than at that date. In the Middle States, also, the number the present year, is but 12 greater than in 1837.

3. The increase of the Society's labors, the last fifteen years, has been mainly in our Western States and Territories. The last ten years, the increase alone in that portion of our country, has given it—as has been stated on a preceding page—303 additional missionaries, which is equal to six sevenths of the increase on the whole field during that period.

4. In 1846, the missions of this Society in Canada were, by an amicable arrangement with the British Colonial Missionary Society, transferred to the care of that Institution.

5. In the table on the next page, will be seen the progress which has been made, year by year, in the newer states of the West, as they have severally come into being and presented fields of peculiar promise for missionary culture. When this Society was formed, Indiana and Illinois were in their infancy. Four years previous, there was but one Presbyterian minister in Illinois. Michigan was, at that time, and for ten years subsequent, a territory. In 1825, it had but one Presbyterian or Congregational minister, and he was a missionary. Wisconsin remained, eight years after the organization of this Society, the almost undisputed home of the Indian. At Milwaukee, in 1834, there was but a single white man. Iowa was not organized as a territory till 1838.

6. It should be borne in mind, that the number of missionaries in these newer states and territories, as well as in those that have been longer cultivated, gives but an imperfect idea of the ground that has been occupied by missionary enterprise. Churches, every year, become independent, and others are taken up in their stead. Such churches adorn the land and bless its population, in our most flourishing villages, along all our great thoroughfares and at the gate-ways into the distant interior.

PRINCIPAL AUXILIARIES, AGENCIES AND MISSIONARY FIELDS.

MAINE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The receipts of this Society, for the year ending March 1st, were $11,169 77; and its expenditures $11,690 94; leaving a balance against the treasury of $521 17; $156 have also been received, from this State, into the treasury of the Parent Society.

Eighty nine missionaries have been in commission in this State the last year; one of them—Rev. John Sawyer,—at the advanced age of 93 years; and another—Rev. Jotham Sewall—at the age of 89. The larger portion of them have been employed as pastors or stated supplies in single congregations; others have ministered to two or three churches each; and the missionary fields of others have comprised the destitutions of extensive counties. The missionary churches are, in general, in a prosperous state; and several of them have been visited with seasons of refreshing from on high.

The Home Missionary work has a no less strong hold, than in former years, on the affections of Christians in Maine, as is evident by their increased liberality, (their expenditures the last year being almost double what they were five years since,) and their vigorous efforts to extend the influences of the Gospel over all their sparsely settled territory. "The single aggressive movement," say the Trustees in their last report, "made within a very few years past, upon the northern section of our State—a land so lately trodden by the foot of a missionary—furnishes, in its results, an ample reward for all the labors and all the treasures that have been bestowed, within the same time, upon the whole field of which the Society has the supervision."

But this Society, in the midst of its prosperity, has been called into deep affliction. Arrested suddenly, by severe disease, its most valued and honored Secretary—Rev. ELIPHALET GILLETT, D. D., was called away from his earthly labors, when the last missionary year had but half expired. Dr. Gillett was elected Secretary of the Maine Missionary Society, at its organization, in 1807; which office he continued to hold until his death. And for the last twenty years of his life, he was constantly employed in watching over its interests, conducting its affairs and seeking its prosperity. One who had intimately known him and been long associated with him in missionary action, says of him, "In the cause of Home Missions in the State of Maine, his heart was bound up; and he never ceased to pray and labor for its advancement. The feeble churches in the State, and the missionaries sent forth to minister to their necessities, ever found in him sympathizing friend and counsellor. In prosecuting the work committed to him, he did not shrink from any labor or fatigue, which he thought himself able to bear. After he had passed his three score years and ten, he traversed the wilderness, inquiring into the state of the new and scattered settlements, and cheerfully partaking of such accommodations as the log cabin or camp might afford. When the business of the Society and the wants of the destitute required his attention, neither inclement skies, nor the winter's cold could detain him. Forgetful of his own ease, he lived and labored for the good of others." And, behold, the end of such a man, as we should expect it to be, is peace! "All's well,"—he exclaimed, amidst the extreme distress of his last sickness,—“no one can have greater reason for thankfulness than I have.” To the last, he expressed his unshaken confidence in those soul-humbling and God-exalting truths which he had preached to others, and spoke of death as having no terrors; he gave up his family cheerfully into the hands of God, and then, after some hours of comparative ease and quietness, on the morning of the 19th of October, 1848, in the 80th year of his age, he fell asleep in Jesus.

NEW HAMPSHIRE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The number of missionaries employed by this Society during the year, is forty one; and the aggregate of their service 36 years. The receipts have been $6,027 25; which is $434 53 more than the receipts of the preceding year. Of this sum, there have been forwarded to the treasury of the Parent Society $952 53 agreeably to the designation of donors, and $300 by vote of the Trustees; leaving $4,764 72 for the use of the cause within the State. In addition to this, $1,671 85 have been forwarded directly to the treasury of the Parent Society, in payment of legacies and from the donations of individuals and congregations—making the sum of $2,934 38 to be expended out of the State, and the whole amount for the cause, $7,699 10; which is $1,005 64 more than the last year.

The first donation from New Hampshire to the American Home Missionary Society, was made in 1828. Since that time, there have been received from this State, $21,240 24; viz.: $11,122 18 in donations from individuals and congregations; $6,718 06 in legacies; and $3,400 from the treasury of the Auxiliary. Nearly four fifths of this amount have been received within the last ten years.

The Secretary of this Society—Rev. BENJAMIN P. STONE—in his report, says: “While we lament the low state of religion in our churches and the declining aspect of some of them, we would not be unmindful of the various tokens of God's favor to the cause. He has, in general, preserved the peace and harmony of the churches under our care; and he has enlarged the ability of a few of them, so that there is a reasonable prospect that they will soon be no longer objects of charity. And though there are others which have been long on our list, in whose condition we can see no such encouraging prospect, yet we rejoice that the Gospel has not been preached to them in vain. The people of God have been comforted and edified, children and youth have had their feet restrained from the paths of sin and ruin; and, now and then, a soul has fled from the wrath to come and found safety in the pardoning blood of Christ. We would, therefore, take courage and labor on, knowing that we shall in due time reap a plentiful harvest if we faint not."

VERMONT DOMESTIC MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The receipts of this Society, for the last missionary year, have been $4,435 42; $1,303 92 have also been paid from this State into the Treasury of the National Institution, including legacies, to the amount of $851. There has been expended within the State $4,548 60, in sustaining fifty missionaries; the aggregate of whose labors is equal to 39 years. Fifty six churches, and four communities where no churches exist, have enjoyed the benefit of their labors. Eleven churches, and two districts without churches, have been added to the missionary list, during the year; while five, formerly aided, are now sustaining the ministry without assistance from the Society.

"The providence of God," says the Secretary of the Society, Rev. JOHN F. STONE, "is evidently encouraging us to make more vigorous efforts than ever before for the enlargement of our borders. Some communities, which have been almost entirely given up to the influence of Universalism and kindred errors, are beginning to perceive the wide difference between the influence of such errors, on even the moral and social interests of society, and that exerted by what they are pleased to call, "old fashion orthodoxy;" and have expressed a wish to obtain a thoroughly evangelical ministry. In one place, in which, so far as we can learn, there is not one orthodox professor, they have gone so far as to make an application for aid in supporting a sound minister—one that our Executive Committee would entirely approve—expressing the confidence that they can raise, to begin with, two hundred dollars towards his support. As erroneous and fanatical systems are losing their hold on the confidence of men and those organizations which have sustained them seem tending to decay and dissolution, it seems to be a time eminently favorable for us to press forward in the work assigned us. And the Directors of our Society seem inclined to act in accordance with these indications of Providence, as well as with the instructions voted them at our last annual meeting—to 'take means for supplying every destitute place in the State, where there is good prospect of success, with the preaching of the Gospel.' And we believe the churches will sustain them in such an undertaking."

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The number of missionaries in the service of this Society, the past year, is sixty seven. During the year covered by its last report, ten missionaries had been settled as pastors, and two pastors only dismissed. Nine churches had assumed the support of their own ministers, and seven others had been taken on the missionary list, bidding fair, however, to have but a short dependence on charitable aid. Twenty thousand families had been brought under the direct influence of these missionaries, and 3,345 scholars instructed in their Sabbath schools. Four houses of worship had been built, two others commenced, and several thousand dollars of indebtedness on others cancelled. Not far from forty two per cent., also, of the whole amount which these churches have received, had been returned by them into the treasuries of different benevolent institutions.

The receipts of the Society, for the year ending March 1st, have been $25,384 80—exceeding those of the preceding year, by $1,070 10. The expenditures within its bounds have been $7,384 80; and $18,000 have been remitted to the treasury of the American Home Missionary Society. There have, also, been received into the treasury of the Parent Society from the Hampshire Missionary Society, $2,018 55; from various individuals, congregations and auxiliaries, $2,228 97: in payment of legacies, $6,479 54—in all, $10,727 06, making the whole amount realized from the State to the cause of Home Missions, during the year, $36,111 86; which is $4,421 00 greater than the amount of the previous year.

The sympathy of this Auxiliary with us in our national work, illustrated so strikingly in their annual contributions, is expressed, also, in the spirit-stirring appeals, which are embodied in their annual reports. In the last, drawn up by the Secretary of Society, Rev. JOSEPH S. CLARK, after contemplating the relation of this enterprise, at the present moment, to the conversion of the world, they say, "What nation ever wielded a moral power equal to that which Providence has conferred on this? What people were ever placed in a position where, by mere example, they could do so much for the honor of Christ and the good of man? To sanctify that power, and thus make it a fountain of life—to elevate and purify that example, so that it shall lead to God the bewildered nations who follow it—is a privilege which angels might covet. But it never can be theirs. Heaven has bestowed it on us. Viewing this Home Missionary enterprise as adapted to cast human character in a christian mould, how else can we do it on a grander scale? Regarding the Gospel as a moral lever, where else can we place the fulcrum with more certainty of moving the world? It should be considered, moreover, that the failure of one attempt after another, both in the old world and in the new, to establish popular institutions without those pillars of moral culture and religious principle which have hitherto supported ours, is not a lost effort. It has prepared the way for an easier and more convincing illustration of their absolute necessity. It helps out the demonstration which our fathers commenced two hundred years ago, that 'righteousness exalteth a nation.' To finish this demonstration for the use of all mankind, is plainly THE work which God has given us to do. It can be done. The occupancy of every moral waste, and every new settlement in the land with the christian ministry—at a less cost than it required to occupy the city of Mexico with an armed force—will do it."

RHODE ISLAND HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Ten missionaries have been employed in this State, the last year—seven of whom still continue their labors; $1,925 have been appropriated towards their support; $823 66 of it have been contributed within the State; $1,000 received from the Connecticut Missionary Society; and $101 34 remained due to missionaries, March 1st, for services performed. During the year, also, $780 62 have been received from this State into the Treasury of the American Home Missionary Society—the greater portion of it contributed by the Beneficent Congregational Church of Providence.

The churches aided are adding to their numbers and increasing in strength, exerting a healthful moral influence in the communities where they exist, and encouraging the hope that they will ere long sustain, without assistance, the institutions of the Gospel.

Rev. JONATHAN LEAVITT, of Providence, is the Secretary of the Society.

CONNECTICUT MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The receipts of this Society, during the year, have been $7,669 44. The expenditures, within the State, have amounted to $4,383 87; $1,000 have been appropriated in aid of the Rhode Island Home Missionary Society; and $2,000 have been remitted to the Treasury of the Parent Institution. There have also been received into the treasury of the American Home Mis sionary Society, from auxiliaries, congregations and individuals, $12,273 93; and in payment of legacies, $5,728 67—making the total realized to this cause from the State, the past year, $25,672 04; which exceeds the amount of any previous year, by $2,868 45.

Forty-five missionaries have been in commission within the year. Two of them have ministered to congregations of colored people, and one has been appointed to preach to the German population of the State. Six churches, formerly under the fostering care of the Society, have, this year, ceased to ask a continuance of its aid, and are now, with one exception, enjoying the labors of settled pastors.

"The causes which have driven some churches to seek aid from this Society," say its Directors, in their last report, from the pen of the Secretary, Rev. HORACE HOOKER, "will probably prolong their weakness for years to come. An exhausted soil, an uneven surface, remoteness from a suitable market, repel accessions from abroad, and admonish the native inhabitants to look out for situations more inviting. Still, as points of migration, it has long been judged expedient to occupy these posts, for the sake of furnishing good members of the church and of society, at the West. To a considerable extent, however, the migration is not now to distant, unsettled regions, but to manufacturing villages within the State. The population gathered at these points, will derive many of the elements of their character from the early training of the young men and women on the adjoining hills, just as the soil at the mountain's base partakes of the nature of the rocks by whose disintegration it is formed. The craftsmen wrought into shape, on Lebanon, the cedars which contributed to the strength and beauty of the ancient temple—so our Society, in retired and unpromising fields, is preparing materials for churches in many a rising village in our borders."

The comprehensive and liberal views of the importance and relations of the Home Missionary work, entertained by the friends of the cause in this State, so fully attested by their generous contributions, are expressed, also, in the closing paragraph of the report from which we have already quoted—"Modern inventions have made Europe our neighbor, and converted its states and kingdoms into fields of deep Home Missionary interest, if not proper fields of Home Missionary enterprise. We cannot safely be indifferent to the political or religious sentiments of any of its multiplied population. The men who are to aid in giving tone to our manufacturing villages, may, even now, be forming their habits or principles in Germany or France; the domestics who will, to no small degree, mould the character, and give a tinge to the moral feelings of our children, may be shaping their own feelings and character, in the mad cottages of Ireland.

When we give of our substance to evangelize the ignorant and the erring on the other side of the Atlantic, it is Home Missions—we are laboring for our country; when we patronize efforts among the Germans in Connecticut, it is Home Missions—we are laboring for our country. When we contribute our charities to convert emigrants thronging the prairies of the West, it is Home Missions—for in extending the kingdom of Christ, we are still laboring for our country."

PHILADELPHIA HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

This Society—comprising the States of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland—has had in commission, the last year, fifty nine ministers of the Gospel, viz.: four in New Jersey, forty nine in Pennsylvania, four in Maryland, and two in the District of Columbia. Eighty congregations have enjoyed the labors of these missionaries; four new fields have been occupied during the year; three churches ask no further aid; and two others hope to support their own ministers after the present year.

At the commencement of the year, March 1st, there remained a balance in the treasury of $478 39; and the receipts, since that date, have been $7,618 35; exceeding, by a small amount, those of the preceding year. The expenditures, on the field of the Society, have been $8,066 31; leaving a balance in the treasury of $30 43. There have also been received into the treasury of the Parent Society, from congregations and individuals within the limits of the Auxiliary and in payment of legacies, $2,825 92; making the total of Home Missionary collections on this field, during the year, $10,444 27.

"Since the organization of the Philadelphia Home Missionary Society, in 1840," says the Secretary—Rev. ROBERT ADAIR—in his last report, "there have been collected for Home Missionary purposes, within its field, $77,286 87—[now $88,731 14]. About three fourths of this sum have been expended in cultivating its numerous destitute and waste places, both east and west of the Alleghany Mountains. The balance has been expended through the Parent Society, in the Valley of the Mississippi, or remote western settlements of our country. Among the results of the appropriations and labors on this field, are the following, viz.: thirty new church organizations; thirty two substantial and convenient houses of worship erected; and eight in such a state of forwardness that they may be finished at an early day; twenty eight churches raised to self supporting power; thousands of persons secured to the cause of temperance—thousands of children taught in Sabbath schools and Bible classes—MORALITY and good order greatly promoted."

CENTRAL AGENCY, N. Y.

Forty three missionaries have been sustained through this Agency, in preaching the Gospel, for more or less of the time since the last report, to 46 congregations; and have performed 35 years of ministerial labor. The receipts of the year, ending March 1st, were $5,097 10; or $1,254 36 above the income of the year before. The disbursements were $4,855 81. Additional sums have been remitted to the Parent Society amounting to $1,110 34; showing an aggregate for Home Missionary purposes derived from this portion of the State, equal to $6,207 44.

More religious prosperity prevails in the missionary churches of this field than during several years past; and in several cases, this assumes the form and involves the blessings of a revival. In numerous instances, improvements in the external affairs of churches, and important reductions in the application of missionary funds have been made. But while increased economy and efficiency have been infused into this Agency, it is not to be concealed, that too great apathy exists in the churches of that region, in reference to its moral state. They do not sufficiently appreciate the wants of the communities around them, nor the benefits which would result to other sections of the country from having those wants supplied. Situated where the facilities and inducements to change are abundant, the churches of Central New York are often weakened, or their growth hindered, simply by the fluctuation of the materials of which they are composed. The emigration of their members, and the supply of their places in society by strangers of foreign birth or of dissimilar views, tend to postpone the day when these feeble communities will become strong. It is the aim of the Agency to stir up the active Christianity on its field to a deeper interest in the desolations that abound; until that wide territory—as large as all Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut—is brought under hopeful missionary culture.

Some details appropriate to this notice have failed to reach the Committee at the proper time, owing to severe affliction in the family of Rev. WASHINGTON TEACHER, the Secretary of the Agency.

WESTERN AGENCY, N. Y.

In the twenty counties of the State of New York, lying west of Oswego, Onondaga, Courtland and Broome—and together comprising the field of this Agency—48 missionaries have been appointed during the year, and 22 who were previously appointed have continued their labors; making 70, who, for the whole or part of the year, have preached in 80 congregations. This enumeration does not include several other appointments made directly by the Executive Committee, without the intervention of the Agency. Four missionaries, to whom a portion of the funds raised in the churches of the Presbytery of Rochester is applied, have been appointed through its Missionary Committee, to labor in an equal number of churches.

The annual receipts of the Agency have been $8,916 02. Add to this $3,220 47, sent by various contributors to the treasury at New York, and $325, applied to missionaries under the direction of the Presbytery of Rochester; and the total of Home Missionary contributions for the year, on the field above named, is $12,461 49, being $1,230 16 more than the receipts of the year before.

It is a fact of much interest, and one highly creditable to the active members of the Agency, to those who have filled the office of Secretary, and to the community that has sustained them—that of the $186,287 collected since the organization of that Board in 1826, the sum of $71,682, or nearly forty per cent., has gone to bless the destitute in other parts of the land. And hereafter, it is supposed, at least two-thirds of the income raised on this field may be withdrawn from it, and applied to the general purposes of the Society.

The improvement that is steadily going forward in those dependent churches, may be inferred from the diminution of their number, and of the aid required. Three years ago, seventy cases were judged worthy of help by the Agency; this year they have found it necessary to assist only forty eight; and the amount pledged has decreased from $6,028 to $4,100. Some congregations that have ceased to ask for aid, have done so only by the most strenuous exertions; and in case of any unforeseen disaster, it is possible that they may again, for a time, become dependent.

The Secretary of the Agency, Rev. JOHN A. MURRAY, in reviewing the work assigned to his supervision, speaks of the churches in the south western counties as most in need of assistance from abroad. “But when the public works now commenced in that region shall have been completed, the ability of those communities to sustain themselves will more rapidly improve. We are now aiding sixteen little towns or villages through which the New York and Erie Rail Road is to pass, most of which, on the completion of the road, will reach the point of self support. We thus judge, from the effect of similar improvements in other parts of the field. Of eighteen churches on the canal that have been aided, not more than one or two now need assistance; and of the thirteen churches near the rail road, between Auburn and Buffalo, which have received assistance, but two are still dependent, and one of these is of very recent organization. There is ‘a good time coming’—it may be nearer than we now anticipate—the time when every Presbyterian and Congregational church in Western New York shall have its pastor, and be able, without aid, to sustain the institutions of the Gospel."

That this expectation is not unfounded, is the more evident from an inspection of the missionary reports. The details show an accumulation of encouragement in the erection or completion of church edifices and parsonages; in the settlement of pastors; in the announcement that, after the current year, some eight or ten of the churches will need no further assistance; and especially, in the strength imparted to as many as one congregation out of six, by revivals of religion.

WESTERN RESERVE AGENCY, O.

The original charter of Connecticut gave to that State a territory extending from her present boundary westward, across the southern part of New York, to the Pacific Ocean. After the formation of other States in the region covered by this claim, conflicts arose between them and Connecticut in reference to title and jurisdiction. After various temporary arrangements, which failed to settle the matters in dispute, an agreement was effected, in 1800, by the Government of the United States, by which the State of Connecticut relinquished all claims to the lands beyond her present limits, reserving to herself 3,300,000 acres lying south of Lake Erie, within the present limits of Ohio; the title to the soil of this reservation being confirmed to Connecticut by the National Government. From this transaction was derived the name of the "Western Reserve;" and an explanation is afforded for the emigration from Connecticut to that part of the West; and also for the interest manifested in its spiritual welfare by the Connecticut Missionary Society, at least as early as forty-four years ago.

But though this region has been so long under missionary culture, it has not made a proportional moral advancement; but is yet painfully deficient in stated ministerial labor. Many of the churches are destitute of preaching, and a still larger number of townships contain no religious organization of the denominations acting through this Society; and none of much efficiency of any denomination. Even of the churches once supplied with a settled ministry, no less than seven, having become vacant, and then feeble, have gradually gone down to extinction. This decay may have been occasioned, in part, by too exclusive a reliance on the itinerant system of missions in the earlier days of the Western Reserve—by which a partial supply was provided for the people without their care, and consequently was less valued by them than if it had been mainly sustained by their own efforts—and partly, by local agitations which have more recently many of those little churches in pieces.

It is hoped, however, that the condition of those communi is improving. Rev. MYRON TRACY, the Secretary of the Agency, reports that "five of the churches aided at the commencement of the year are now supporting their ministers by their own efforts, and will ask no further aid at present."

The receipts of this Agency for the last twelve months, were $2,478 88; of which $2,439 19 were applied to missionary purposes on the Western Reserve. The number of missionaries commissioned on recommendation of the Agency is 34. They have reported stated labors in 48 different congregations, amounting in all to 30 years. Other missionaries, appointed directly by the Parent Society, have labored in the north western part of the State, and on the line of the Wabash and Erie canal.

MARIETTA AGENCY, O.

Thirteen missionaries have been appointed on the recommendation of this Board, during the past year. These have performed upwards of 12 years of ministerial labor, in 20 different congregations. The income of the Agency was $616 94; which is an encouraging advance on the previous annual receipts.

The region assigned for missionary culture by this Agency, consists of nine counties lying in the vicinity of the Muskingum River, and extending in a direction north west from Marietta. The face of the country is broken by hills and valleys, and contains much land that is not favorably situated for the formation of compact settlements. Hence, churches can be founded only by missionary labor; and can hardly be sustained without foreign aid, at least for a long time to come. "Yet we cannot find it in our hearts," says the Report of the Secretary, Rev. THOMAS WICKES, "to say that they must not look to us for assistance. We cannot assume the responsibility, as almoners of the bounty of the churches, of denying to the destitute, scattered on the hills, the privilege of hearing the Gospel preached; or of deciding that their children must grow up without its transforming and sanctifying influence. That good is accomplished in these places, we cannot doubt. The leaven of the Gospel is at work in them, and the preached word produces the same effects there, in moulding the character of society, that it does in communities where greater numbers are brought under its saving power."

"But these statements are not applicable to all our churches. There are those which are evidently growing, and becoming better able to help themselves. We can see a rapid and cheering advance. Within a very few years, the Gospel has been preached in some of the most destitute fields, grown over with the rank luxuriance of vice, and has transformed them into the gardens of the Lord. A few of our churches, during the past year, have enjoyed seasons of refreshing, though not to as great extent as in some years past."

CINCINNATI AGENCY, O.

The number of missionaries connected with this Agency, the past year, is 39. The receipts were $3,751 18; being nearly $800 above the greatest previous annual amount. As this is not derived from any large donations or legacies, it indicates a general growth of favor towards the Home Missionary cause.

The Report of the Agency bears honorable testimony to the spirit and efficiency of the missionaries. "They are faithful and laborious men in every good work. Their congregations have increased through the year, and several of them have been blessed with precious revivals. We have advanced a little in supplying the destitute: but still, nearly all those wide fields described in the reports from this Agency in 1846 and 1848, are unsupplied, and call more and more loudly for aid."

In searching for the causes of the striking difference observable in western fields, we cannot overlook the correspondence between their present character and the materials of their first settlement. Many sections were peopled by immigrants whose fathers, on the Atlantic slope, were pious, and decided advocates of intelligence and order. Their children carried these characteristics with them to the West; and hence, in so many cases, towns and cities have sprung up, adorned with churches and schools, and instinct with enterprise; and all within the memory of men now living. The secret of this advancement of moral culture at equal pace with temporal improvement, lies in the fact, that the living ministry and church order were incorporated with those communities at their origin, or were among their earliest cares. "As we travel over our field," says the Secretary, Rev. HENRY LITTLE, "and see the foot-prints of some of those first ministers who have gone to their rest, or look on the gray hairs of those who survive, or behold what the christian ministry has more recently done and is now doing, we thank God and rejoice; and yet we cannot but grieve, that means so richly blessed had not been more generally applied over the whole West at an early day."

The districts settled by emigrants whose ancestors were not supporters of the ministry, have had a history very different from the foregoing. They carried not with them, and have been slow to seek, or even to receive, the means of grace. And the effect is seen in all the departments of their social life, and extends even to the physical appearance of the places they inhabit. Such are the districts that remain permanently destitute; that are large deficient in schools, and other provisions for the public improvement and peace; that abound in intemperance, and are disturbed by brawls and bloodshed. Could the full importance of Home Missions have been felt and acted on fifty years ago, how different would now be the aspect of the western field!

" But that great receptacle of immigration is far from being full ; it is indeed only now fairly made known to the world, and the streams that pour into it are as yet in their earliest flow. Of the hundreds of thousands who land on our shores, but a small portion abide east of the Alleghanies. Our Agent estimates the foreign and American settlers who have, the last year, taken up their abode in the West, at 300,000 ; and these added to the increase of those previously there, show what has been the addition of the year to the missionary claims of that section. But it is not only on account of those who will remain there, that evangelical efforts are required. By far the larger part of the migration to Oregon and California, is likely to be derived from the western States. " You will send a few," remarks our Agent, " but we shall send the many. We are ignorant of much ; but we have learned how to emigrate ; and like birds of passage, are ready to take wing at every change of season, or opening of new territory. Nearly twenty years ago, I was an agent in the East, and stirred the spirit of many a Christian by pointing over the mountains to ' scenes surpassing fable, and yet true.' Now I am here, a young man still, in what used to be ' the West,' pleading for another ' West,' still ' over the mountains.' "

MISSOURI HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Twenty five missionaries have been sustained in Missouri the last year ; eight having received either the entire amount appropriated for their support, or a portion of it, from the treasury of the Auxiliary. The amount of receipts was $1,274 75. Taking into account an error in the reported income of the previous year, the resources of the last twelve months show an advance of between $300 and $400.

The infant churches in Missouri have suffered in an unexpected manner, and to a very serious extent, the past year, from emigration ; and are still threatened with even greater embarrassment from this source in future. The great starting points on the routes to New Mexico, California and Oregon, lying on their western limit, the people of this state have for years furnished a large proportion of the explorers and emigrants who have crossed the plains. Through these, and their connexions scattered over the State, the recent excitement has been more extensively diffused than in any other inland state. Every county and every town is stirred, and many thousands are leaving, in quest of adventure and sudden wealth. Unlike the migrations of former years, this involves chiefly the best citizens and the most useful members of society. Many of them are connected with feeble churches, which can but poorly afford to lose them. From several congregations a fourth or a third of its efficiency is thus abstracted ; and the remainder, with the missionaries, are left to go over again the toilsome road which they had travelled towards a condition of vigor and maturity.

The facts which have been repeated from year to year to show the affecting need of ministers, and the abundant openings for their labor and support, are this year re-affirmed with augmented urgency and pathos. Besides fields wholly waste, so frequent that it is of no avail to number them, there are not a few which have been visited and organized through the efforts of the Auxiliary, that have drooped for want of ministerial care, and are ready to die.

But it must not be inferred that the cause is not on the whole making progress in Missouri. Some marked encouragement is afforded, especially by the effectual working of the Holy Spirit in several of the churches. Moreover, progress has been made in supplying them with appropriate houses for the service of God. The completion of such an edifice is to a western congregation a peculiarly joyful event, and clusters about it numerous other improvements, such as the choir of singers and the Sabbath school organization; so that the day of dedication is often the beginning of a new era in the spiritual history of the place. Such has been the experience of at least one missionary church in Missouri since the last Report. Four others have so far completed their church buildings, that they can be comfortably occupied. A new spirit of enterprise on this subject has been awakened throughout the State, which must be regarded as a hopeful token of growing and permanent results.

The Secretary of this Auxiliary, Rev. J. B. TOWNSEND, renders his services without charge. The voluntary agency of Rev. ARTEMAS BULLARD, D. D., mentioned in the last Report, has been repeated with important advantage to the missionary cause.

MICHIGAN.

The number of missionaries in this State, during the year, has been 73. The collections have amounted to $1,359 27.

The Agent, Rev. CALVIN CLARK, in his annual review of the field, notices the cheering facts which follow. "Missionary churches that have been struggling for years to advance—meeting in most inconvenient school houses—have finished and dedicated their temples to the worship of the living God. It is impossible to appreciate the emotions of Christians on such occasions, without being present, and seeing with our own eyes. Other churches that had long prayed that they might enjoy the preaching of the Gospel, have had their prayers answered. Others had long been in a state of declension; the ways of Zion mourned; but God has regarded their low estate, and granted refreshings from his presence. In some portions of the State, the manifestations of the converting power of God are most illustrious, and must exert a marked influence on the future character of the communities where they are enjoyed." The last year, 180 Presbyterian and Congregational churches are reported as in existence, several of them having attained ability to support the Gospel. And what has the American Home Missionary Society done for this state? Or rather, what has it not done? "Tell the friends of Home Missions," says the Agent, "to take the map of Michigan and survey it attentively. Tell them to begin at Detroit—the beautiful 'City of the Straits'—and there they will find one Home Missionary church. As they take the Central Rail Road westward—and pass the thriving villages of Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor, Dexter, Jackson, Albion, Marshall, Battle Creek, Kalamazoo, Paw Paw, on to Niles—and ask 'What has the Home Missionary Society done for these churches?' the reply is, 'She has done all; they are her children; she has nursed them in infancy, sympathized with them in their trials, and reared them until they can go alone and repay the debt of gratitude which they owe to their benefactors. If you take the Southern Rail Road, and pass from Monroe through Adrian and Hudson to Hillsdale, you pass through churches which are all the fruits of Home Missions. And any similar excursion through the Peninsula, would lead through similar monuments of the usefulness of the Society. She is our foster mother. Never can we forget her care for us in the days of our dependence."

But there is abundant testimony that our work in Michigan is as yet very incomplete. The language of all the Missionary Committees of the various bodies in the State that act with this Society, is, "We want more men, and we must have more. Whole counties are entirely destitute of our ministers. In one county there are three churches but no missionary. In another, four churches are vacant. Ten or fifteen good missionaries are needed without a day's delay, to occupy ground and to reap the harvest where churches are already planted, and where from $100 to $300 can be furnished by each. And we can scarcely set limits to the number of places where churches might be gathered, could we have the men."

ILLINOIS.

In the year just closed, this Society has had in commission, in Illinois, 110 laborers; or 9 more than the largest previous number. The contributions gathered on the same territory, amounted to $2,345 29.

The missionary operations carried on by this Society in that State, are conducted in three divisions. The Southern counties are principally under the superintendence of the Committee of Missions connected with the Presbytery of Alton. The Central portion of the State forms the field of our Agent, Rev. WILLIAM KIRBY. In the North, Rev. ARATUS KENT, extends his supervision over twenty three counties.

Southern Illinois has repeatedly been presented, in the Reports of the Society, as a region of great destitution. Towards the missionary labor expended on it, the churches in the Presbytery of Alton have raised $448 05; nearly one hundred dollars more than during the previous year. Besides the missionaries stationed in definite fields, two have been engaged in exploring the destitute counties in this section, and doing whatever was practicable to prepare the way for the introduction of a more permanent species of labor. One of these, Rev. William Chamberlain, who had performed this pioneer service for many years, and whose experience and fidelity seemed to be indispensable in the present feeble condition of those infant communities, has been suddenly called to his reward, from the midst of a revival of religion in which he was most actively engaged. The last communication received from him was laden with expressions of grief, at seeing the sheep of Christ's flock scattered abroad for want of shepherds. Another minister, who for more than a quarter of a century stood manfully by the banner of the cross, has been compelled to relinquish his missionary labors. In his closing message to the Society and to the churches, he bears his personal testimony to the value of the missionary aid extended to the ministers of Illinois. "These men," he writes, "could not have lived—could not have been here—if they had depended on the people alone for support. If they do not continue to receive aid from your board, they will be compelled to quit the field, or starve."

From the Central portion of the state, the Agent reports: "Our churches have not been without indications of the divine favor, though revivals have not been numerous nor powerful. In several instances the weak have been strengthened, and destitutions of several years' standing are now supplied. Of four county seats which were not long since destitute of the ministry of the Gospel, three have been long supplied, and the fourth is not wholly neglected." Of the churches gathered on this territory, sixty have houses of worship; four, including a village where no church is yet organized, are engaged in building; and thirty two depend on public edifices of some kind. The usefulness of the missionaries does not terminate in immediate results. On them and on the communities which they train, more than on all others, devolves the work of organizing society, and directing its energies to the highest point of civilization. Much that is thus accomplished, is already apparent. "A stranger," says the Agent, "in travelling through our villages, can tell at a glance of the eye where they have been at work, and where not."

The Agent in Northern Illinois has been a laborer on that field from its earliest settlement, and bears witness to the mutual assistance which temporal progress and spiritual culture have rendered each other. In those twenty three counties are some 300,000 people. "Facts," he remarks, "are sometimes stranger than fiction. Sixteen years ago, this field was a desolate wilderness; now it is as the Garden of Eden. When I first travelled on an exploring tour in 1833, from Galena, going eastward, there was no settlement, after leaving the mining districts, until I reached Du Page, twenty miles from Chicago. There was no road but an Indian trail; no lodging place but the grass and the grove; no food for my horse but the wild herbage; and none for myself but the delicious berries. Now, the surplus of provisions is oppressive. It is estimated that 100,000 bushels of wheat were furnished for market last season from one small area described by a radius of five miles." Other physical and social changes are thus noticed: "Farms are multiplying every year, and the people are rearing more comfortable tenements. The school house is every where making its appearance—often large, and convenient for public worship. There are already forty or fifty churches finished, or in progress; and there are on this field thirty or forty villages, whose population ranges from three hundred to three thousand. A commendable zeal for the higher branches of learning begins to develop itself in the founding of ten or fifteen academies. The missionaries number 46, or an average of two to each county." While we would not claim all these improvements as the direct results of missionary effort, no one who will contrast this field with such as have been devoid of similar culture, can fail to see how profitable is that godliness which hath the promise of the life that now is, as well as of that which is to come.

WISCONSIN.

In this State, the Society has employed no Agent during the past year. Much of the investigation and correspondence required in making appointments, therefore, has devolved on Missionary Committees connected with the District Conventions, and upon the members of the Wisconsin Agency residing at Milwaukee.

Fifty-eight missionaries have been aided in supplying, in whole or in part, 70 congregations. There has been returned to the Treasury of the Society, principally in collections from the churches aided, $661 14.

In looking over the reports for the past year, no striking changes are discoverable, that can be put in a statistical form. There are ~~six~~ more missionaries; several pastors have been installed, and a desire prevails for a permanence of ministerial labor. There has been an evident increase of spirituality among many ministers and members of the churches, and an ardent longing to see the salvation of God. The former Agent of the Society writes : " A deep conviction of the importance of an increase of personal holiness and of a general revival of religion, was found to exist last spring ; which deepened and increased during the year. This feeling manifested itself at all our ecclesiastical meetings—which were, indeed, ' holy convocations '—especially at the General Convention in October. The indications afforded and the hopes awakened at that time, have been realized in numerous revivals of religion among the churches during the winter. There has been a thorough, and it is hoped, a permanent work of grace in many of God's people, and a precious ingathering of souls, embracing a large number of youth, ' the hope of the church.' Among the blessings realized, it is proper to mention the gracious influences of the Spirit on Beloit College, which was established chiefly by the missionaries of the American Home Missionary Society. Twelve young men connected with this institution have been hopefully converted to Christ, most of whom will probably become ministers of the Gospel."

The fruits of evangelical culture bestowed on Wisconsin, are well suited to encourage its continuation and extension to other fields. Could the patrons of this Society visit in person that State, where fourteen years ago their first missionary was stationed, they would find a hundred churches—young, indeed, but thriving ; and over seventy ministers, laboring among them with harmony and efficiency. These are the results of beginning early and beginning aright. As an example, which may repay all that has ever been done for the whole State, we may refer to the principal city, Milwaukee. " Scarcely fourteen years have passed," says an intelligent promoter of this and all good objects in the West, " since a Home Missionary gathered the first religious assembly ever convened on the site of Milwaukee, and commenced delivering the truths of the Gospel. From that day to this, the Gospel has been steadily preached. Now, there are four churches and four pastors of the Presbyterian and Congregational order, in the city. By the timely aid of the American Home Missionary Society, the country has been, in a sense, taken possession of in the name of the Lord."

A pleasing feature in the condition of this part of the field, is the permanency of the missionaries in their positions ; they continue, for the most part, in the places assigned them, from year to year. Thus, the thorough cultivation of all the ground taken, may be regarded as secure.

But there yet remaineth very much land to be possessed. There are whole counties in which a large American population is already gathered, and is continually increasing, where no minister is yet stationed. Wide regions remain to be explored and organized. Wisconsin is, moreover, a favorite resort for that large part of the German immigration which lands at our northern ports.

IOWA.

The Society has had in commission, in Iowa, during the past twelve months, 33 missionaries; most of whom, besides ministering steadily to one or more congregations each, perform much labor among the surrounding settlements.

From the returns of our Agent, Rev. JULIUS A. REED, we gather the following particulars: Six of the churches have the past year built houses of worship, at a cost of from $200 to $1,200; almost wholly without aid from abroad. There are now completed 23 church edifices; only two of the number are encumbered with debt, and one of these, only to the amount of $75. Two congregations have assumed the support of their ministers since our last Report. Three new churches have been organized; and many more might have been, had it not been deemed unwise to increase the disproportion between the number of churches and of ministers. The attendance on the means of grace is enlarged and has become more regular. Nor have the blessings of the Divine Spirit been withheld. In addition to the general growth of active piety, some churches have been especially revived. At Dubuque and several places in the neighborhood, awakenings of great power have been experienced. At Burlington, where deep interest in religion has been manifested, some twenty persons have been hopefully born again, and several family altars set up.

But while gratitude to God demands that we should rejoice in the amount of good secured by the instrumentality of the Society in Iowa, during eleven years; it is a ground for humiliation, that our endeavors have advanced so slowly in comparison with the growth of the population. Iowa has now about 150,000 inhabitants. While our most distant missionary, in that State, is 150 miles beyond the Mississippi, by far the larger portion of the ministers are within 15 miles of that River or the Des Moines. In only 23 counties are there missionaries for even a part of the time; while 27 have no stated missionary labors. An intelligent and active minister in that State, bases an earnest appeal on such facts as the following: "We need now at least twenty new missionary laborers. You are aware that our State limits extend from the Mississippi River on the east to the Missouri on the west. Settlements are already formed in the extreme south western county, and will speedily extend up the Missouri; and you will soon hear of important towns on that stream. But in addition to this expanding field on the west of our State, another not less important is opening on our north. The tract called the 'Neutral Ground,' recently purchased from the Indians, is now opened for settlement and rapidly filling up. It is described as being surpassingly beautiful; and eastern settlers, to whom it is well adapted, will no doubt flow into that region."

OREGON AND CALIFORNIA.

The attention of the Executive Committee has, for some years, been turned to the Pacific Coast, as likely to require the philanthropic regard of the friends of religion on this side of the continent. In the Twenty First Report, it was announced, that a mission had been projected to that region; and the next year, that two missionaries had been approved for this service; and that one of them, Rev. GEORGE H. ATKINSON, with his lady, had already sailed for Oregon. The other, Rev. HORACE LYMAN, with Mrs. Lyman, embarked for the same destination on the 22d of November last. It was judged proper to appoint no others to this field, until these should have explored the country, and made report of the demands and facilities for missionary labor. Letters from Mr. Atkinson have been received, announcing his safe arrival at Oregon City, June 20th, 1848, and his cordial reception there, with flattering prospects of usefulness opened before him. At the date of his last communication, his impressions of the country and its inhabitants were such as to excite the regret of the Committee, that their resources would not admit of an immediate enlargement of this most promising mission. The whole territory, containing 341,463 square miles, is supposed to possess, in its natural products and resources, and in its advantages for commerce with the Pacific, the elements of a great and prosperous state. Already, some 16,000 or 18,000 people had crossed the mountains to take up their abode there, and others were rapidly coming in.

In the mean time, the late treaty with Mexico added the region of Upper California to the responsibilities of the American churches. Immediate counsels were had for an early occupation of this field also. It was foreseen that the maritime portion of California, under the protection of a free and stable government, must attract to itself a large population; and especially, that its magnificent harbor must eventually become the entrepôt of a commerce rivalling that of London or New York. The establishment by the United States government of a line of steamers on that coast, promised to hasten these results. Arrangements were accordingly made to send forward two pioneer missionaries, by the earliest possible conveyance. As intimated already, in a former part of this Report, Rev. JOHN W. DOUGLAS and Rev. SAMUEL H. WILLEY embarked from New York on the first of December, and proceeding by way of the Isthmus of Panama, arrived in California in the latter part of February. The details of their operations since their arrival, have not yet reached the Committee.

The acquisition of this territory by the United States, has already, in a single year, proved to be one of the most remarkable events of the age. This is not merely on account of the transfer of some 439,000 square miles from one government to another, but because of subsequent events, from which the most surprising social and moral results are likely to follow. The growing ascendancy of the English in China and the Asiatic Islands, simultaneously with the transfer of California to our people, completes the control of the four great coast lines of the Northern Hemisphere, by two Protestant nations, speaking the same language, and one in all the great features of their character. The bearing of this fact, coming to pass just as steam is giving ubiquity to commercial adventure, cannot but be direct and powerful on the conversion of the Pagan tribes. And the circumstances that preceded and have followed our possession of California, show that herein a great trust is committed to us by Providence, for the benefit of a new empire, about to arise in the Pacific world. God kept that coast for a people of the Pilgrim blood; he would not permit any other to be fully developed there. The Spaniard came thither a hundred years before our fathers landed at Plymouth; but though he came for treasure, his eyes were holden that he should not find it. But in the fulness of time, when a Protestant people have been brought to this continent, and are nourished up to strength by the requisite training, God commits to their possession that western shore. But will they throw into this great enterprise such vehemence—give it such a body and soul—as the divine purposes require? To insure this, also, Providence is at no loss for means. "He spake, and it was done." The cloud, which for all past time has concealed the wealth of that golden coast, is lifted up; and instantly the heart of the nation throbs at the sight, with a pulse that is felt to its farthest extremity. The world has never seen a voluntary migration of such materials as these. In four months from the first of December, 17,300 persons sailed from our Atlantic ports to California; and it is estimated that from 20,000 to 40,000 more will have started overland for the same destination, before the first of July. These carry with them an amount of property, education, professional and mechanical skill, and of enthusiasm, never before combined in any similar movement. This enthusiasm imparts its own fervor to science and capital; it seizes upon and converts to its own purpose all physical and moral energies; and ere long, will bore through the mountains, and drive the car of commerce from sea to sea. Additional crowds, that defy all estimate of their numbers, are going there from other portions of the globe. Was there ever an epoch in the history of missions, which carried with it such a divine endorsement of its importance; which seemed so to preclude all doubt and hesitancy, and to demand such prompt and efficient action? The Committee wish to send out additional laborers with all practicable despatch; and now wait only for the requisite pecuniary means. These laborers are needed immediately; and, there is reason to believe, would be cordially welcomed; and in a few years will be liberally sustained on the ground. Oregon and California are rising into maturity without the usual period of pupillage and dependence, full grown sovereignties, replete with all other elements of greatness; let not the power of the Gospel be wanting to baptize their civilization into the name of Christ. Then will the cities and villages that shall line their coasts and overspread their valleys become the abodes of regenerated men, and sources of light and salvation to the thousand Isles of the Sea that lie beyond.

CONCLUSION.

PRESENT RELATIVE POSITION.

Having made this brief survey of the spheres of the Society's present labor, there remains on the hearts of the Committee an affecting sense that they are far from have compassed the true dimensions of this great enterprise. After all that has been accomplished in twenty three years, the country, both in territorial extent and in population, has outgrown our utmost endeavors. It is true, that the aim to secure a foothold at the most important points, and along the principal lines of migration and trade, has been happily successful. But those lines, like the boundaries and divisions of a map, do not occupy the spaces which they include. There is a vast interior, where the great mass of the people are to dwell. Each new State, in succession, has had a period in which it stood out, more prominent than all others, the Canaan of its day, to which the immigrant tribes have directed their course; but scarcely had the outline of its settlements been sketched, ere it was obliged to yield this distinction to some newer and more inviting territory beyond it. Ten states, between the Alleghanies and the Mississippi, have thus, one after another, been passed rapidly over, much of their best lands remaining for a later occupancy. These are now beginning to teem with communities which no former provision supplies with the means of grace. Routes of travel, by rail road, canal or turnpike are opened yearly, along each of which a new series of settlements springs up, for many miles in depth. Scattered farm houses cluster into villages ; the village of one year becomes a town the next. No geography or gazetteer is able to keep pace with their increase ; even the official lists of the Post Office, with all the advantages of a department of the government, are continually behind the advance of the country. To the vast amount of unfinished or neglected work on this side of the Mississippi, which these statements suggest, add what lies immediately beyond that river. There, we see a row of states bordering the stream for 1,400 miles, from Minesota to Texas, much of their territory having been settled for many years. In those states, a million and a half of our countrymen, weary with appealing for relief, stand up before us in melancholy and almost voiceless desolation. That vast central portion of the continent, watered by the Mississippi and its tributaries, is to be THE NATION ! The myriads accumulating there will wield the national sceptre ; to them our destiny is linked ; they will do what they choose with us, as well as with themselves. With solemn significance, a voice speaks out of Heaven, and warns the East, saying, "When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldst ; but when thou shalt be old, another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldst not."

Meanwhile, the immigration from abroad is rapidly becoming a portentous fact ; and whether the portent shall be for good or for ill, depends on the way in which we meet it. The number of foreigners arriving here in 1848, through the Atlantic ports and through Canada, is estimated at 300,000 ; and the causes that stimulate emigration from Europe are in undiminished action. There is no rest to the bosom of the weary old world. Tossings to and fro, change without relief, war, pestilence and starvation are dissolving the ties of kindred and country ; and other hundreds of thousands are about to precipitate themselves upon our shores. "Eviction" by judicial process, and by the still more terrible mandate of famine, is rapidly transferring the question, "What shall be done with the Irish ?" from Great Britain to the United States. It cannot be too much to estimate the total immigration of 1849, as equal to 1,000 for every day throughout the year. Should our Government send out its surveyors to the frontier, to run out the boundaries of five new states—such as Iowa or Missouri,—the foreign immigration of this year alone, would give to every one of them a population large enough to bring it into the Union, and to elect a representative to Congress. And what shall be the next year ?—and the next ?

Nor do such facts as these, even, reveal the limit of our destiny, or exhaust the argument by which we are pressed on to its accomplishment. There are ulterior, and not very remote tendencies, that it is wise for us to contemplate. Out of the marvellous changes of the age, a new order of things is arising. Providence is more obviously taking the work of human progress into its own hands. An era of missions has commenced, not planned by men, nor conducted on human principles—missions, not of individuals, but of nations—offshoots from the leading races, transplanted in such masses, and with so much of the sap and vigor of their parent stocks, as to take root and gradually engross the soil. This is seen in the growing numbers and power of the British in the East, where their colonies are rapidly crowding out the original inhabitants, with their laws, social customs and languages. It is seen in the displacement of the Indians of this country by our Anglo Saxon fathers; and in the encroachments we are now making on the Spanish race on our south western border. Such an example is New Mexico, which has recently been brought under our national rule as the result of the aggressive power of trade, carried on for several years across the prairies. It is a novel spectacle—and one which carries its own argument with it—to see a Spanish race under a government which does not shield it from the free access of Protestant Christianity! And how long shall such a door stand open—open to us, especially—and no entrance be made on behalf of the Gospel? Similar inroads of people from the British and American stock, begin to appear in the leading ports and towns of Central and Southern America. Theirs are the enterprise and the capital that already cause the remote rivers of that magnificent region to foam beneath the wheel of the steamer. “A Yankee saw mill performs its office, fifteen hundred miles from the mouth of the Amazon; and a ‘Down Easter,’ who once wielded his axe on the banks of the Kennebec, fulfils the same mission on the shore of the Rio Negro. There are no laws, no institutions, no hostilities to innovation, which can stand against trade.” This ascendancy of the vigorous over the feeble nations is not necessarily wrong; it is the natural superiority and irresistible progress of freedom, knowledge and enterprise, when brought in contact with ignorance and inactivity. What an argument is this, that our Home population—which cannot be kept at home—should be of such a kind, that with themselves, they shall transfer the elements of regeneration to the countries which they enter by their traffic and control by their influence!

In this view of the enlarging sphere of American activity, may we not find some consoling explanation of the design of Providence in sending so many foreigners to our shores? As physical barriers are now so generally removed, and the whole world is coming into a condition of preparedness for receiving a christian civilization, is it not probable that a race will be raised up for this world-mission, whose character shall contain those selected elements which are most needful to make a complete missionary people? Let there be a mixture of the peculiarities of different races. For example; let the high resolve and energetic will of the Briton—which yields only to itself—with the wide and philanthropic scope of aspiration developed in our Pilgrim Fathers, form the basis of the combination. Add to this the reflection, discrimination and patience of the German mind, fruitful in the adaptation of means to ends. Let France add something, but Ireland more, of the fire of enthusiasm to quicken these elements into action. Thus would there be formed a composite character, more aggressive and efficient than either of the materials from which it is made up. But where could such a union take place? In Europe they cannot be separated from their present combinations, nor is there a space, there, where they could commingle. There is nowhere a common receptacle into which they can be poured, but the broad expanse of our own Mississippi Valley. For such an end as this, it has been kept in reserve for so many ages. For this, the materials are gathering, and beginning to act upon and modify each other, just as that grand movement in commencing, whose progress they will soon be wanted to assist.

In such a consideration of the uses which Providence is making of our country and our people, the duty assigned us becomes something more than merely to provide for a few hundred thousands, on the verge of the organized states. When the bearings of our work are justly considered, the distinction between Home and Foreign missions disappears. The enterprise of evangelizing this land becomes, in effect, and on a grand scale, a MISSION TO ALL MANKIND. And if the present generation are wise to understand and faithful to fulfill this divine appointment, the whole world will feel the blessing of it; and our children and our children's children will praise God on our behalf, saying, "THOU HAST INCREASED THE NATION, O LORD, THOU HAST INCREASED THE NATION; THOU ART GLORIFIED; THOU HAST REMOVED IT FAR UNTO ALL THE ENDS OF THE EARTH!"

Relation of Auxiliary Societies, Agencies and Committees of Missions to the American Home Missionary Society; Applications, &c.

State and other large Auxiliaries.

Most of the State Missionary Societies were in existence before the formation of the National Society, and some of them—as the Missionary Societies of Connecticut and Massachusetts—were among the earliest organized efforts in our country for sending the Gospel to the destitute. They have voluntarily connected themselves as Auxiliaries with the American Home Missionary Society, from a conviction that greater unity of plan and efficiency in action would thereby be promoted.

The terms by which such Auxiliaries—acting on the principles of the Parent Society, undertaking the supply of the destitute within their own bounds, and paying over their surplus funds to the Parent Institution—are connected with the Parent Society, are such as to secure the following objects; viz:

First—The Auxiliary is not superseded or overshadowed by the National Institution, but on the contrary, is invigorated and sustained by connection with it.

This is secured by the provision that the Auxiliary is the sole agency for this cause that operates on its field. It controls all appointments in the state to which it belongs. From it alone, so far as its means will allow, the feeble churches receive assistance. Thus, a direct relation and strong attachment is cherished towards it, in the hearts of the ministers and churches.

Again—While the local operations of the Auxiliary are thus encouraged and sustained, its connection with the Parent Society is such as to awaken an interest in the destitute beyond its own limits, and afford facilities for reaching them. It is not only a Society for local purposes, but it is also a branch of the National Society, and as such, has the control of all agencies for the collection of funds within its own field, and can direct the manner in which its surplus resources shall be expended beyond its own limits. Thus, the state and other large Auxiliaries are not merely organizations to help the Parent Society; they are integral parts of it, bound together in one whole by a common interest in, and free access, through the Parent Society, to the great field to be occupied, and governed by the same general principles and rules in carrying on their work.

Agents and Agencies.

Besides taking up contributions for Home Missions, the Agents of the American Home Missionary Society exercise a general superintendence of the operations of the Society within their respective fields. By correspondence and personal visitation, they ascertain the wants of the destitute; assist them to obtain the preaching of the Gospel; and instruct and encourage them to develop their own means for its support. They receive applications for aid, and make such preliminary examination as may be necessary before submitting them for the action of the Executive Committee; and in other ways labor to insure a judicious and economical application of the Society's funds. At present, the Society has in its employ no merely collecting Agents, nor any whose services are not required for other purposes in the regions where they labor. The Secretaries of several of the larger Auxiliaries, are also the Agents for this cause in their respective bounds.

In certain districts, where the duties of an Agent are likely to be peculiarly responsible, there is associated with him a board of counsellors selected from the region of his labors, called an Agency. These Boards of Agency differ from Auxiliary Societies, in that they have no independent existence, but are appointed by the Executive Committee from year to year, and are governed by rules which the Committee prescribe. Their office is to counsel and direct the Agent in carrying out the principles of the Society, and to give advice in relation to such local matters as may be submitted to them by the Executive Committee. The persons composing a Board of Agency, are selected for their intelligence and interest in this cause, and their influence in promoting it; and are so distributed over the field as to secure a personal acquaintance with its condition. The Agent of the Society is also the Secretary of the Agency with which he is associated.

These boards of counsel might not have been necessary, had the ecclesiastical bodies on the ground been able and disposed to pay sufficient attention to the missionary work, and to act as its directors in their respective bounds. But the ministers composing them are usually scattered over a wide extent of territory, and meet but seldom, and only at seasons when they are much occupied with other business; and accordingly it has been necessary in some cases to organize agencies for this specific work. But in other cases, Synods, Presbyteries and Associations have chosen to act as Auxiliaries to the Society, examining into the condition of the destitute within their bounds, and recommending the appropriate action for their relief. Ecclesiastical bodies thus related to the American Home Missionary Society act through.

Committees of Missions.

The American Home Missionary Society has ever regarded the ecclesiastical bodies as the appropriate judges of the standing of their own ministers, and of the wants of the churches in their connection. Accordingly, the commission issued to every missionary requires that his credentials be acceptable to that ministerial body of his denomination, within whose bounds he is appointed to labor. And the various Presbyteries, Associations, &c., are invited to appoint, each, a Committee of Missions from its own members to receive applications from its churches, and suggest to the Society the action proper in each case. Such a Committee constitutes the official source to which reference can be had for information and advice, in all matters pertaining to missions in the connection to which it belongs. This mode of co-operation has been preferred by numerous ecclesiastical bodies, from the first formation of the Society. It guaranties to the churches of each denomination represented in the Society, that their respective claims shall be fairly considered, with all the advantage of having the endorsement of the body to which they belong. The advice of such a Committee, acting in the name and by the direction of the ecclesiastical body to which they belong, is regarded as the highest authority in matters pertaining to the standing of ministers and churches in their connection, and has the same influence with the Society, as that of a Board of Agency appointed by itself.

There is one limitation to this influence, however, which ought to be stated. Should any ecclesiastical body so far swerve from the principles of truth and Gospel order, as not to retain the fellowship and confidence of the great body of the Presbyterian and Congregational churches in our land, that fact would cause its recommendations not to be respected, as a basis of action, by the Executive Committee.

As cases may occur in which the feeble churches may not be aware of the existence of any Board of Agency, or Committee of Missions, through whom to apply for aid, a general provision is made, that applications may be vouched for by any two ministers of known and approved standing, who can certify to the facts of the case. If the information thus given is not sufficient, other facts are sought by the Executive Committee with as little delay as practicable, from the most authentic sources from which they can be obtained.

Such, briefly, are the relations of the American Home Missionary Society to the various organs, through which the community seeks to act out its missionary feeling. It will be seen that this plan secures the united action, in the missionary work, of those whose views of doctrine and church order admit of co-operation, and whose interests in the great field are essentially the same. This combination insures a homogeneous policy as to the manner and amount of appropriations, and the qualifications of missionaries; it has discouraged sectional feelings, and diffused throughout each part an interest in all the rest; and thus has formed ties between the West and East, along which have passed, from the latter to the former, a silent and invisible current of moral influences, more valuable, if possible, than all pecuniary grants. At the same time, the connection of the Parent Society with the various Associations that act with it, is such as to secure to them entire freedom in the missionary work, in their respective spheres, and an influence beyond them, in cultivating the waste places of our common country.

Applications for Aid.

Feeble congregations, applying for aid in supporting the Gospel, are requested to embody in their applications the following particulars, viz:

The name of the church or congregation; the number of communicants, and the average number of attendants on public worship; the denomination and size of congregations immediately contiguous, with the distance to their places of worship; the total amount of salary which the applicants propose to make up; the largest portion of that salary which they can raise for the given time, and the least amount that will suffice from the Society; whether the minister for whom a commission is desired, is the pastor of the church, or if not, whether any arrangements are made, or contemplated in the course of the year, with reference to his instalment. These statements should be signed by the trustees and elders or deacons, or by a committee of the congregation, and confirmed by the certificate of two or more clergymen of good standing, acquainted with the facts. Also—

The name and post office address of the minister whose services they desire to secure; his credentials; and the certificate of two or more ministers of known standing, as to his general character for piety, zeal and acceptableness as a minister of the Gospel, and his adaptedness to this particular field of labor.

Where the ecclesiastical body with which a church is connected has a "Committee of Missions" to act in their behalf, this Committee are the proper persons to certify the statements of the church, the standing of the minister and his prospects of usefulness in the place where his services are desired; and the application should, in all cases, be sent to them for their endorsement and recommendation.

As a general rule, the appropriations of the American Home Missionary Society are for twelve months from the date of the application; at the end of which, if further aid be needed, a new application must be made, containing all the particulars above stated, and endorsed and recommended in like manner. And each congregation applying for renewed aid, should furnish in addition to other testimonials, the certificate of the missionary, that they have fulfilled their previous pledges for his support.

It is desirable that applications should be addressed to the care of the Agent, Agency or Auxiliary Society of the American Home Missionary Society, for the region where the applicants reside; but in case of doubt as to the name or residence of such Agent, or the existence of such Agency or Auxiliary, applications may be sent directly to the office of the Parent Society, addressed to one of the Secretaries.

Addresses at the Twenty Third Anniversary.

Address of Rev. Henry Little, of Madison, Ind.,

On moving a Resolution for the acceptance of the Report :

MR. PRESIDENT,—I wish this resolution to be adopted, because that report ought to be circulated far and wide through this great nation. It communicates facts that the churches in our land ought to know, and in which they ought to be deeply interested. In it, our gratitude is expressed to the American Tract Society and to the Sabbath School Unions. It might also have expressed our gratitude to some friends who have sent us large boxes of those Sabbath Manuals that our missionaries and other ministers have taken along with them in their pastoral visits, and which have been great and important aids in their work. Allow me to give you one fact. A missionary, who was an eloquent German preacher, went with these tracts to a neighborhood where the people were almost entirely Roman Catholics. Being a little wiser than some of our tract distributors, when a man said he could read, he knew that he could not read well enough to understand the tracts, and he sat down and read and expounded them. When he had read and prayed with one of these Roman Catholics, he said, "As Christ is present as well as the priest, you may as well confess directly to him, and save the money for your family; and besides, the priests have no power in this country, and cannot injure you." In one winter, thirty or forty of these Roman Catholics were born again and became Protestants.

I wish this report to be widely circulated, because it urges an onward movement. We have lost immensely by neglect. We thank the Eastern churches for what they have done in what we used to call the West; but, sir, there has been an immense loss, because we have not come up to the indications of God's providence. Let me state a fact or two here. Long ago, a few ministers from the Connecticut Home Missionary Society went out into Ohio. Several churches were organized. One of these churches was organized at Granville, in the centre of the state. That church sent to the Connecticut Home Missionary Society for one hundred dollars a year, which they received for eight long years, and without which they could not have kept their minister. The other churches had no such aid, and all of them died; while this Granville church increased to 400 members, and now sends us $200 a year, for what they received, to help us on in this work. Look at another fact of an opposite character. There was a deacon of a church in Vermont, who moved to New-York and there became an elder of a Presbyterian church. He then went out to the state of Indiana, which was then the Far West, and there found another brother, who had been member of a church in New England. They were anxious to get a minister, but could not succeed; and he joined another church, which did not please him, and at length left it and became a Universalist, and took along with him several other Vermont professors, and made Universalists of them all, and they erected a Universalist meeting-house. Now, if there had been a missionary to go along with them, he might have restrained them from embracing such errors. Another man, the son of a pious woman in Connecticut, who was dedicated to the Lord in his infancy, went into that neighborhood about the same time, but there was no preaching that satisfied him, and he became an infidel, and died five years ago, a very old man, leaving two generations of his own name behind him, but not one of them is known to be a Christian of any denomination. He was taught the good old catechism in Connecticut, but there was no missionary to follow up these instructions, and he became an infidel. Now, his posterity would make a very respectable congregation, but not one of them seems to fear the Lord. I mention these cases, and the Granville case, to show the two classes of facts. If the Church would only come up to what Providence indicates, what wonderful, what heart cheering results would be witnessed. What has made the Eastern states what they are? What has made Massachusetts, for instance, what she is? As soon as the first settlers came they built a meeting house, where there was preaching every Lord's day; and close by they built a school house, where the Bible was read every day, and where that good old catechism was taught every week, and moral principles instilled, with line upon line and precept upon precept, until those principles were fixed in the minds and hearts. This has made those states what they are. On the other hand, very large fields have been left almost entirely uncultivated, while God in his providence, in the astonishing movements of this age, calls upon us to come up and finish this work.

Let me mention one other fact. We had a meeting in the Far West, a year or two ago, when a brother came in and reported that there were 20,000 Norwegians who were Protestants in their faith, and who were very anxious to be Americanized. (They said they would be very glad to have their children go to our schools, but that "the American children are so bad that we dare not send our children to school with them, lest their morals should be corrupted.") There has been most sinful neglect, and there are a great many other schools besides those in Wisconsin, where the honest-hearted Norwegian could not send his children to school without danger of their being corrupted, because the church and the school-house were not established, and christian principles inculcated, at the very beginning.

The Report speaks of the vast increase of population. It says, and no doubt with great correctness, that the increase will be about one thousand a day during the coming year, from foreign parts alone. Now, let us dwell a moment upon this thought. Suppose President Polk had last year appointed a committee to go out among the Buffaloes—where the rivers are near 3000 miles long, and where there is room enough—and mark out five great territories, as large as the State of New-York; and suppose he had placed some other committees at all the proper landings on the Atlantic, and whenever emigrants walked off the ships, sent them straight across to these five new territories; you see that in the course of the past year the increase of population, from that source alone, would have been sufficient to make five great additional states in this Union. The population coming in this year will also be sufficient, so far as numbers are concerned, to compel Congress to admit five new states, and this indicates the missionary work to be done up this year, besides all the unfinished work of past years, and what Oregon and California call upon us to do.

This immense augmentation of population causes continual change. Really, we Home Missionary agents ought to have some sympathy from the community. When we get a fine address made out fit to deliver, we have to deliver it quick, because facts will not remain facts. They keep changing. I heard a minister of Cincinnati say that he went there when he was personally acquainted with every family in the city, and now, said he, "We have 23,000 inhabitants." I used to tell what a wonderful and rapid increase of population that was; but now you must put more than 100,000 to it to make it tally with the fact. I went down the river Ohio to Madison, La., where they were receiving one hundred dollars a year to support a minister. They have now two Presbyterian churches, and give enough annually to support two Home Missionaries. I went down a little further, to New Albany, where they were receiving one hundred dollars a year of assistance, and where they have now two Presbyterian churches, each of which contributes enough annually to support a missionary. I labored long to procure a minister for La Fayette, in Indiana, before any church was opened, and now it has two Presbyterian churches, and the one which co-operates with us, contributes about enough to sustain a Home Missionary. So, you see, facts will not remain facts. A year or two ago, I had our whole territory all fixed out for a speech, but before I got it ready to deliver, we had added, by the annexation of Texas, a country as large as seven such states as Pennsylvania; and I had the matter barely re-adjusted, when the arrangement was again broken up by the acquisition of a new territory as large as all the original glorious thirteen. And, so, we deserve some sympathy; for facts will not remain facts. If any of your book makers are writing books about the West, I advise you to publish quick or they will not be true—for nothing remains a fact in the West.

The Committee in their Annual Report tell us that they have found the Far West. I am a little skeptical. I have been eighteen years travelling up and down after it, and have not been able to find it. When I see the Anglo-Saxon race all going west, not a man of them returning east, and when I see what kind of men they are, I am inclined to think that the Pacific is not going to stop them. We shall yet say the "West Indies," instead of the "East Indies." Missionaries will yet go from the Western Pacific shore to China, and all the various countries of Asia.

Now, brethren, let me urge you—as Oregon and California, those great regions, are filling up so fast—to send a missionary out with every vessel that sails, who shall stand beside the diggings and tell every man, day by day, as he is digging, that he has a mine in his bosom more valuable than that which he is working; warning him to prepare for the enjoyment of those riches which perish not with the using.

As I have said, there are many of these facts that will not remain facts, but there are some facts that remain, and will remain forever. Among these are the fact that man is immortal, and prone to go down to destruction; that he must be born again, or he cannot see the kingdom of God; that it is through the foolishness of preaching, not once, but by a continual repetition of it, by line upon line and precept upon precept, that erring men are reclaimed.

If the Society has found the West, and if this immense current of mind now flowing thitherward can rush no farther, then must come the re-action, and the tide of their own influences will roll back upon us, and those upon the Atlantic must take care of themselves, and provide that those influences shall be genial and good, by sending out now a missionary with every ship, who shall plant there the religion of the Cross.

Address of Rev. D. Howe Allen, D. D., of Lane Seminary, O.,

In support of the following Resolution:

Resolved, That greatly increased efforts in behalf of Home Missions are demanded by the exigencies of the country and the Providence of God.

MR. PRESIDENT—For a long time we have been accustomed to say that God has waked up the human mind to the most intense action of which it is capable; and yet, somehow or other, the intensity of its action seems to increase upon us every day; so that now it has come to pass that we dare not attempt to say what men will not accomplish. You tell us here in New York that before long we shall go to California in a balloon, and if we do not exactly believe it, we do not exactly dare to deny it, for the past few years would rebuke us if we should attempt to set such a limit to the discoveries and to the action of men in this land. But what I wish to direct your attention to is, that God's hand is in all this great movement. It is the same Being who, in the fulness of time, sent Christ to the earth when he had prepared the way for his coming; it is the same Being who when Luther appeared, gave him the printing press with which to turn the world upside down;—it is He who raised up the "universal Yankee nation" and planted them where they must work and become hardy and industrious or starve; and kept them there until their attachment to the soil became so strong that the tide of emigration is in no danger of sweeping them off. And when they needed to swarm, it was He that opened this great western world to them; and when they demanded greater facilities of intercommunication, it was He that raised up a Fulton, and by steam introduced a new age of commerce; and when still greater facilities were demanded, it was the same Being that gave us our own beloved Morse, who taught us to talk by lightning; and now when the experiment of navigating the ocean by steam has been demonstrated to be practicable, and we want to be linked with the old world by a shorter chain, it is He that has unlocked to us the mines of California, and poured in there a population of thousands and tens of thousands, who will presently turn round and demand at our hands the railroad to bind us to the Pacific by steam, and bring all the commerce of the old world through the new, and introduce another age of commerce. This I say is God's work, and in this way he has been adding one stimulus after another to the human mind until it would seem as if its most intense activity had been reached.

Now, sir, ought not the Church to sympathize with this movement of the mind? Ought not the schemes of the Church to be conceived and executed with as much energy and as much hope as the schemes of the world in respect to commerce? Nay, more, ought they not to be carried out with more energy and more hope inasmuch as the motives of eternity are mightier than the motives of earth, inasmuch as the promises of Jesus Christ are more sure than all the promises of the world? Ought we not to expect, that Christians, stimulated by those principles and sustained by those hopes and promises, would be in their schemes of benevolence far outstretching the boldest aspirations of the world? It seems to me that the providence of God in respect to the cause of missions especially calls upon us for this very thing. That providence is as marked in regard to the missionary operations, as it is with regard to commercial transactions or anything else. Where did our modern missions commence? If I am rightly informed they had their origin in Connecticut, in the days of old father Mills, the father of Samuel J. Mills, and in the days of the venerated father of President Day. We are told that those men and their associates were accustomed to leave their parishes two or three months in the year, and go on missionary tours to Vermont, and when they came back, and by their firesides told their children what they had seen and done, they kindled a fire the results of which they little anticipated. When Samuel J. Mills made known to his father that he had intended to preach the Gospel to the heathen, the old man in surprise said to him, "My son, where did you learn to be a missionary?" "I learned it of my father, sir," was the affecting reply. The old man learned it at the feet of Christ, the great missionary from heaven to earth, and put it in practice in Vermont. He taught it to his son at the fireside and that son took it with him to Williams College, and the old Williamstown haystack furnished not the fuel, but the place to keep the fire burning until it filled many hearts, and the American Board of Foreign Missions was formed. That ray of light has been penetrating the darkness of heathenism until the whole world is now opening to the labors of our missionaries. But the parent stock, domestic missions, how that has grown! Your Report has traced it from Vermont through New York, and Ohio, and Indiana, and Illinois and onward to the Pacific Ocean, counting its subjects by millions where they were at first counted by hundreds. Does not God, in this condition of the cause in which we are engaged, call upon us for corresponding effort? Is not his providence as marked in respect to this cause, as in respect to anything else?

I have sometimes thought, what would be the feelings of the apostle Paul if he could stand where we stand to-night. The privilege he had was that of writing letters to the churches and employing men to copy them by hand one after another, and of sending them—not by steam, not even by mails—but by private communication. For if you read the epistle to the Philippians, you will notice that the pastor of the church, Epaphroditus, was sent all the way from Philippi to Rome with a contribution to the wants of the apostle, and the apostle sent back a letter to the Philippian church by him. Such was their mode of intercommunication. But though laboring at such disadvantage, though exposed to tortures for the doctrines of the Lord Jesus which he advocated, and though his heart was attracted upward by the love of Christ such as never dwelt, perhaps, in any other mind so strongly, so that he could say "I desire to depart and be with Christ," still, he was "in a strait twixt two, and wot not what to choose." He was in doubt whether to decide to go up to Christ or stay and labor on in this world. Let him stand where we do to-night. Give him the printing press to publish more copies of his epistles in one day than all the Scribes of Judea could write out in a lifetime. Give him the steam engine, the railroad and all the means of intercommunication that we have to scatter those epistles; give him the thousand missionaries that you have; give him the colporteurs and all the immense machinery now in operation to work with, give him lightning to publish his doings to the churches, and would he not say, Let me live and toil on, that I may gather souls to Christ? And ought not such to be the response of the church? Does not God call upon us, by putting into our hands these agencies, to come up to his help with mightier energy, with a firmer purpose and with larger plans than we have ever before entertained?

But, Sir, I wish to say a few words as a Western man with respect to the work which this Society is doing in the Great West. It has been my privilege to labor there for sixteen years, and I have been so situated that by my correspondence, and by those who have come under my instruction, almost the whole valley has come under my eye. Sir, I am happy here to bear my humble testimony to a truth to which I believe the hearts of thousands and millions in that valley will respond, that of all the agencies employed for the evangelization of the West we owe most to you. To you thousands who were once destitute of the Gospel now render their benedictions for having bestowed it upon them. They remember with most devout gratitude the missionary who was sent to them in their destitution, who has knelt with them by their firesides, who has buried their husbands or their wives, baptised their children and consecrated them to Jesus.

Again, Sir, I would urge a larger devotion to this cause, because it affords you the quickest mode of evangelizing the West. When Jesus Christ stood upon the earth and looked over the whole world, then destitute, he prayed the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his harvest, and by laborers he meant those to whom he could say—"Go preach the Gospel." And we certainly are not wiser than He. To illustrate this remark, that the missionary work is the quickest mode of accomplishing what you wish to do in the West let me refer you to the history of one of your own missionaries. You sent him a little less than three years ago to a town in the State of Ohio, which, when he went there, presented about as hopeless a field of labor as could be found in the western valley. The infidel was there before him, and almost the whole population was infidel. The frog shop was there before him, and the people were debased with intemperance. He went there, and sustained at first by you, he set himself down to do God's work, even for a life time if God willed it. He began by visiting from house to house, and conversing with men, women and children. He had learned how to do it. He knew how to meet the infidel. He was a gentleman and knew how to approach men—and strange to say, he learned it all in the Theological Seminary. In a very short time he had the vast majority of that population to hear him preach, and if you will read one of his late reports, presented, I think, within the present year, you will find that he says—and I can testify to its truth—that infidelity is fairly vanquished. He has been blessed with a precious revival of religion and has gathered a large church, and Christianity may be said to be fairly established there. Now, Sir, plant such men at every such point—and places where they are needed are more numerous than the heads I see to-night—all over the West, and you will do the work of evangelizing the West quicker, incalculably quicker, than you can by all other agencies combined. This is the agency which Christ commands us to pray for and which he himself has commissioned.

There is one other thought, and only one, upon which I will dwell. It is that this is the cheapest way to evangelize the West. Sir, I am almost ashamed to name this consideration. It is to me a humiliating thought, that those who are redeemed by the blood of Jesus Christ can calculate the value of their benevolent intentions in dollars and cents. But so it is, and therefore it must be named. I have been for the last ten or twelve years one of a committee of your Society, whose business it is to make appropriations to the missionaries, and on the field in which I have labored, covering most of Southern Ohio and the State of Indiana, our average appropriations have not exceeded $100, and I presume it will be found to be true of nearly if not all the missionary ground east of the Mississippi river. Sir, the entire salary of four-fifths of all your missionaries east of the Mississippi and west of the Alleghanies, including the entire amount they have received from their people, will not average over $300 per annum; but so far as you and the Society are concerned, it is a missionary for $100. If you examine the statistics of this Society you will find that the entire expense of sustaining a missionary in any part of the field, including the expenses of the establishment in New-York, your Secretaries, your missionary rooms, and every thing else—averaging the expenses of the institution by the years of actual labor put forth by the missionaries—does not exceed $166. The present year it amounts to $178. The reason of that increased expense is obvious at once, when you remember what it costs to send a missionary to Oregon and California, and remember also what is stated in your report, that of the increase of your missionaries, six-sevenths of the increase of the missionaries in ten years, have been in the far West, where the missionaries must receive a larger appropriation than those in the more eastern States. I think this is enough on that point. It is the cheapest mode of evangelizing the West. If the Christians of this city wish to calculate their schemes of benevolence by dollars and cents, let them look at those facts. So far as the benevolence of the churches is concerned, you may have a missionary of the cross of Jesus Christ devoted wholly to that work, for $166 per annum, all told! Sir, I have sometimes thought that you might get tired of hearing about the West and of sending missionaries to the West; but my good friends be patient. It is just exactly what the Church has been doing ever since the Star of Bethlehem arose and moved westward until it stood over the place where Jesus lay. Not two years ago I think a missionary of the American Board of Foreign Missions, himself a native of the West, stood at the post of Troas and wrote these words: "When the apostle Paul stepped from these great stepping stones into his boat bound for Phillippi, the Kingdom of Heaven commenced its westward movement, and from that day to this it has kept upon the line of its early direction. Westward to Italy, to Spain, to England, westward across the Atlantic to America, westward still to the wide valley of the Mississippi, and over to the Pacific and to the beautiful islands that lie in her bosom." So wrote the missionary, and may we not add with the brother that has preceded me that you have not found the West yet. When you have laid your railroad across the Rocky Mountains, and when you have bridged the Pacific with your steamers, the course of the missionary will be westward still, until the light that was kindled on Calvary shall again illuminate the spot that gave it birth.

But, Sir, in connection with this fact there is another not to be forgotten, and that is this: just in proportion as the light of Christianity has moved westward it has left the East in darkness, as the light of the natural sun does. Now it becomes a question of interest to our minds, must it always be so? As it shall roll on and enlighten the shores of the Pacific, shall it leave our Atlantic coast in darkness? Will the light grow out in our beloved New England? Shall New York become another Rome? If not, why not? Sir, I cannot dwell on that topic, I must answer in a word. If not, it will be because it is prevented by the possession and exhibition of the spirit of missions. If you examine the history of the matter, which I have not time to present to you to-night, you will see that the light has grown dim and been extinguished in the eastern church, just as the spirit of missions, which is the spirit of Jesus Christ, has subsided and died away. If we would not have the light put out upon our own shores; if we would continue to send it eastward as well as westward, then must we come up to the spirit of the resolution which I have offered, and put forth greatly increased efforts for the great work of Home Missions.

[We regret that, owing to a misapprehension, Mr. Storrs' address was not fully reported. The following sketch is taken from the "Independent."]

Resolved, That the work of establishing throughout the country an evangelical ministry is now the grand work for the world's conversion, and should be prosecuted with an enthusiasm corresponding to its magnitude.

In support of this resolution he said—The world is to be converted to the Gospel. The light which shone upon Calvary is to encircle the earth, and return to gladden again the place where it first appeared. And this great work is to be done by human effort—not by a miracle, not by any special and overpowering dispensation of Divine Providence, but by the strenuous, protracted, faithful and prayerful efforts of those who love Jesus Christ.

And where are we to find a great christian instrumentality adequate to this result. Shall we look to Asia, the land where Christianity commenced its career? In Asia we behold society utterly exhausted and worn out; void of all vital energy, and held together only by the instinct of self-preservation and the arm of power. The winged lion dug from the site of ancient Nineveh is not more a symbol of the ancient civilization, than are the ruins from which it was taken emblematic of the present condition of the people. Asia can do nothing for this purpose.

Shall we look to Europe for this instrumentality? There we find the great and swollen power of Russia, its government centralized and held at the will of one man. How much that government could do for our object, for the kingdom of Christ, if there were the heart for it! But it seems to be absorbed in the one idea of extending the iron ring of its own boundaries, of grasping the Dardanelles, of realizing the old Mohammedan prophecy which predicted that in four hundred years from the time that the Cross bowed to the Crescent at Constantinople the Crescent should again yield to a power led on by the banner of the Cross. There is Germany—but the utmost that it has the power to do for the Gospel, in the midst of its own atheistic Pantheism, is to keep alive the smouldering embers on its own altars. It can do nothing for the conversion of the world. Shall we look to Italy? bound down by the combined despotisms of Austria and Rome? It lies like Enceladus under Sicily, whose writhings heave up the lava of revolution and bloodshed.

Spain and Portugal are but an incubus upon Europe. And France is as the blinded giant humbled to the earth, and ever and anon struggling to break away, but still so bound around with the fine net-work of diplomacy that he strives in vain, though tearing his own flesh in his agony, and wiping the bloody film from his sightless eyeball. Why, these are the very nations whom we have to work for—not the instrumentalities that are to do the work.

Blessed be God there is one people who can do this work. Praise be to him for the Christian enterprise and intelligence and faith of England. That Anglo Saxon race, with its Literature and its Religion and Christian energy, will make the Bible follow the drumbeat of British power round the globe. There are marks of English zeal in the monuments of her sons who have been martyrs for the truth on every shore, in every clime. But there are some things which she cannot do so well as we. A conquered people are not predisposed to embrace the religion of the conqueror. The associations with guns and bayonets are but little harmonious with the persuasives to piety. I have no doubt that God will overrule the triumphs of British power in China and in India to the promotion of his designs. That power has broken through the mighty archways, that under them the banner of the cross might pass unbent. But it will take time to obliterate the memories of conquest.

And England has a great work to do at home. There is the Union of Church and State to be dissolved. They have grown up together, and intertwined like vines, until the separation will seem like pulling the life out of both. But it may be done; not the work of one year, or of ten, but a prolonged struggle. And there is the great work of the renovation of English Society, which must take place before the full power of the English nation can be put forth for the conversion of the world. And if that power were all in use at this moment, the work is too vast to be accomplished by a single people. And where shall we look for the mighty auxiliary which is demanded, but to our own country?

All history and prophecy, and reason and experience, point to this nation as a primary agency, the grand leading Power in the conversion of the world. The vastness of our extent, from ocean to ocean, so diversified, and yet so wonderfully knit together as one physical structure, and bound with bands of iron and nerves of lightning—we stand here, day by day, as on the summit of the earth, to shed forth blessings on either hand, by the Atlantic and the Pacific, to Europe and to Asia.

Such a national life and energy can be found nowhere else, on earth or in history. The original stock is remarkable, and its development still more peculiar. The Puritan stock is not distinguished for grace and refinement, but, it has those qualities on which every grace and embellishment must be superinduced—that quality which never breaks down nor gives way, though you subject it to the trials of revolution. That stock is now consolidated and prepared for the addition of every other quality of every other race and nation. The vivacity of the French, the acuteness of the Italian, the plodding earnestness of the German, the generosity of the Irish, can here fuse and mingle into one amalgam which, like Corinthian brass, shall be more precious than any single metal of which it is composed. Our nation stands out before the world as the representative of one great Idea, that Man as man is the chief object of regard; that his rulers are for him, not he for them. The whole world is turning to this Idea, as the Parsees turn to the sun. This Idea is clattering against the battlements of royalty. It sways the tide of human hearts as the moon sways the ocean wave. This nation is undoubtedly to exert an influence upon the destiny of the world such as has been exerted by no other.

Suppose now that the vital energy of this nation shall be governed by Christian principle, and that this power shall all be wielded for the cause of Christ! We shall conquer mankind, not by the force of our arms, but by the power of our ideas. Our country stands as the granite hills on which to rest the hopes of the world. Or, rather, like Mount Atlas, to bear up the world into the light and glory of the Gospel.

Is it not our duty, then, to put forth all our energy to save this country? We can do it by God's blessing. God has placed us now in the position where we can shed a redeeming influence upon the land and save it. To doubt that our country can be saved is to abandon the Christian faith. If we will labor for it as we ought and as we may—if we will labor for it as the sailor labors for the salvation of his ship when she is drifting upon the rocks and he sees that by almost superhuman exertion he can bring her off into a smooth summer's sea—if we will work as Cromwell wrought at Naseby, when he saw the battle trembling in suspense, and rushed in with his stern Puritan troops and fought with such a spirit of enthusiasm as overwhelmed the forces of Prince Rupert—if we will put forth that enthusiasm which men should feel who labor for the world, and for the glory of God, and for the salvation of the human race—we can save our country.

We must plant everywhere our schools and our colleges. We must enlist every proper instrumentality, and put forth every effort. And above all, and first of all, we must do the work of Home Missions by planting everywhere an evangelical ministry. And by an evangelical ministry, I mean a ministry that is in sympathy with Christ, men who have communed with him, and have received the baptism of his Spirit, and hold his truth as the life within them. Such a ministry is to be employed and supported, all over our country, and all experience and argument, and history, and Scripture tell us what will be the result. Such a ministry has been enjoyed. And how the influences of such a ministry, shed down in former days from the high pulpits of New England, moulded and energized a people, let the world observe. For the extension of such a ministry we are here to-night.

We have had much to say and to hear about Romanism. Sir, I would not say one word to wound the feelings of any friend of Rome who may be here to-night. But there are three things to be noticed in regard to Romanism. One is, that its theology is irreconcilably opposed to the nature and spirit of Christianity. Another thing is, that its principles, and spirit, and ecclesiastical organization are against the spirit of the age and of the land. And the third thing is, the history of the Inquisition and of those arbitrary acts and binding policy which have so long held back the nations that were under its sway. And now, if we, with this ministry and this Bible, in this land of freedom, with these advantages, and working as we may and ought—if we cannot stay the progress of Romanism, let Romanism triumph. If it can live through all this, it will thereby prove that it has a right to live. But Romanism cannot live, if we do our duty. It was well said here yesterday, that nothing which is of God can be destroyed by that which is good.

Shall we fear the final triumph of Infidelity? Infidelity is under a disadvantage—it has no future, and therefore never satisfies the demand of the soul. Man must have a future, which Infidelity cannot give. And besides, Infidelity has its history, of guillotines, and blood, and crime, and misery. And the world is able to compare its history with the history of Christianity, and to judge them by their fruits. We can point to the history of the Gospel, in the prevalence of order, and peace, and domestic happiness, and social purity, and smiling plenty, and all the sweet charities of private life, and all that is heroic and self-sacrificing in public virtue. If with these advantages in our favor, we let Infidelity triumph in this country, the blame must be on our own heads.

You remember, sir, the old Bohemian belief, that wheresoever Ziska's drum went, there went victory! for by that terrible music were awaked the shades of the national heroes to fight again for their liberties and religion; and before that unseen chivalry, went down like chaff the boldest warrior. Oh let us remember that wheresoever there goes the Truth and the spirit of the Puritan, a mightier than this supernatural preserver goes with it as its ally—even the Spirit and power of God Almighty—and unto Him be all the praise.

Address of Rev. Joseph C. Stiles, of New-York.

Mr. President—In view of the resolution just passed by the Society, and especially of the noble, brilliant address of my brother who advocated it, you will be prepared for the sentiment to which I beg leave to call your attention.

Resolved, That the sublimity of the missionary work, especially at the present time, in our own land, should inspire the people of God with greater faith and self-devotion for its advancement.

MISSIONS—in AMERICA! Well may such a topic engage the attention of a christian assembly. If sublimier work is done in heaven, or out of it, than the work of missions, I know it not.—Survey—

THE MISSION FIELD. What is it? MIND! immortal mind! and a world of it!

Mr. President, who can speak the capacities, the responsibilities, the destinies of mind? Mind, sir! With love or hate, it can fling a thought quite up to God, and across his works, and through eternity. It can exalt the Most High. It can endorse the government of the universe; it can embrace the brotherhood of creation; it can augment all that is valuable—knowledge, virtue, happiness. It can hold creation, and be hungry. It can take in the fulness of him that filleth all things. Yes, sir, and its power to do all this, and much more, shall grow forever.

The dependance of mind deepens the interest awakened by its power. For the just exercise of all these capacities, mind is constitutionally responsible to God. But no man reaches the august import of mind, until he learns its story. Man's mind has rebelled against God, and been redeemed by Jesus Christ. And what is the issue? Leave it, and it shall hold God, cursing through eternity—"a cessel of wrath." Save it, and it shall hold God, blessing while immortality endures—"a vessel of mercy." Mind! what a treasure; what a charge! The Mission Field what is it? Mind! Lost Mind; and a world full of ever following generations of it! what a field! Mr. President,—what a field!

The MISSION INSTRUMENT! what is this? The Gospel—The “glorious Gospel of the blessed God!” And what is the Gospel? Man is selfish, and every man knows that the Gospel is glad tidings to lost mind. But man is carnal; and it is not every man who knows that the grandeur of the Gospel is not surpassed by its mercy. If a man would know the Gospel, let him fix his eye upon the prodigious range of its influence. The Gospel works commensurately with all the great interests of the great community of the universe. Let him fix his eye upon the mighty benignity of its action. The Gospel promotes the highest weal of the Creator and of Creation. This exalted eulogium of the Gospel I hold to be sustained by this truth—the Gospel furnishes the mightiest sanction to the government of God, on the one hand; and sheds the happiest influence upon the subjects of his sceptre, on the other.

On its face, the Gospel presents Jesus Christ, a legal substitute for the sinner. Man rebelled against God. To sustain God’s law, and befriend the transgressor, Jesus Christ assumed man’s place under the law; performed man’s duties enjoined in the law; and suffered man’s death demanded by the law. The influence of this stupendous fact is two-fold.

It provides a powerful sanction to God’s law by the demonstration of its rectitude. Jesus Christ’s voluntary assumption of a nature subject to God’s law; spending the strength of that nature in obedience of the law; and surrendering its life in honor of the law, is an irrefragable, most glorious, and final testimony to the rectitude of the law. Thus the Gospel puts up its first great pillar right under the throne of God.

In like manner this substitution flings a mighty influence all around the universe. To every rational creature it cries out “Jehovah is right, all should serve him! Jehovah is good, all should love him!”

In its bearing, the Gospel operates a new development of the divine character. Through the cross of Jesus Christ, every attribute of God, natural, as well as moral, is let out far beyond the mark of all prior revelation.

This, too, brings a mighty ratification to the government of God, by its clearer revelation of the character of the Governor. The new development of his moral perfections speaks anew to the heart and conscience of the subject and builds up allegiance. The new development of his natural perfections speaks anew to the hope and fear of the subject and disarms resistance. Thus the Gospel erects its second great pillar under the throne of God.

This fact, like the former, wields an immense moral influence also upon all God’s subjects. For it lies in the very nature of things, that the unfolding of God’s perfections must stimulate to the utmost every faculty of the rational constitution, employed in repentance for sin, on the one hand, or in the higher love and service of God on the other.

In its result, the Gospel affixes higher rewards and punishments to God’s law. If the Gospel holds out God’s Son, a saving substitute for God’s offending creature, then here is a display of love never witnessed by creation before. If the Gospel works a new edition of God’s attributes, then here is a development of light which never reached the mind of creature before. Consequently, Jesus Christ accepted, must conduct to a higher blessing; Jesus Christ rejected, must expose to a deeper curse, than pertains to any dispensation of inferior privilege. It is hardly necessary to say, that this augmentation of the sanctions of God’s law, like the two preceding facts, must favorably affect both the government and the governed of the universe.

Mr. President, what shall we think of the Gospel of Jesus Christ? I rejoice in this opportunity of expressing my solemn conviction, that next to God and his law, there is not an element in existence comparable in majesty or mercy, with the Gospel of the Son of God. The Gospel goes over Creator and creation, and protects and blesses all. The Gospel sustains God’s venerable law against all rebellion, past and future. The Gospel snatches a glorious multitude of perishing immortalities from the very grasp of sin itself. The Gospel pours forth a flood of new light which shall act through eternity—for God, in the celebration of his praise—for creation, in the suppression of evil, and the promotion of good.

What an instrument is the Gospel! How vast! How glorious! Some men work with the plough, some with the sword; but he who works with the Gospel, O, how much broader, and higher, and holier, and happier his agency than that of the combined instrumentalities of the universe beside!

THE MISSIONARY, who is he? A man called of God, and charged by heaven and earth, to take this great instrument, and go out into this great field and under the pledge of divine co-operation, work for the universe.

In what estimation, sir, shall we hold the cause of Missions? Of old, when God laid down the corner stone of this world, it is reported, that "the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy." Were God employed at this moment, in putting down the foundations of another universe, in the unoccupied tracts of space beyond his throne, I do not believe that one solitary eye of heaven would be diverted by the operation. Why should it be? Here on the earth, in this cause of missions, we have the working of these very attributes, in a far, far sublimer style. God himself being Judge, when he builds his new heaven and new earth, all the natural creation shall be remembered no more for ever.

O! the cause of missions! 'Tis the noblest cause under heaven! Mr. President, dig my grave, and put me into it, ere I live to see the day when I hold a heart that beats, and yet beats not in sympathy with this most holy enterprise. Not a straw for the magnanimity of that man who sees nothing great, nothing good, nothing bright, in the cause of missions! That man bids adieu to all principle, abandons God and man, turns his back on the welfare of the universe, and shrinks himself into a poor, little worm, that loves to burrow into the bosom of the earth. The Lord have mercy upon him, and lift him from his deep interment, to the light and the air he was made to breathe, to work, and to rejoice in!

While the dignity of our great theme does not suffer by the limitation, how does thought after thought spring up to send an augmenting thrill through the soul, as we contemplate its application to our own country.

The missions we review to-day, are HOME MISSIONS. No wonder home is so sweet; charity, the sweetest of all things, begins there. He who commanded—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," has thus predicated our love to others upon the pre-existing, justified standard, love of self. Mr. President, they are ours for whom you labor—our countrymen, our neighbors, our kindred! O, let us love to send these sweet charities of the Gospel through all these destitute abodes!

How extended, too, are our domestic missions in this day! Time was, when the population of the United States were shut up within half the space which spreads between the Atlantic and Allegany. Doubtless the bold, adventurous hunter, who passed his way through undisturbed forests to the summit of the range, and looked far eastward to the abodes of civilization, oftentimes imagined, "Hitherto ye may come, but certainly no farther." (How has the history of our country outlived the fancies of the long buried man! The great wave of the American population! It has swelled up to the summit of the Alleghanies, and swept over the great valley to the Mississippi, and onward pushed its way to the Rocky Mountains, and unarrested still, it now flows down the long land slope to the ocean, and begins to press the shores of the Pacific. Mr. President, how many Englands shall one day be embosomed within the limits of our national territory? Think, sir, seeds of nations are planted all over our extensive missionary field. O! let us spring to the thought; the harvest of intelligence, morality and salvation, which shall be gathered from this great heart of the earth, in all future generations, may—must depend, and not a little, on the missionary labor, with which these seeds of sprouting nations are cultivated in our day. Let us ponder this solemn truth. The destinies of unborn nations, yea! of families of nations, are in our hands. Let us look well to our Home Missions, that we may do all in our power to shape these mighty, forthcoming elements for the glory of God and the salvation of man.

But, Mr. President, pre-eminently, the animating thought of this day I have yet to state. The American Home Missionary Society, in its operations, has at length travelled out to the line, where Home and Foreign Missions work side by side on the same field.

That population which is crowding out in such an unexampled manner to the shores of the Pacific, will be sure to carry with them christian principles and christian institutions. Some of them are ministers, more of them Christians. Already they have begun to plant churches, to build temples, to settle ministers, to preach the Gospel, and to sanctify the Sabbath. Our christian brethren, the Methodists, the Baptists, the Episcopalians, the Presbyterians, are all there. The American Home Missionary Society is there; the American Bible Society; the American Tract Society; the American Sunday School Union, and every other great and good institution, will soon be there. Thus you perceive, if the bone and sinew of our people, are concentrating on the Pacific coast; there too, christian principle and influence are fixing deep their foundations. Is there a mind in this assembly so ignorant of American enterprise, or of christian principle, as to imagine that there is a power on earth, which can shut up American piety—like American law—on American soil? You have seen some great blue wave of ocean, in its even majesty rolling in obliquely upon the main. No sooner, does it strike the land, than it breaks, and foams all along the shore, just as far as the eye can reach. So with this great wave of christian influence, which is rolling westward. It has struck the Pacific, and now spreads along to the south, and, California's gold to the contrary notwithstanding, its progress shall never be arrested until it fringes the whole western coast of South America with the light of christian institutions. Nor is this all. If the wave of ocean, stops at its natural boundary, the land; the wave of moral influence does not stop at the natural boundary of population, the sea. Oh no, sir! Under every yard of canvass, with every stroke of the steamer, this benign influence shall sail away to the isles of the Pacific, and to the darker Pagan nations of the North. Nor shall it rest like the ship that floats it, upon the boundary line of these benighted kingdoms, but it shall insinuate itself into their very heart, by the life and language of the man of God; by the enterprise of men of all trades and occupations who shall push their way to the remotest corners of these tribes in search of business; by those Christian missiles—tracts, books, and bibles—which shall make a part of every American cargo; by native curiosity and conscience from the interior, which shall carry back from the sea-board these insignia of our new and stirring religion.

Mr. President, that christian truth, which is traveling westward with our emigrant people shall cross the Pacific, land upon the eastern shores of Asia, and by multiplied channels move on westward through these dark nations, until, passing mountain and valley, river and sea, the day—the glorious day—shall come when it shall encounter that established line of missionary light which has so long been bearing down eastward upon these countries from the heart of Christendom. What a cordial relief, unfelt by the militant church in any prior year of its history, starts up at this prospect! Mr. President, the moment that dates a man's entrance into the kingdom of Jesus, dates also his largest, brightest hope for man. I need not say that this is the conversion of the world. Hitherto there ever has been labor with this hope, trouble with this joy. The progress of the great work has been so slow and feeble, the hindrances looked so vast and impregnable, that while faith moves up promptly to the conversion of the world, sight cannot get around it comfortably. Stand at our missionary stations and look through the hundreds of millions of benighted Heathens who swarm through Siberia, China, Japan, Kamtskatka and Russian America. We shudder and seem to see no light beyond, and are tempted to cry out with the ancient unbeliever: "How can this great thing be?" "How shall all these dark countries be evangelized to God?" Now, this year's operation of the American Home Missionary Society stands connected with the turning over of a new leaf touching God's plan of converting the world. Do you see that great arm of Divine Truth, slowly but steadily moving down eastward upon the Pagan world? Do you not know that through every future year, that arm shall strengthen and brighten and move on eastward still, with an augmenting momentum? On the other side of the world, have you not marked that the great wall of darkness, whose base extended from the Rocky Mountains to the shore of Western Asia, has been thrown down this very year; and that, from the heart of Christian America, another great arm of divine truth begins to move westward over this immense space upon the central kingdoms of the Heathen? Who does not know that this body of Christian light is also destined to be enlarged and improved through all time to come? Now, what is the language of all this, Mr. President? Why, sir! It looks as though the God of Heaven had taken up the heart of the heathen world and placed it precisely between the two jaws of the great vice of truth, and was now beginning to SCREW IT UP, Sir—to SCREW IT UP, Sir. He seems to have been bearing down upon the bulwarks of the god of this world from the East, until every eye of the enemy is now directed to the West. And just now, it is, he comes upon his unguarded seat, with a formidable force, and thus, PUTS THE ENEMY BETWEEN TWO FIRES!—O, Mr. President! One additional ray of intelligence touching God's plan of operation to save the world. What a cheering relief, what a hearty thrill it sends through the most unbelieving soul of the Christian! God be praised! Such a joy denied to all past generations, is ours. Let us heartily welcome the providential revelation, and work with renewed vigor for its fulfilment. Let us earnestly supplicate God's blessing upon all agencies, foreign or domestic. Let us long for the day, when all our benighted perishing fellow men, scattered upon the face of the earth, shall be brought to Jesus. And that we may not come short of our full duty—while we give our prayers and contributions directly to the cause of Foreign Missions, let us bear in mind, that we co-operate in this cause—if indirectly, yet powerfully—by struggling to fill our beloved country with an ABLE CHRISTIAN MINISTRY.

Miscellaneous.

[From the President's Message, 1848.]

Areas of Territory.

Oregon,	341,463 square miles.
California,	448,691
New Mexico,	77,387
Texas,	325,520

Total, 1,193,061

The area of the remaining 29 states, and the territory not yet organized into states, east of the Rocky Mountains, contains 2,059,513 square miles, or 3,318,126,058 acres. This makes the whole territory of the United States, equal to 3,252,574 square miles—in round numbers, three and a quarter millions.

"These estimates show that the territories recently acquired, and over which our exclusive jurisdiction and dominion have been extended, constitute a country more than half as large as all that which was held by the United States before their acquisition. If Oregon be excluded from the estimate, there will still remain within the limits of Texas, New Mexico and California, 851,598 square miles, or 545,012,720 acres; being an addition equal to more than one-third of all the territory owned by the United States before their acquisition; and including Oregon, nearly as great an extent of territory as the whole of Europe, Russia only excepted. The Mississippi, so lately the frontier of our country, is only its centre. With the addition of the late acquisition, the United States are now estimated to be nearly as large as the whole of Europe."

Length of our Sea Coast.

It is estimated by the superintendent of the coast survey, that the extent of the sea-coast of Texas on the Gulf of Mexico, is upwards of 400 miles; of the Coast of Upper California, on the Pacific, of 970 miles; the whole sea coast on the Pacific, including Oregon and the Straits of Fuca, 1,620 miles; and the whole extent, both on the Pacific and the Gulf of Mexico, 2,020 miles. The length of the coast on the Atlantic from the northern limits of the United States, around the Capes of Florida to the Sabine, on the eastern boundary of Texas, is estimated to be 3,100 miles; so that the addition of sea coast, including Oregon, is very nearly two-thirds as great as all we possessed before and excluding Oregon, is an addition of 1,370 miles; being nearly equal to one-half of the extent of coast which we possessed before these acquisitions. We have now three great maritime fronts: on the Atlantic, the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific—making in the whole an extent of sea coast exceeding 5,000 miles. This is the extent of the sea coast of the United States, not including bays, sounds and small irregularities of the main shore and of the sea islands. If these be included, the length of the shore line of coast, as estimated by the Superintendent of the Coast Survey, in his report, would be 33,063 miles."

The West.

"THE GROWTH OF THE WEST" has now become a familiar topic. Indeed, it is beginning to be apprehended by some of our eastern people that "the West" represents a complex idea, that it is not a single locality, nor merely one whole state; but that it comprises eleven states, besides all the territories; and, without including an acre of Minnesota, of the Missouri, Nebraska and Indian territories, of Oregon or California, it covers more ground than England, Scotland, Ireland, Denmark, Belgium, France, Holland and Portugal united. "The West," including Texas, reaches from 3° 30' to 26° W. Long., and from 25° to 49° N. Lat. Embraced within these limits are six or eight millions of people, urging on the various forms of activity, ploughing, reaping, building, mining, forging, steaming, emigrating—vexing the earth and the water with incessant motion—under the most powerful stimulus, and with astonishing success. Every paper that comes to us tells of the mighty energies of the West. One speaks of a line of canal boats fifty-three miles in length; another tells us of a ship which has just left Chicago, and that it is to find no rest for its keel until its flag shall wave in the port of a foreign land. "A few years since," said a gentleman at a public meeting, "I was paddled in a birchen canoe all along the shores of Wisconsin, from Chicago to Green Bay, a distance of several hundred miles, seeing scarcely a white man." Now, overlooking those waters stand the goodly towns of Sheboygan, Milwaukee, Southport and Racine—the market outlets for 150,000 people, lying at convenient distances behind them. On those upper lakes, the first steamboat was launched in 1818; now more than 100 of the largest class are fully occupied with a commerce estimated at 150 millions of dollars per annum. On those western lakes and rivers, where "the wing and the wheel of commerce" have already appeared, the number of steamboats—as reported to the "River and Harbor Convention," at Chicago, in 1847—was no less than 1200, employing 17,000 persons in their navigation—besides 4000 keel or flat boats and their crews. And it was stated on the same occasion that "the total value of the commerce afloat on our inland waters, was $439,000,000; being double the amount of the whole foreign commerce of the nation." That a prodigious trade is carried on, must be evident from the fact that St. Louis alone in 1846 was visited by 251 different steamers.

Immigration.

The events of the year which has just closed have wonderfully increased the duties and responsibilities of the American churches. The unsettled governments of the old world are undergoing more or less reconstruction, in which to some extent, our own institutions are imitated. The flying thousands who escape from French and German revolutions and from Irish penury and starvation, look to our land alone for refuge, never thinking of any other as promising them political liberty, intellectual elevation, or rewarded labor and sufficient food. Every one that comes furnishes a motive and a facility for two to follow. Though facts like these have long existed, they have thickened upon us of late to a degree that transcends all former experience. For example, look at the following table of foreign immigration into the port of New York for eleven years back.

In 1838,	persons,	25,581	In 1844,	persons,	61,002
1839,	"	48,152	1845,	"	82,960
1840,	"	62,797	1846,	"	115,230
1841,	"	57,337	1847,	"	166,110
1842,	"	74,949	1848,	"	191,909
1843,	"	46,302			[Year of Com.

Thus it appears that the immigration of the last year, (1848,) is 25,799 greater than that of 1847, and more than double that of any year preceding 1846. It is ascertained that the immigration of 1847 into the country at large, was at least 250,000; and in 1848, it must have approached 300,000. In 1849, it will probably exceed 1,000 a day throughout the year.

TWENTY FOURTH ANNIVERSARY.

THE AMERICAN HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY held its Twenty Fourth Anniversary in the Broadway Tabernacle, New York, on Wednesday evening, May 8th, 1850.

HENRY DWIGHT, Esq., President of the Society, took the chair, and the meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. WILLIAM WISNER, D. D., of Ithaca, N. Y.

In the absence of the Treasurer, an abstract of his Report was read by Rev. CHARLES HALL, D. D.

An abstract of the Annual Report of the Executive Committee was presented by Rev. MILTON BADGER, D. D.

On motion of JOHN W. CHICKERING, of Portland, Maine, seconded by Rev. DAVID B. COE, of New York,

Resolved, That the Reports now read, be adopted and published under the direction of the Executive Committee.

On motion of Rev. ANDREW L. STONE, of Boston, seconded by Rev. ANSEL D. EDDY, D. D., of Newark, N. J.,

Resolved, That the Gospel of Christ, brought in contact with the mind and heart of our entire population, is the only influence to which we can safely entrust the destiny of this country.

On motion of Rev. SAMUEL WASHBURN, of New York, seconded by Rev. JOAB BRACE, of Newington, Ct.,

Resolved, That in view of the enlargement of our national domain and the increasing emigration from abroad, the work of evangelizing our country becomes, in effect, a mission to all mankind.

Impressive remarks in support of these resolutions were made by the gentlemen by whom they were respectively introduced. These addresses dwelt upon the providential developments which in the last few years, have rendered the mission of the American churches so obvious and urgent ; together with the instrumentality which is particularly employed by this Society, and on which, under God, our hopes for the success of our great enterprise depends.

The Benediction was pronounced by Rev. BENJAMIN TAPPAN, D. D., of Portland, Me.

TWENTY FOURTH REPORT.

SELDOM have we been permitted to celebrate an Anniversary of this Society, without being reminded, by the decorations and fellow-laborers, how short and uncertain is our service in the vineyard of our Master.

The lives of the Missionaries of this Institution and the attendance has preserved, the past year, in a measure even than in years of less exposure and mortality. Though many of them, in the midst of the pestilence while it remained with the sick and ministering to them with hands, and, in some instances, burying the dead who had forsaken them, but one, out of more than a thousand victim to its rage.

The Officers of the Society, who commenced the year, all come with us to its close; while each of the previous years recorded the departure of one or more to glory on high.

Would that we could stop here. But, no! death has entered the circle of the Executive Committee, and one whom we highly prized, whose spirit of devotion had often cheered ours, whose life was a luminous pathway to a peaceful and a glorious immortality—the Rev. WILLIAM B. BROWN with us here no more. He was an intelligent, devoted, and ever-remembering friend of this Institution. He loved its principles, rejoiced in its fruits; he worked while his day lasted to advance the Gospel, through its instrumentality, over the land and the globe. Kindred institutions too—the kingdom of God on earth in which it cometh, was near his heart. He was a man of profession; he has many souls as the seals of his life. May we be as conscientious, as kind, as steadfast, as laborious in the cause of Christ, as full of faith and as true as was he; then may our death be that of the just and our last end like his.

The various operations of the Society are noticed in the body of the Report, under their appropriate heads, and in connection with their respective localities ; such details as can be presented in a compact form are embraced in the following

SUMMARY OF RESULTS.

THE number of ministers of the Gospel in the service of the Society, whose names are found in the preceding table—together with those engaged in superintending the missionary work, and who are mentioned in connection with the respective Auxiliary Boards and Agencies—has been, the last year, 1,032.

Of these, 827 were in commission at the date of the last Report, and 205 have been since appointed.

They have been distributed in 27 different States and Territories, as follows: in Maine, 92; New Hampshire, 40; Vermont, 58; Massachusetts, 60; Rhode Island, 6; Connecticut, 45; New York, 173; New Jersey, 6; Pennsylvania, 47; Delaware, 2; Maryland, 1; District of Columbia, 2; Virginia, 9; Georgia, 2; Texas, 1; Tennessee, 6; Kentucky, 7; Ohio, 97; Indiana, 50; Illinois, 114; Michigan, 74; Missouri, 33; Wisconsin, 63; Iowa, 37; Minnesota, 2; Oregon, 2; California, 3.

This distribution gives to the New England States, 301; the Middle States, 228; the Southern States, 15; and the Western States and Territories, 488.

Of the whole number in commission, 677 have been the pastors or stated supplies of single congregations; 229 have ministered to two or three congregations each; and 126 have extended their labors over still wider fields—the destitutions of a county, or of several contiguous counties, or those within the limits of an ecclesiastical body.

The aggregate of ministerial labor performed is equal to 812 years. The number of congregations and missionary districts supplied in whole or in part, at stated intervals, is 1,575; while many others have enjoyed the occasional preaching of the word.

Five missionaries have been in commission as pastors or stated supplies of churches of colored people; ten have preached to Welsh, and 28 to German congregations; one to a congregation of Norwegians; and one to a congregation of Swedes.

Sabbath schools have been maintained in the congregations of the missionaries as in former years. In many cases, they have been organized among the destitute in a circuit around a missionary church—have been visited regularly by teachers from the church and by the missionary, who has made the loc-lity of each an occasional preaching station. Not less than 75,000 children and youth have been connected with the Sabbath schools, under the care of the missionaries of this Society, the last year.

The number of subscribers to temperance pledges, in the communities where the missionaries labor, is not far from 93,000. But a pledge, in many places is not the test of temperance, as it once was; nor are all temperance organizations promoters of temperance, or good order, or sound morality; some of them are not the least hindrances the missionary finds to moral reformation. Intemperance is too strongly entrenched in the deceitful and desperately wicked heart of man to be driven out, otherwise than as every evil spirit is exorcised, by the power of truth and the Spirit of God. This is becoming better understood, year by year, by the missionaries and their churches; and a temperance reform based on moral principle, they are consequently seeking to promote, and with great encouragement to faith and perseverance.

In Wisconsin—a state blessed from its infancy in a degree not less than any other by the benevolent labors of this Institution—a law has been enacted by the legislature, making the seller of ardent spirits responsible for the injury which he does to individuals, families and the community—for the accidents, crime, desertion and distress that can be traced to his sales as the procuring cause. This law is in the second year of its operation. It was predicted that it would be repealed at the end of the first. But instead of that, the last legislature added an amendment, making it the duty of town supervisors to prosecute all cases of its violation. It has broken up gambling saloons, ball allies and groceries in great numbers, banished the sale of ardent spirits from many townships, and has a fair prospect of being sustained by the moral sense of the people.

The contributions to benevolent objects, reported from 612 congregations, amount to $21,756; which is more than one-third of the amount expended, during the year, to aid these congregations in sustaining the ministry.

The additions to the churches, during the year, have been not far from 6,682; viz., 3,815 on profession of their faith; and 2,867 by letters of recommendation from other churches. This is a larger number of additions than has been reported in any one year since 1844; and a number exceeded in but three years since the organization of the Society. This increase is to be ascribed to the influences of the Spirit of God, whose descent upon so many of the churches near the close of the preceding year, we were permitted to record in our last report; and to the still more remarkable manifestations of divine power, in the revivals with which many of the churches in the newer states have recently been visited and are now enjoying. Seventy one missionaries make mention, in their annual reports, of revivals of religion in their congregations; and less than one third of the whole number in commission during the year, report 3,109 cases of hopeful conversion. In recording these special tokens of divine favor, the Committee desire to unite with the friends of the Redeemer, whose benefactions have sustained the missionaries at their posts, whose sympathies have cheered their hearts and whose prayers have brought down upon them and their churches the richest blessings of Heaven, in giving thanks to God for the wonders of his grace, and in earnest supplication for the continued and still more abundant effusions of his Spirit.

In outward things also, we have the most gratifying evidence of the prosperity and advancement of many of the missionary churches. No less than forty of them become, henceforth, self-supporting churches. They are beneficiaries no longer; but our generous and hearty co-operators in giving the Gospel to those who are still in need. Sixty houses of worship have during the year been completed; the building of fifty eight others has been commenced, and forty four others have been enlarged, repaired, or rendered in other ways more convenient and inviting; and this has been done, in most cases, by the efforts and sacrifices of the congregations themselves, without aid from abroad. Other congregations have provided parsonages, liquidated debts, established libraries or high schools. In other instances, there has been a great increase in attendance on the means of grace, or a manifest improvement in public morals, or special efforts in the religious training of the young or in supplying the destitute in a township or a county with the word of life. Good, in the unnumbered forms in which it is wrought out by a preached Gospel and the lives of the pious, has been accomplished in every part of the missionary field, which numbers cannot compute nor language adequately describe, but which will be recognised by the benefactors of this Institution, in the day in which it shall be fully revealed, as a glorious recompense for all their labors.

OUR MISSIONARY BRETHREN.

It would be difficult to select a thousand men from the christian church or the christian ministry, any where, among whom there would not some be found unworthy of the confidence and trust reposed in them. So, in the missionary work, we must expect, here and there, disappointments, failures. But our Home Missionaries as a class, the Committee believe—and the evidences of their character and spirit are daily passing under our servation and with many of them we have had a long and intimate acquaintance—are pre-eminently deserving the confidence and affection of the christian community. They are of necessity, many of them, placed in circumstances of great privation and hardship. Their labors would tax severely any constitution; their comforts are few; their support is scanty; their trials are often such as those living in our older settlements are, and must be, utter strangers to. Yet, these privations and trials they bear with exemplary cheerfulness, counting them unworthy to be compared with the privilege given them of preaching Christ, where otherwise he would not be named. It is not sympathy with them in their outward condition that they ask; though this, we know full well, the generous patrons of this Institution cannot withhold. But their request is, "Give us, above all things, your prayers, that we may be humble, devoted men—workmen that need not to be ashamed."

THE TREASURY.

Resources. The balance in the Treasury, April 1st, 1849, was $3,849 00. The receipts of the succeeding twelve months have been $157,160 78; making the resources of the year, $161,009 78

Liabilities. There was due to missionaries, at the date of the last report, $10,044 60. There has since become due, $147,347 26; making the total of liabilities, $157,391 86.

Payments. Of this sum, $145,456 09. have been paid. The remainder—$11,935 77—is still due to missionaries for labor performed. Towards liquidating these claims, and redeeming other pledges already made in commissions which have not yet expired—making in all $65,046 64—there is a balance in the Treasury of $15,553 69—the greater part of it received in payment of legacies near the close of the year, and more than all of it requisite to cancel the past dues of missionaries and meet the additional amount now pledged over that of any preceding year.

CONTINUED PROGRESS.

By comparing the results now enumerated with those of the preceding year, the following particulars are obtained, illustrating the progress of the Society. The receipts of the year exceed those last reported by $11,234 87; 13 more missionaries have been in commission; 65 more congregations have been blessed with a preached Gospel; and 1,109 more have been added to the churches, on profession of their faith.

Nor do these particulars but partially illustrate the progress that has been made. A large number of congregations each year—the present year forty—pass from a condition of degendence to that of self-support ; the names of their pastors no longer appear on our list. To keep our number good, therefore, as many more must be introduced to occupy—not their places, but new fields ; in addition to others called in to supply vacancies occasioned by death, sickness, removals and other changes. To retain the number of our laborers undiminished, therefore, is not a small matter—it has required 192 new appointments the last year ; to retain it undiminished is to make progress, at the rate of bringing forty or fifty new fields under missionary culture every year. This has been done the past year, and our number of missionaries also enlarged ; and such has been the distribution, by the transfer continually going on from the older states to the newer, that while the increase of the whole number has been but 13, the increase in our Western States and Territories has been 25.

The last year, also the Society has entered another new Territory—Minnesota—and erected at its capital and at another of its chief settlements, the banner of the cross. This Territory has been opened and organized under circumstances peculiarly auspicious to morality “education and religion,” as well as “liberty and law ;” and its soil, its climate, its water communication, its resources of every name, are inviting its thousands and tens of thousands of immigrants ; and they will soon be there. And missionaries in greater numbers should be there also, to point them to an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away. In Oregon and California, too, our work is but just begun ; while in New Mexico and Texas, we have now no man to preach repentance and remission of sins. In all the older sections of the West, likewise, the demands for missionary labor are still importunate, and the openings are most inviting and constantly increasing. Every where we are stretching out our arms to receive the world, and the world is rushing in to our embrace. We scarcely need say, that our work never appeared so vast, so far-reaching, so identified with the destiny of mankind, as now. This, the intelligent patrons of this Institution seem to understand. There is a growing interest in this work of home evangelization, this mission on our shores to all the earth—an interest based on true philanthropy, christian principle, promises of God, exceeding great and precious—which cheers our hearts and awakens hope full of immortality for unnumbered millions of our countrymen and our race. To this interest we confidently look, under God, for all the encouragement we need in our labors—for those enlarged resources the coming year, which shall enable us to go up and possess the land, and come back at its close, with such tidings as it has never yet been our blessedness to bear—tidings which shall gladden every pious heart on earth, and awaken joy unspeakable in the presence of the angels of God.

COMPARATIVE RESULTS.

The following Table gives a comparative view of the amount of receipts, expenditures, number of missionaries, new appointments, congregations and missionary districts, years of labor performed, additions to the churches and pupils in Sabbath schools, for each year since the organization of the Society. It also exhibits, in the tenth column, the average expenditure, each year, for a year of missionary labor, obtained by dividing the sum total of the expenditures of the year by the number of years of labor performed. And in the eleventh column, by dividing the sum total of the expenditures of each year by the number of missionaries employed, is shown what the average to a missionary would be if the expenditures were equally apportioned among them.

Remarks.—1. From the foregoing Table, it will be seen that the receipts have been more than doubled the last ten years; and more than quadrupled the last twenty.

2. The total of receipts for the twenty four years, is $2,054,417 91,—only equal to the amount which has been expended in time of war, in sustaining two regiments of soldiers a single year.

3. The total of years of labor is 12,243. These years are reckoned in each report, by adding together the months of labor which the missionaries have actually performed.

4. The average expenditure for a year of missionary labor, for the twenty four years, is $166. The average expenditure to a soldier, in a regiment of a thousand costing the government $1,000,000 a year for officers' and soldiers' pay, sustenance, arms, ammunition, &c., is $1,000. So much cheaper is it, as well as more merciful, to save life than to kill.

5. The average expenditure to a missionary, for the twenty four years, is $121. The difference between this amount and the average for a year's labor, is occasioned by the fact that a missionary is named and counted in a report, though in some cases he may have labored but a fraction of the year.

6. The whole number of additions to the churches is 101,103.

7. The fifth column—that of new appointments—shows how many have to be called in each year, to supply the places of those whose support is assumed by the people, the vacancies occasioned by death, sickness, removals and other changes, and to make the increase over the number of the preceding year.

* Of these, 24 labored in France and Switzerland, under the direction of the Evangelical Societies of Paris and Geneva.

REMARKS.—1. In explanation of the comparatively large num ber of missionaries in the Middle States and the increasing number in the New England States for several of the earlier years, it should be remarked that, at the organization of this Society in 1826, the missionaries of the United Domestic Missionary Society, whose responsibilities it assumed, were transferred to it, and that the greater portion of them were in commission in the State of New York. The New England State Societies, also, became integral parts of the National Society, in several successive years—the Maine Missionary Society and the Vermont Domestic Missionary Society in the third year of its operations; the New Hampshire Missionary Society, in the fourth year; the Connecticut Missionary Society, in the fifth year; and the Massachusetts Missionary Society, in the seventh year.

2. In the New England States, it will be observed, there has been but little increase of the number of missionaries, at any time, since the auxiliary relationship of the State Societies was completed. Since 1837, the number has diminished, and is, this year, 30 less than at that date. In the Middle States, also, the number the present year, is but one greater than in 1837.

3. The increase of the Society's labors, the last sixteen years, has been mainly in our Western States and Territories. The last ten years, the increase alone in that portion of our country, has given it 321 additional missionaries; which is more than nine tenths of the increase on the whole field during that period.

4. In 1845, the missions of this Society in Canada were, by an amicable arrangement with the British Colonial Missionary Society, transferred to the care of that Institution.

5. In the Table on the next page, will be seen the progress which has been made, year by year, in the newer states of the West, as they have severally come into being and presented fields of peculiar promise for missionary culture. When this Society was formed, Indiana and Illinois were in their infancy. Michigan was, at that time, and for ten years subsequent, a territory; in 1825, it had but one Presbyterian or Congregational minister, and he was a missionary. Wisconsin remained, eight years after the organization of this Society, the almost undisputed home of the Indian. Iowa was not organized as a territory till 1838.

6. It should be borne in mind, that the number of missionaries in these newer states and territories, as well as in those that have been longer cultivated, gives but an imperfect idea of the ground that has been occupied by missionary enterprise. Churches, every year, become independent, and others are taken up in their stead. Such churches adorn the land and bless its population, in our most flourishing villages, along all our great thoroughfares, and at the gate-ways into the distant interior.

PRINCIPAL AUXILIARIES, AGENCIES AND MISSIONARY FIELDS.

MAINE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The REV. BENJAMIN TAPPAN, D. D., of Augusta, was elected the Secretary of this Society, at its last anniversary, to supply the vacancy occasioned by the decease of the venerable Dr. Gillett. Probably no appointment could have been more acceptable to the friends of the institution or given brighter promise of its continued and increased prosperity. Dr. Tappan has entered upon the duties of the office during the year, having been reluctantly released, by a large and affectionate people, from the ties which had so long and so happily bound them together, that he might search out the sheep upon the mountains and in the valleys, and lay broad and deep, over the wide spread destitutions of this new country, the foundations of many generations. That his days in this service may be many, and that through his instrumentality much people may be added unto the Lord, will be the prayer of many hearts.

The Society has had in its service, during the year, ninety-two ministers of the Gospel—two-thirds of whom have been the stated supplies of single congregations. There has been an increased attendance on public worship; the churches have been at peace among themselves, and several of them have been visited with the special influences of the Divine Spirit.

The receipts of the Society, for the year ending March 1, 1850, were $11,245 66, and its expenditures, $11,082 22,—leaving a balance in its treasury of $163 44; $584 94, were also received from this State into the treasury of the Parent Society.

Maine is doing nobly the work of evangelization within her own limits, and her sympathies and prayers as well as her benefactions, reach over the earth and over the globe. "The destiny of the American people," say the Trustees in their last report, "as we seem to catch a glimpse of it in the developments of Providence, overwhelms us by its magnificence, if we do but fulfil with any good measure of fidelity, the work for Him, for ourselves, for mankind, which God has given us to do. What a large and blessed Home is this country of ours; and how deep the interest we should take in all that may be conducive to its welfare. And what so conducive, as that it be pervaded by the light and the love which beam from the cross of Christ—that being thus pervaded, it may send forth light and love to bless the men of other nations—of other continents."

NEW HAMPSHIRE MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Forty missionaries, in the employment of this Society since our last report, have rendered an aggregate of ministerial service equal to about thirty years. Five of the churches have enjoyed revivals of religion, and the spiritual condition of the whole field has become more encouraging.

The receipts of the year have been $5,778 29. Of this sum, $3,531 21 have been expended within the State; $602 79, by designation of the donors, have been paid to the American Home Missionary Society, and $1,000 by vote of the Trustees. $792 67 have also been paid directly into the treasury of the Parent Society from individuals and congregations in the State, —making the whole amount realized to the Home Missionary cause within the year, $6,571 08,—$2,395 46 of which have been expended in the destitute settlements of the West.

The Secretary of the Society, Rev. BENJAMIN P. STONE, says in his report, "There are only fifteen feeble churches in the State, containing on an average thirty-three members each, not at present included in our list, that are without the stated ministry of the Gospel. Six of these are so small and so beset with obstacles to their growth and prosperity, that they will probably always remain destitute. The remaining nine are looking to the providence of God for the re-establishment of the Gospel among them. Of the churches able to support the ministry themselves, there are only four at present destitute of pastors or stated supplies. Never were our churches so generally supplied with a sound and pious ministry as they are now."

"But when we look over the whole State, and contemplate the fact that out of its two hundred and twenty-six chartered towns, there are thirty-six destitute of churches and the means of grace according to our platform of faith and practice, and that the population of these towns, for the most part, are under no established evangelical influence, the painful inquiry forces itself upon us, when will these numerous destitutions be repaired? When will this checkered landscape of so many strange and unnatural contrasts become one of universal beauty and loveliness? O, when will the work of Home Missions be accomplished in the 'Old Granite State,' and its sanctified sons and daughters—the only patriots worthy of the name—be gloriously compelled to seek far away towards the setting sun, even along the shores of the Pacific, the objects of their heaven-born benevolence."

VERMONT DOMESTIC MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The receipts of this Society the past year, have been $5,109 19; and its expenditures within the State, $5,271 40; $842 07 hav been received from the State into the treasury of the Parent Institution; $297 93 of it from the treasury of the Auxiliary, and $544 14 from congregations and individuals.

Fifty eight missionaries have been in the employment of the Society, and have performed an aggregate of forty four years of ministerial service, in sixty one churches and four communities where no churches have been organized. Five missionaries have been installed as pastors during the year, and fifteen new fields have been added to the missionary list, one of which embraces the entire destitutions of Essex county.

"The general aspect of this field," says the Secretary of the Society, Rev. JOHN F. STONE, "is the same as it was a year ago. Some progress has been made. The decline of the influence of those errors, which have long been prevalent among us, it is believed, is becoming still more marked and extensive. The providence of God seems to call loudly for a greater enlargement of the operations of the Society. Of the two hundred and forty six towns in the State, not less than sixty five are without Congregational churches, and not less than ninety five without Congregational ministers. And in many of these, there is no preaching of the Gospel by any denomination. Many of these towns are new and have but a small population; but not so small as to furnish any good reason why nothing should be done to secure the influence of the Gospel over them and to save their souls. Our churches seem to feel a growing interest in this cause. But as yet, our resources are far from being equal to our necessities. Could we command the means and obtain the men, very many additional fields might be at once occupied with good prospects of success."

MASSACHUSETTS HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

This Society, at its last anniversary, had completed the first half century of its existence; and the report of the Executive Committee, drawn up by the Secretary—Rev. JOSEPH S. CLARK—is one of great interest and value, as exhibiting the history, principles and results of Home Missionary action. It may well be studied by every friend of the cause, and made a manual by every executive board.

From this report it appears, that the total of receipts from Massachusetts for Home Missionary purposes, the last fifty years, is $591,699. Of this sum, $167,553 have been expended in the State; and $345,506 in other parts of the land,—$306,254 of it through the American Home Missionary Society, since 1838. More than half the receipts of the fifty years have been contributed the last ten. The Society has had in its employment directly, 486 missionaries, and under its cultivation in Massachusetts 183 missionary fields. "These fields in most instances when first entered, were moral wastes, overgrown with the thorns and thistles of religious error, or else new ground never before broken up. With the exception of twelve of these waste places, where a small amount of labor was bestowed merely as an experiment without any attempt to organize a church, or where the feeble organization was afterwards absorbed in some other of the same faith and order, more favorably situated,—living churches of Christ are there, comprising nearly two fifths of all the orthodox Congregational churches in Massachusetts; pastors are there feeding their flocks; sanctuaries are there, more than 100 of which arose during the period of missionary patronage, and in consequence of it; Sabbath school and Bible classes are there, training the young in the way of life; the moral and religious influence of 15,000 church members is there, accumulating new strength by fresh accessions every year; while fountains of Christian benevolence are flowing out in all directions to the ends of the earth." Of the 171 existing churches that have leaned on the arm of the Society, 116 have risen to the condition of self support, and more than half of them have come to that state within the last ten years. The rest, with a few exceptions, are every year rising towards the same condition. The average amount of assistance rendered to those which actually become independent, is $702; and the average time required to bring them into this state is six and a half years.

Sixty missionaries have been in the service of this Society during the year. At the time of their last report, nine new missionary fields had, within a year, been taken up; ten had disappeared from the list; and five others were reported for the last time, having assumed the entire support of their ministers; six pastors had been settled; five meeting houses built, and several others commenced.

The receipts of the Society, for the year ending March 1st, have been $33,322 49; which exceeds the amount of the preceding year, by $7,937 69. There have been expended, within the State, $8,306 11; and remitted to the treasury of the American Home Missionary Society $24,000. There have also been received into the treasury of the Parent Society from the Hampshire Missionary Society, $2,400; from individuals, congregations and auxiliaries, $2,970 50; in payment of legacies, $4,338 60—in all, $9,709 10, making the total realized from the State to the cause of Home Missions, during the year, $43,031 59; which is $6,919 73 greater than the amount of the previous year. Of the whole amount contributed from Massachusetts, $33,709 10 have been expended through the National Institution in extending the empire of Christianity over other portions of the land.

RHODE ISLAND HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Six missionaries have been in commission within the bounds of this Society during the year; for their support $437 50 have been contributed in the State, and $1,000 appropriated by the Connecticut Missionary Society; $444 38 have also been received from congregations and individuals into the treasury of the American Home Missionary Society.

"The field of our missionary labor," say the Directors in their last report, "is indeed limited—our stations are few—some of the missionary churches are small—and yet the influence, what is exerted in Rhode Island by our missionaries and the churches and societies with which they are connected, is precious and compensates a thousand fold for the expenditure in sustaining them. This influence is felt on every social, civil, educational, moral and religious interest of our people. It is felt around the globe. It will be felt in eternity."

Rev. THOMAS T. WATERMAN, of Providence, is the Secretary of this Society.

CONNECTICUT MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The receipts of this Auxiliary, for the year ending March 1st, have been $7,654 19. The expenditures within the State, have been $4,554 13; $1,000 have been appropriated in aid of the Rhode Island Home Missionary Society; and $2,500 remitted to the Parent Institution. There have also been received into the treasury of the American Home Missionary Society from auxiliaries, congregations and individuals, $11,660 59; and in payment of legacies, $11,455,—making the total for this cause, from the State, $30,759 78; which exceeds the amount of any previous year by $5,087 74. The whole amount from this State expended through the National Society during the year, in support of Western missions, is $25,605 89.

Forty-five missionaries have been in the service of this Society since our last report. A gradual external improvement is manifest in nearly all the churches to which they have ministered, and some of them have experienced a spiritual reviving and been strengthened by an ingathering of souls. About one third of the churches aided have been formed since the commencement of Home Missionary operations in the State and probably would never have existed but for the expectation of aid, or would not have survived to the present time without it. They are living witnesses for the value of Home Missions, advancing, as many of them are, to the condition of self-support and unquestioned permanency. Some twenty of these congregations have built houses of worship within a few years; five or six others have repaired their old ones, making them more convenient and attractive; to a considerable extent they have provided parsonages—the best kind of permanent funds for feeble societies—and in a degree no less than the more favored churches do they testify their regard for the pastoral relation.

It is sometimes asked, will not the Home Missionary work in the older states ere long be completed, so that all the resources of the churches may be expended in our new settlements. Pertinent to this inquiry, the Secretary of the Society—Rev. HORACE HOOKER—remarks, “I have no expectation that religious institutions will, for many years, be enjoyed in this or any other community, in due extent and vigor, without the intervention of Home Missions. Indeed, their agency will probably be requisite, long after the work of Foreign Missions has been completed. From gradual decay caused by ten thousand changes constantly taking place in society—and now and then by sudden shocks—there will, perhaps, even in millennial days, be members of the christian confederacy demanding the beneficence of their more favored associates. When there is no more room for the exercise of beneficence in extending the Gospel where Christ has not been preached, this relation of strength and weakness, of abundance and poverty, may be essential to the maintenance of healthy action in the churches. At any rate, employing a portion of their means in strengthening “the things that remain,” is shown by the fruits to be “well doing,”—and we should no more be weary in it, than in making new conquests.”

PHILADELPHIA HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

This Society—which comprises within its limits, the States of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland—has had in commission the past year, fifty eight ministers of the Gospel, viz.: six in New Jersey, forty seven in Pennsylvania, two in Delaware, one in Maryland, and two in the District of Columbia. Eight new missionary fields have been occupied during the year, and six congregations heretofore aided have assumed the support of their own Gospel institutions. Five houses of worship have been finished, five others commenced and two others enlarged. In several of the churches there have been recent manifestations of the special presence of the Spirit: and in others the fixed and solemn attention to the preached word encourages the hope that the day of their redemption draweth nigh.

The receipts of this Society have been $8,424 65. The expenditures within its limits have been $7,889 42; and $125 have been remitted to the National Institution. There have also been received into the treasury of the Parent Society, from congregations, individuals and in payment of legacies—from New Jersey, $1,783 40; from Pennsylvania, $149; from Delaware, $7 77; and from the District of Columbia, $105—in all, $2,045 17; making the whole amount realized to the cause, $10,459 82; and the amount expended through the American Home Missionary Society, $2,045 17.

The Executive Committee in their last report, drawn up by the Secretary, Rev. ROBERT ADAIR, say, "we cannot close without expressing our deep conviction of the importance of Home Missions to the safety of our civil and religious institutions and the real prosperity of the nation. The Church is urged by the unequivocal indications of Providence, to go up at once and possess the land, to exert her energies in cultivating the moral wastes of our vast territory. A crisis seems to be rapidly approaching, which will prostrate all our hopes or realize our most sanguine expectations. The ship under full sail, moves safely before the propitious gale when a judicious pilot guides her course; but if an inexperienced hand is at the helm, her very speed, if she strikes a rock, is the seal of her fate. In like manner, the enterprise and energy that characterize the American people, unless these elements are regulated by religious principles, instead of being a blessing, will accelerate our ruin."

CENTRAL AGENCY, N. Y.

The number of missionaries under appointment has been 43; congregations supplied in whole or in part, 46; ministerial labor performed equal to 41½ years, at an expense of $4,128 22, or an average of one hundred dollars for each complete year, inclusive of incidental expenses. The resources of the Agency for the year, with the balance of $475 84 on hand at its commencement, have been $4,734 54; and there is an amount of $606 32 in the treasury unexpended. From the same field, there has been remitted to the Parent Society the further sum of $2,243 35 making the aggregate for Home Missions derived from that section of the state, $6,505 06—about $300 more than in the year before.

The Central Agency—as its name imports—operates in the midland portions of the state, extending to twenty two of its counties, which comprise one third of its population and nearly half of all its territory. Within these limits there is much missionary ground, much broken country sparsely settled in which society must advance slowly, and be liable, for an indefinite period, to lose its most enterprising citizens by emigration to more attractive portions of the land. The Secretary, Rev. WASHINGTON THACHER, states, that "there are individual churches which almost every year have experienced the blessings of the Spirit and filled up their usual number of members.

which immediately distribute the fruits of these harvests throughout the new territories, till they find themselves again reduced in strength and numbers. This process is repeated in some churches from year to year; and while it continues, who can object to the appropriation of missionary funds to enable these feeble churches to keep up the supply?"

The spiritual aspects of the year, in the bounds of this Agency, according to the Report, "have been marked with larger promise and richer experience than those which have preceded it. There have been greater indications of the favor of God upon the churches and the missionaries, more revivals of religion and, we have reason to believe, more souls converted, as there are more who have united with the churches by a profession of their faith."

WESTERN AGENCY, N. Y.

In the bounds of this, the earliest board organized by the Society as an auxiliary, 61 missionaries have been under commission, the last year. These have preached statedly in 76 different congregations. With scarcely an exception, they have sustained Sabbath schools and Bible classes, and other auxiliary means of moral progress. Eight of these missionaries report seasons of revival. Five congregations cease to be dependent. Six new houses of worship are in progress; one, which had passed out of the hands of the congregation has been recovered; and several others have been improved or repaired.

Four of the missionaries within the bounds of this Agency, are sustained by a portion of the funds furnished by the churches of the Presbytery of Rochester, and labor under the direction of its Missionary Committee.

The income of the Agency for the year was $9,347 47, about half of which was applied to feeble churches within its bounds. From the same field there has been remitted to the Parent Society, directly, the further sum of $2,467 63; making the collections for this object from the twenty most western counties of New York, during the last twelve months, $11,815 10.

But the great contribution of that region to Home Missions is not to be estimated by the amount of money—some $200,000—gathered there in twenty four years. A richer and more enduring gift is found in the bands of well trained men—the religious families—who have gone thence to the new regions beyond. All over the West, these materials are found built, as living stones, into the rising walls of the temple of God. The Secretary of the Agency, Rev. JOHN A. MURRAY, estimates those who have thus gone forth from its churches, as more than there are now remaining in them. This constant migration, thou trying to the feeble congregations, and protracting the period of their dependence on the Society, is doubtless one of the methods by which a wise Providence pushes forward the work of evangelization. These emigrants carry with them a taste for religious institutions, and to a considerable extent, the habit of supporting them. Such are the first to feel the want of a preached Gospel, and to make judicious efforts to obtain it. But for the leaven thus infused into the heterogeneous materials collected on the frontier, the process of reducing them to regularly organized christian congregations would be incalculably more difficult and protracted than it is.

To appreciate fully the causes of this migration, it should be borne in mind, that while the pecuniary inducements to emigration are as great as ever, and the social advantages are continually augmented, the obstacles are much reduced. In 1837, the fare from Albany to Chicago was $74 ; last year it was but $17. Twenty years ago, departing for the West was going into exile, with but tardy and uncertain means of intercourse, even by mail. Now, the electric telegraph so brings the extremes of the land within speaking distance of each other, as to beget in every part the feeling of unity with all the rest. Emigration, therefore, no longer costs the sacrifice, and involves the sundering of ties, that it once did. Hereafter, it will not be regarded as the peculiar event of any given year, but as a permanent feature in the history of our most exposed missionary churches, that when their growth has reached a certain point, they will be liable, by this cause, to be thrown back again upon the sympathy and aid of this Society. Nor should we grudge the assistance which is thus made needful, any more than the planter of an orchard regrets, that the trees which he has reared and grafted in his nursery, are removed to the fields where they are to bring forth fruit. The diminishing of these churches in the older states, is the riches of those who dwell in the remoter borders of the land.

WESTERN RESERVE AGENCY, O.

A gradual but manifest improvement is observed in the results of Home Missions on this field, from year to year. The receipts for twelve months ending March 1st, were $2,696 18 ; and the total income from that region, including direct remittances to the Parent Society, $2,927 12 ; which is an advance of $250 on the same items of the year before. Thirty three missionaries were commissioned on recommendation of the Agency ; and 8 others, in the western counties adjacent, were appointed directly by the Society. An improved estimate of the ministry and of its claim to live of the Gospel which it heralds, is beginning to prevail;

while returning stability gives promise of rest and growth to some churches which had been convulsed and rent by various conspiring excitements. "In prosecuting the Home Missionary enterprise," says the Secretary, Rev. MYRON TRACY, "we are fast raising up efficient helpers in the great work of the world's salvation. The contributions of the churches, which owe a large part of their present strength—and many of them their very existence—to the Home Missionary Society, constitute no inconsiderable portion of the income of all the benevolent institutions of the present day."

But much missionary toil, alms-giving and prayer must yet be expended on the Western Reserve, before the object of the Agency will be fulfilled. The one hundred feeble churches—not one of which is able to raise $300 for a pastor's support; and a large number of townships in which no Presbyterian or Congregational church exists, and a portion of which are destitute of all evangelical preaching—form a body of population and an extent of territory, for whose effectual culture much wise devising and patient continuance in christian effort will be required.

MARIETTA AGENCY, O.

On the recommendation of the Marietta Agency, 16 missionaries have received appointments to labor during the past year, in from 25 to 30 different stations. To 7 of these the Agency has paid from its own treasury $820; and it has collected $568 13. Upwards of $1,040 have also been remitted by individual churches and donors directly to the Parent Treasury. No superintendence has been had of this section, except what has been exerted without charge by the ready zeal of the Secretary.

This field, like the one last mentioned, is so situated as to receive less impulse than would naturally be supposed from the general progress of the country. In both cases, a current of emigration sweeps the border, but does not as yet materially pervade the rural portions. The emigration to Southern Ohio is largely composed of foreigners, whose religious sympathies are not in harmony with the infant churches whose members they often displace. The day is at hand, however, in which the region embraced by this cluster of missionary counties, it is believed, will be cut through by new channels of intercourse between the Atlantic shores and the Mississippi, and when these secluded communities will feel the impulse of the causes which stimulate industry and promote intelligence. But while many of the congregations are small and feeble, from a want of homogeneousness among the people, newness of the farms and distance from profitable markets; honorable testimony is borne by the Agency to their spirit of benevolence and self-denying exertions to sustain Gospel institutions. Though scattered over the hills, small in numbers and poor in resources, they feel the claim of Home Missions when urged upon them; and in two instances the last year, churches doubled their subscriptions in order to reduce the measure of their dependence on the Society. Still the standard of contribution needs to be greatly raised.

The Secretary of the Agency, REV. THOMAS WICKES, thus commends the missionary laborers on that field to the respect of the patrons, by whose bounty and prayers they are sustained. "They are a body of truly noble, self-denying men, whom nothing but a high sense of duty and love to Christ could sustain amid their hardships and discouragements."

CINCINNATI AGENCY, O.

The missionaries sustained by the resources of this Agency, the last year, number 44. The receipts were $3,170 78, falling some $70 short of the payments. From the report of the Secretary we learn, that there was reason to expect a considerable increase both of funds and of missionary work, when the severe visitation of the cholera, with which the principal towns and the vicinity of the rivers were afflicted, broke up the ordinary arrangements for collections. Similar interruption of ministerial labor occurred in some cases; and one missionary was called away from his work, though not by the prevailing disease. "These brethren," says the report of the Secretary, REV. HENRY LITTLE, "have all toiled on with encouraging success, and several of them have been blessed with interesting revivals." These have been on some portions of the field the characteristic of the year. "The steady advancement of those churches and congregations, and their success in all that improves a community, add another to the thousand proofs, that we need only to extend these same evangelical means, and this 'wilderness shall be as Eden,' this whole 'desert as the garden of the Lord.'"

In illustration of the recovering power of the remedies associated with the Gospel ministry, it is stated, that one church in the southeast of Indiana, has been twice, in its past history, on the very eve of dissolution; and though it enjoys but part of the labors of a good missionary, yet fifty-nine persons have been added to it in three years. "In the additions to these feeble churches, much is found to encourage Christians at the East to be faithful at home, as well as liberal in sending missionaries abroad. In the examination of persons for reception to the churches of the West, they are often found to be the children of the covenant, trained by pious mothers and in the Sabbath schools and sanctuaries of old Connecticut or Massachusetts; but who have been hunted up in their wanderings, and converted under the labors of Home Missionaries in the West."

Innumerable proofs cluster around the work, attesting the blessings that have flowed from what has been done, and exciting the most painful regrets that no more was attempted. "In 1810," says the report, "the General Assembly appointed Rev. James Dickey to labor three months between the Sciota and the Wabash—the whole breadth of Indiana and half of Ohio. Now, on that part of our field, in both branches of the Presbyterian church, there are 460 churches, and some 30,000 members. What would have been the result, had a still more generous outlay of strength and means been invested by christian zeal? Had souls been felt to be worth as much as western lands, would not twenty rather than one have been appointed to abide on the same field, and proportioned efforts continued to the present time?

MISSOURI.

In Missouri, during the year now reported, 33 missionaries have been in commission. Eight of these have received their appropriation, in whole or in part, from the treasury of the Auxiliary in that state, whose receipts have been $1,193 10.

In accordance with the apprehension expressed in the last Annual Report, the work of missions in this state has been attended by many discouragements. Beyond any other state in the Union, it suffers from the influence of the emigration to California; not only from the actual loss of its own citizens, but from the disturbance of the regular pursuits and repose of the community, by the gathering and equipment of caravans within their borders. The excitement thus kept at a feverish degree, interferes with the interests of ordinary life, and especially with the claims of religion. Almost every town, large or small, furnishes its representation, composed of one or of several companies. They are generally of that class which sustains good institutions at home, many of them members of churches; and consequently their departure abstracts just so much from what the congregations had gained in numerical, moral or pecuniary strength. "In many cases," writes the Secretary of the Auxiliary, Rev. JAMES B. TOWNSEND, "it takes the third or the half of a young and feeble church. In one case, respecting which we were informed a few months since, that they would after this year assume the entire support of their pastor, we are now told that twenty of its members are preparing to leave in a mass this spring."

In addition to this comparatively new retarding cause, the missionary work in Missouri has to struggle with those which have long existed, some of which are the more disastrous as they hinder the accession of that most essential of all means of pr gress, the ministry of the Gospel. "Our state," says the report, "is divided into ninety-six counties, and at least one third of these are without any preaching by our denomination, and but poorly supplied with any evangelical instruction." Some advancement has been made, however, in this respect, during the year. The number of missionaries has been increased by eight. The German population is becoming, apparently, more accessible to that species of instruction which the patrons of this Society deem essential to a sound profession of the Gospel. The labors of several missionaries have been attended with more than ordinary spiritual success. Glasgow, Savannah, and other churches—and particularly Parkville—have been specially visited with revivals of religion. Several congregations have made marked progress. One community, which had long been divided and destitute of ministerial culture, now unites in the whole support of the missionary, after only a single year of aid.

No special agency for this cause has been employed the last year in Missouri, beyond that which is performed, without charge, by the Secretary, and by Rev. A. BULLARD, D. D., of St. Louis.

MICHIGAN.

The operations of the Society in this state—and the same is true of others hereafter mentioned—are carried on through an agent; and the several ecclesiastical bodies co-operating with the Institution, supply, through their respective missionary committees, the places of Boards of Agency.

The missionaries in Michigan, for the period now reported, number 74. The receipts from the field have been $1,904 24.

Our annual returns give, on the whole, a favorable view of the results of the year. A closer and more cordial co-operation is manifest between the denominations acting with this Society. A growing spirit of benevolence is exhibited, and comprehends in its regards not only Home but also Foreign Missions, the cause of the Bible, and other forms of charity. The friends of Sabbath schools would be delighted to visit some of the schools in this state whose condition and regulations are perhaps equal to any in older communities. Several of these are nurseries of a missionary spirit; where specific efforts are made to cherish and diffuse the knowledge and zeal appropriate to such a work, and liberal contributions are maintained weekly. Some of these schools have grown up where, sixteen years ago, the wild beast prowled and the red man had his hunting ground. To those who, in solitude and discouragement, then toiled in their missionary journeys through the paths of the wilderness, the change is such that they seem to themselves to be as those that dream.

But the feature of the year, most worthy of specific and grateful record, is the effusion of the Holy Spirit. The Agent, Rev. CALVIN CLARK, reports as follows: "God is now doing wonders for the churches in this state. Some of them had for a long time languished; death and removals had diminished their numbers and disheartened those who remained. But dews of righteousness have distilled; the languishing graces of the people of God have been revived; the Pentecost cry has been heard; the sinner, awakened from his death sleep, has trembled in view of his guilt and danger; and many have been brought into the kingdom of our blessed Lord. In some places, many heads of families have shared in the rich blessings of salvation; new altars of prayer have been erected, on which the incense of broken hearts ascends. I have never seen more marked manifestations of the presence and power of the Spirit." "Could the friends of Home Missions," he continues, "see what my eyes have seen since the autumn of 1835, they would not sit down in despondency. When I came to the state, in all its western half there were only two pastors and only eight or ten other laborers, and perhaps a dozen churches. Now, the great Head of the Church has multiplied the laborers ten fold, and the churches in about the same proportion. Glorious victories have been achieved; many enemies vanquished; much land possessed, and repeated and precious have been the harvests gathered from this field of the Lord."

ILLINOIS.

In the last twelve months, Illinois has enjoyed the labors of 114 missionaries under commission from this Society—the largest number ever under appointment in that state, in a single year. The receipts of the Society from the same field were $3,083 91.

As stated in former reports, twenty-three of the Northern counties are under the missionary care of Rev. ARATUS KENT. The central portion is assigned to the supervision of Rev. WILLIAM KIRBY. The Southern part of the state is for the most part under the superintendence of the Committee of Missions, connected with the Presbytery of Alton.

In speaking of Northern Illinois, the Agent—whose personal knowledge extends over the entire period of its christian history—is led to notice the rapidity of improvement, both physical and social. Ordinary roads, rail-roads and plank roads, are opened or projected; school houses are multiplying; edifices of brick and stone are fast succeeding to the rude shanties of the pioneers. Among the signs of moral progress are such facts as these. "Eleven new laborers have been introduced during the year; five churches have been organized; nine houses of worship have been built or are in progress; three academies have gone into successful operation, numbering, the first year of their existence, more than 200 pupils in the more advanced stages of education."

Each of these occupies a site of surpassing beauty, on which, seventeen years ago, the tawny Indian fixed his filthy lodge, and by the side of a stream where he sought his food and trapped his furs. These are the legitimate results of an enlightened christian ministry, such as your Society aims to introduce and sustain; and indeed, almost every church in Northern Illinois shows the foot-prints of the Home Missionary in its early history."

"On this field, there are now fifty missionaries of your Society; and among them there are some excellent men, whose devotion to their work sustains them in the performance of great labor, and under the pressure of heavy trials. I know them, for I have shared in their straitened accommodations, and have seen their self-sacrificing spirit, and the courage they evince in urging forward moral reforms in advance of a timid public sentiment. I have admired, too, the fortitude of their companions in sympathizing with them, and even cheering them on, in their work of sacrifice and toil."

The churches in Central Illinois suffered, in common with the rest of the community around them, the invasion of the cholera; though, thanks to the guardianship of the King of Zion, their strength has not been materially affected by this cause. Four of the churches have relinquished their dependence on missionary aid, resolved, though at the cost of a severe struggle, to rely on none but God in sustaining his worship and ordinances. In this effort, one congregation has been already blessed. The Holy Spirit has been poured out so abundantly upon them that they will probably find the burden lighter this year without aid, than last year was with it.

This divine impulse is also experienced in a more than ordinary degree in other congregations. The Agent in this part of the state reports—"The past winter has been a favored season with many of our churches. The Spirit's work has been extensive and powerful. The number of congregations that have rejoiced in his presence, is such as to furnish great encouragement that the communities in this field will not only move forward to independence of foreign aid, but become efficient helpers of others."

In the Southern counties of Illinois, the Presbytery of Alton, by its missionary committee, has continued to co-operate with the Society, in selecting missionaries and arranging the distribution of their labors, and by pecuniary contributions. For the year ending in September last, the payments to the missionaries were $552 20.

Although many churches in this favored state which once received assistance, no longer require it; and ministers are emigrating thither every year in increasing numbers, the demand for intelligent, active heralds of the cross, appears to be undiminished. Not only the lower counties—whose population, have been derived mainly from the Southern states, seem to have few of those natural ties and associations which would draw to them a ministry from the East—but also the central and Northern sections, call more and more loudly for relief. Mr. Kirby writes, “Our necessities for an enlightened Gospel ministry are still urgent. The influx by emigration is, probably, as great now as at any former period of our history. There are ten fields now vacant in the central part of the state, and asking for speedy supplies of the bread of life. Two of them are county seats of considerable promise. But if these were all supplied to-morrow, new fields would open to us and demand more laborers.”

On the Eastern side of Illinois, there is a district extending from Lake Michigan to the Ohio River, two or three counties in breadth and three hundred miles in length, on which the churches associated with this Society, have scarcely made a visible impression.

Mr. Kent, on his field, enumerates positions of importance requiring the labors of seventeen men. These are not congregations ready made to the missionary's hand, but scattered settlements requiring much preparatory work—preaching to small assemblies gathered in log cabins; exploring the ground to find the point where the largest number can be accommodated; and visiting from door to door, to constrain attendance by winning confidence and esteem, till a love for the truth shall be superadded to the other attractions that draw them to the sanctuary.

WISCONSIN.

Sixty three missionaries have been under appointment in this state since the last Annual Report.

In November, 1848, an extensive and valuable lumber district, lying between the Wisconsin, Wolf and Fox Rivers, was purchased from the aborigines by the United States, and is to be opened for occupancy by the whites in the coming autumn. But already, multitudes of pioneers are penetrating this wilderness and possessing its select localities. The presence of an enterprising class is further stimulated by the improvements, undertaken by the General Government to perfect the navigation of the Fox and Wisconsin, by which a continuous channel of commerce will be secured between the Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico. From such causes, multitudes from other states and emigrants from foreign countries have come in, and even large villages have sprung up, on lands yet unsurveyed. Nothing can more vividly illustrate the benefit of early missionary efforts, than the contrast between the settlements which are now starting without the Gospel, and those into which it was introduced at their commencement. The heaviest portion of the recent emigration is made up of people of a foreign tongue; and among them, we are grieved to hear, are large importations of infidelity, profaneness, intemperance, and other dissolute indulgences. Throughout the districts where these take up their abode, a great battle is yet to be fought with the Jesuits, and the open and secret propagators of infidelity. In the region adjacent to Lake Michigan, there is a lamentable destitution of ministerial labor, and consequent indifference to religious privileges, desecration of the Sabbath, contention and litigation. How different from this is the picture of those sections where the ministry and the church, with their attendant agencies, were introduced by this Society at the beginning, and have since been sustained! "An influence goes out from your missionary churches," says a correspondent, "which is in the highest degree salutary upon the surrounding community. Order, decorum, good society, the observance of the Sabbath, temperance, correct sentiments on moral subjects, are some of the incidental results of Home Missions, which impress every beholder." Another writes, concerning the western portion of the state, "To the American Home Missionary Society belongs the honor of doing all that has been done by Presbyterians or Congregationalists in this region. Every one of our churches has been organized by its missionaries and fostered by its care. Every church which has had a minister the last year has been prosperous; every such church has had additions by profession, and several have admitted a very large number. They are increasing in all that constitutes permanent churches on the right foundation. Could the Society see what has been accomplished, they would find abundant cause to thank God and press onward. No other agency has accomplished so much for the best interests of this region as that Society."

Notwithstanding the drain by emigration to California, the population of this state is augmenting at a rapid rate. Probably not less than 250,000 have settled there within the last ten years. The ministerial supply is wholly inadequate to the wants of such a population, diffused over such a space. The committee for the mining district inquire, "Who will come and help us lay the foundations? If they will cast in their lot with us, and their experience is like ours, they will bless God for allowing them to enter upon this self-denying work. Where are the men? We need them now." From the eastern side of the state a correspondent writes, "Our prospects are gloomy, unless we can procure additional laborers of the right kind." Eight districts are then specified, each requiring the services of a missionary; and the appeal closes with an emphatic statement that this help is "needed now." And it is scarcely possible to estimate the demand for the central and northern counties; for the borders of the Lake; for the settlements along the new line of commerce; for the interior, from the Portage at Fort Winnebago to the Mills in the Pinery with its 20,000 inhabitants; and down the Neenah and its tributaries, all bordered with farms, and abounding in sites for any desirable amount of machinery.

IOWA.

Thirty-seven missionaries have been sustained in Iowa during more or less of the year now reported. The whole number of Presbyterian and Congregational clergymen in the state, devoted to the ministry, is 41. Two others are laboring as agents, two are teaching, and three others are without specific charge. Eight of the whole number—four of them missionaries—are pastors. One has been installed during the year, and four have received calls to enter the pastoral relation.

The year has been marked by general prosperity in the missionary churches. The congregations have improved in size and regularity. The various machinery of well ordered churches—prayer meetings, Sabbath schools, collections for benevolent objects—are becoming common. At least one third of the churches aided have increased their pledges in support of the Gospel; one has paid a debt of $600; and six are engaged in building houses of worship. Twenty two of the fifty four congregations which have been organized, meet in sanctuaries which they have built for the service of the Most High. Precious revivals of religion, embracing in their influence the infant college at Davenport, have been enjoyed the last year. In one of these revivals, 30 conversions, in another 25, are reported; and in two cases, nearly all the youth connected with the congregations were subjects of the work. That the ministers of Iowa are training their people to correct views of their obligation to aid the progress of Christ's kingdom, will appear from the sums gathered into the treasury of the Lord, as the first fruits from those newly cultivated fields. Not far from $1,500 has been given by those churches to various religious objects during the year past.

Such details of the missionary history of Iowa are well adapted to assure the friends of Home Missions, that they have not mistaken the instrumentality best suited to evangelize the West. The Agent, Rev. JULIUS A. REED, in communicating his annual report, remarks, "Could the patrons of the American Home Missionary Society look over the state, and see the churches which have been gathered, the meeting houses which have been built, and the precious seasons of revival which have been enjoyed, they would feel well paid for all their sacrifices to this enterprise. Five churches have acquired strength under your fostering care to assume the support of their ministers. These have cost the Society $6,484 84; of which they have already returned to the treasury of the Lord $1,950. In June last they had, together, 496 members, about half of whom have been hopefully converted in the revivals which have been granted to these churches. Each of them has, or will have in a few weeks, a settled pastor; each has built an edifice for divine worship, one a conference room, and another an academy. Of the $19,300 which these structures have cost, only about $1,200 have been received from abroad. Soon, they will return to your treasury all they have received from it, multiplied many fold, and be your efficient co-workers in supplying our whole country with a preached Gospel."

Could anything be more animating than such results for so small an amount of means! What more can the friends of the Redeemer require, at once to awaken their thankfulness for past success, and to inspire new fervor in prosecuting the same blessed work.

But what a field still spreads out there before the eye of christian philanthropy! Iowa, the Mesopotamia of the West, has on its eastern and western borders the two largest rivers in the United States; and the Des Moines, with its slack-water navigation nearly completed, through its centre. These natural channels of intercourse are soon to be intersected by thoroughfares pointing westward across the continent; thus interlacing the arteries of social and commercial life. The 200,000 inhabitants are now spread over fifty counties, already defined, and over undivided tracts sufficient to make seven more. Twenty-three counties, comprising a larger territory than Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, contain all the ministerial force of the Presbyterian and Congregational denominations in the state. In view of such facts, is entirely within bounds to say, that an increase of at least fifteen well qualified missionaries, the coming year, is indispensable to sustain our present position relative to the increasing population and importance of the State.

MINNESOTA.

The territory of Minnesota extends from the parallel of 43° 30' to the northern boundary of the United States, and from Wisconsin on the east, to the Missouri River on the west. Within these limits, is an area of 166,000 square miles, being more than a square of 400 miles, and sufficient to form four large states. The first settlement was made in 1819, by a government expedition under the command of Col. Snelling, and in the following year, the fort bearing his name was erected at the mouth of the St. Peter's, or Minnesota River. The first steamboat is said to have made its appearance at that point in 1822. In 1831, Congress purchased the lands on the St. Croix River, and the principal settlements, until quite recently, have been in the vicinity of that stream. Early in 1849, a territorial government was established, which went into operation in September following. Few communities in their origin, have seemed to be blessed with a magistracy more auspicious. The first message of the Governor takes high ground in favor of good morals generally, and particularly against the traffic in ardent spirits with the Indians. The legislature also recommend a system of education, of which, "morality and religion are to be regarded as the most essential elements,"—a system based on the principle, that "man should be educated for eternity," and that no system of education should be regarded as complete or desirable," which does not view man in the light of his relations to the universe at large, and to an immortal state of existence.

The Society has two missionaries in Minnesota; Rev. E. D. Neill, at St. Paul, the capital, eight miles below the Falls of St. Anthony; and Rev. J. C. Whitney, at Stillwater, at Lake St. Croix. Churches have been regularly organized at the places above named; and at the former, a lecture room has been erected for the use of the congregation.

Other missionaries are under appointment, who are expected to occupy important posts in this territory during the coming summer.

The elements of prosperity with which this country is endowed, are of such a nature as to secure its rapid settlement, and the elevation of its people in wealth and virtue. Its northern climate will secure them from listlessness and disease, which so often attend a milder sky. Its treasures of lumber, the deposits of iron and copper, and the fisheries in Lake Superior, with the improvement of the soil and of the unsurpassed water-power, all require labor, and point out the inhabitants of this region as destined to be a working people. From the similarity of climate and pursuits, it is probable that a large emigration from the northern and eastern parts of New England will be found setting towards Minnesota, and will help, we trust, to establish there the principles and institutions of their fathers.

OREGON AND CALIFORNIA.

The Society has now two missionaries in Oregon. The arrival of one, Rev. George H. Atkinson, and his settlement at Oregon City, were announced in the last Report. In November last, Rev. Horace Lyman and Mrs. Lyman arrived, and were subsequently stationed at Portland, on the Willamette, 12 miles below Oregon City.

The correspondence of these brethren holds out the finest prospects for their adopted country, when it shall recover from the and men families, to try their fortune was greatly deranged, lay helpers meetings were nearly broken up, and country sought the towns, from fear of the first adventurers stimulated at first restrained them. It is believed that the advantages of Oregon as a residence and agriculture, must soon secure to it a large population, and a prominent position in the West. Many of its people are returning from their own rich valleys and wooded hills to the quiet which they could not find in Nevada.

The public mind has been held in ignorance in regard to California, that progress is well known, and this Report relates to the operations of the first

Rev. Samuel H. Willey, who was directed to Monterey, commenced his labors in 1849. He was cordially received, and engaged by the American residents, besides supplying the pulpit, Mr. Willey several months sustained a school, which the necessities of the country was deemed change—since these brethren first threw themselves into the whirlpool of Californian society, the lodgment they have made and the promise already afforded of future good, are matters of grateful surprise.

This great movement to the land of gold has been of such a character, that the Committee had no precedents from which they could safely derive rules for the guidance of their missionary operations there. They have, therefore, been obliged to wait for the results of specific inquiry and exploration, before sending out reinforcements. They were the more induced to this delay by the general opinion, that many clergymen would find their way across the mountains, whose presence there might meet—or at least modify—the demand. This result has not been realized to any considerable extent. The correspondence of the Committee has satisfied them, that the inhabitants of California will not be confined to a few principal localities; that they will not be exclusively a gold digging, fluctuating people; that the proportion of permanent settlers must rapidly increase, and the usual intellectual and spiritual wants of regular society must be felt, and those who are qualified to meet them will be welcomed and liberally sustained. The Committee also derive from the missionaries the conviction, that—although amid the various elements thus thrown together by one of the most remarkable movements the world ever saw, there must needs be a great development of human depravity—there is yet a large representation of the stability, intelligence and piety of the best portions of the Atlantic states; so that a well ordered community can hardly fail to arise, where by the favor of God, the great seminal principles of virtue and liberty will germinate and grow, to be transplanted abroad over all the coasts and islands of the Pacific.

With the matured persuasion, therefore, that the eastern churches have a great work to do for the world, through California, the Committee are arranging for a steady reinforcement of this mission, as the wants of the country may from time to time require. Two appointments have been made since the present year commenced. Rev. Isaac H. Brayton, from Watertown, N. Y., an alumnus of the New York Union Theological Seminary, sailed for California in the ship Houqua, on the 14th of March. Rev. William W. Brier, an alumnus of Lane Theological Seminary, and for two years past a missionary of this Society in Tippecanoe Co., Indiana, departed on the 2d of May, with Mrs. Brier, in the Crescent City, to go by way of Chagres. Arrangements are in progress for sending out other missionaries during the summer. For obvious reasons, it can hardly be expected, that the same generous support which the earliest missionaries received can be accorded to their successors. To continue these reinforcements will, therefore, draw heavily on the Treasury ; and a liberal scale of contribution must be adopted by the friends of Home Missions.

CONCLUSION.

From the foregoing survey of the field entrusted to their cultivation, the Committee feel warranted in deriving a high degree of encouragement. Taken in all its aspects, the last year has afforded more numerous indications of the divine favor than any which has preceded it. The plans and policy of the Society have met with no providential rebuke ; none of its enterprises has failed ; the blessing of Heaven has rested on its missionaries and their flocks ; the christian public have manifested their confidence by a more generous support than ever before ; and expanding fields of usefulness, that surpass in number and interest all former example, have opened before it. In the progress of our settlements over the continent, the Most High appropriates to the fulfilment of his own ends the utmost energies of the people and the ambition of their rulers. At his bidding, secular enterprise, like a hale and lusty giant, rushes forth into the wilderness, and striking right and left, clears a wide and goodly land, where families may dwell and herds abound ; where villages may rise and traffic display its wares ; and, over and controlling all, the religion of the cross may have a triumphant and glorious course.

In the progress of such a history, the Committee cannot but recognize more than the results of human plans and energy. A God is here ; the awe of his presence is upon them as they put their hands to this Home Missionary work. That his providence and Spirit have led them on thus far, is no more certain to their apprehension, than that the same providence and Spirit bid the Society to attempt and expect greater things than its faith has yet ventured to grasp. The time has fully come for its aims to take a wider compass, and its operations to assume a bolder tone. The tide of great events which, in these latter years, has broken in successive waves upon our shores, has borne on this Institution to a position of incalculable responsibility. We stand not where we once did. Foreign emigration—the enlargement of territory—the rapid formation of states—the birth of nations in a day on the Pacific coast—have placed us in new relations and demand new duties. Formerly, the mission of this Society was strictly domestic ; it followed rather than preceded the camp of Israel. Now its place is in the van. In connexion with other agencies for the same great end, it must advance—it must forecast the measures, by whose timely working the enduring welfare of so many rising and risen states may be made sure. To falter in such circumstances would not only prove us unworthy of the assigned us ; it would be cruelty to souls, and treachery against HIM who died for them.

But we cannot admit the probability of such dereliction. We are persuaded of better things of our fellow Christians, and things that accompany salvation. They have too much intelligence in regard to their stand-point—too much philanthropy—too much love to the Savior—to throw away the advantages of such a day and such a position. Many signs assure us of the daily growth, in the great christian heart of this nation, of a purpose to make the American soil, the American people, and American enterprise and influence, wherever they may go, subject to Christ and the elevation of mankind. Thus regarding his country—not simply as his own, but as consecrated to the grandest and holiest uses in the renovation of the world—the Christian patriot may exclaim, “IF I FORGET THEE, O JERUSALEM, LET MY RIGHT HAND FORGET HER CUNNING ; IF I DO NOT REMEMBER THEE, LET MY TONGUE CLEAVE TO THE ROOF OF MY MOUTH ; IF I PREFER NOT JERUSALEM ABOVE MY CHIEF JOY !”

Relation of Auxiliary Societies, Agencies and Committees of Missions to the American Home Missionary Society; Applications, &c.

State and other large Auxiliaries.

Most of the State Missionary Societies were in existence before the formation of the National Society, and some of them—as the Missionary Societies of Connecticut and Massachusetts—were among the earliest organized efforts in our country for sending the Gospel to the destitute. They have voluntarily connected themselves as Auxiliaries with the American Home Missionary Society, from a conviction that greater unity of plan and efficiency in action would thereby be promoted.

The terms by which such Auxiliaries—acting on the principles of the Parent Society, undertaking the supply of the destitute within their own bounds, and paying over their surplus funds to the Parent Institution—are connected with the Parent Society, are such as to secure the following objects, viz :

First—The Auxiliary is not superseded or overshadowed by the National Institution, but on the contrary, is invigorated and sustained by connection with it.

This is secured by the provision that the Auxiliary is the sole agency for this cause that operates on its field. It controls all appointments in the state to which it belongs. From it alone, so far as its means will allow, the feeble churches receive assistance. Thus, a direct relation and strong attachment is cherished towards it, in the hearts of the ministers and churches.

Again—While the local operations of the Auxiliary are thus encouraged and sustained, its connection with the Parent Society is such as to awaken an interest in the destitute beyond its own limits, and afford facilities for reaching them. It is not only a Society for local purposes, but it is also a branch of the National Society, and as such, has the control of all agencies for the collection of funds within its own field, and can direct the manner in which its surplus resources shall be expended beyond its own limits. Thus, the state and other large Auxiliaries are not merely organizations to help the Parent Society; they are integral parts of it, bound together in one whole by a common interest in, and free access, through the Parent Society, to the great field to be occupied, and governed by the same general principles and rules in carrying on the work.

Agents and Agencies.

Besides preaching to the destitute and taking up contributions for Home Missions, the Agents of the American Home Missionary Society exercise a general superintendence of the operations of the Society within their respective fields. By correspondence and personal visitation, they ascertain the wants of the destitute; assist them to obtain the preaching of the Gospel; and instruct and encourage them to develop their own means for its support. They receive applications for aid, and make such preliminary examination as may be necessary before submitting them for the action of the Executive Committee; and in other ways labor to insure a judicious and economical application of the Society's funds. At present, the Society has in its employ no merely collecting Agents, nor any whose services are not required for other purposes in the regions where they labor. The Secretaries of several of the larger Auxiliaries, are also the Agents for this cause in their respective bounds.

In certain districts, where the duties of an Agent are likely to be peculiarly responsible, there is associated with him a board of counsellors selected from the region of his labors, called an Agency. These Boards of Agency differ from Auxiliary Societies, in that they have no independent existence, but are appoint-by the Executive Committee from year to year, and are governed by rules which the Committee prescribe. Their office is to counsel and direct the Agent in carrying out the principles of the Society, and to give advice in relation to such local matters as may be submitted to them by the Executive Committee. The persons composing a Board of Agency, are selected for their intelligence and interest in this cause, and their influence in promoting it; and are so distributed over the field as to secure a personal acquaintance with its condition. The Agent of the Society is also the Secretary of the Agency with which he is associated.

These boards of counsel might not have been necessary, had the ecclesiastical bodies on the ground been able and disposed to pay sufficient attention to the missionary work, and to act as its directors in their respective bounds. But the ministers composing them are usually scattered over a wide extent of territory, and meet but seldom, and only at seasons when they are much occupied by other business; and accordingly it has been necessary in some cases to organize agencies for this specific work. But in other cases, Synods, Presbyteries and Associations have chosen to act as Auxiliaries to the Society, examining in the condition of the destitute within their bounds, and recommending the appropriate action for their relief. Ecclesiastical bodies thus related to the American Home Missionary Society act through

Committees of Missions.

The American Home Missionary Society has ever regarded the ecclesiastical bodies as the appropriate judges of the standing of their own ministers, and of the wants of the churches in their connection. Accordingly, the commission issued to every missionary requires that his credentials be acceptable to that ministerial body of his denomination, within whose bounds he is appointed to labor. And the various Presbyteries, Associations, &c., are invited to appoint, each, a Committee of Missions from its own members to receive applications from its churches, and suggest to the Society the action proper in each case. Such a Committee constitutes the official source to which reference can be had for information and advice, in all matters pertaining to missions in the connection to which it belongs. This mode of co-operation has been preferred by numerous ecclesiastical bodies, from the first formation of the Society. It guaranties to the churches of each denomination represented in the Society, that their respective claims shall be fairly considered, with all the advantage of having the endorsement of the body to which they belong. The advice of such a Committee, acting in the name and by the direction of the ecclesiastical body to which they belong, is regarded as the highest authority in matters pertaining to the standing of ministers and churches in their connection, and has the same influence with the Society, as that of a Board of Agency appointed by itself.

There is one limitation to this influence, however, which ought to be stated. Should any ecclesiastical body so far swerve from the principles of truth and Gospel order, as not to retain the fellowship and confidence of the great body of the Presbyterian and Congregational churches in our land, that fact would cause its recommendations not to be respected, as a basis of action, by the Executive Committee.

As cases may occur in which the feeble churches may not be aware of the existence of any Board of Agency, or Committee of Missions, through whom to apply for aid, a general provision is made, that applications may be vouched by any two ministers of known and approved standing, who can certify to the facts of the case. If the information thus given is not sufficient, other facts are sought by the Executive Committee with as little delay as practicable, from the most authentic sources from which they can be obtained.

Such, briefly, are the relations of the American Home Missionary Society to the various organs, through which the community seeks to act out its missionary feeling. It will be seen that this plan secures the united action, in the missionary work, of those whose views of doctrine and church order admit of co-operation, and whose interests in the great field are essentially the same. This combination insures a homogeneous policy as to the manner and amount of appropriations, and the qualifications of missionaries; it has discouraged sectional feelings, and diffused throughout each part an interest in all the rest; and thus has formed ties between the West and East, along which has passed, from the latter to the former, a silent and invisible current of moral influences, more valuable, if possible, than all pecuniary grants. At the same time, the connection of the Parent Society with the various Associations that act with it, is such as to secure to them entire freedom in the missionary work, in their respective spheres, and an influence beyond them, in cultivating the waste places of our common country.

Applications for Aid.

Feeble congregations, applying for aid in supporting the Gospel, are requested to embody in their applications the following particulars, viz:

The name of the church or congregation; the number of communicants, and the average number of attendants on public worship; the denomination and size, of congregations immediately contiguous, with the distance to their places of worship; the total amount of salary which the applicants propose to make up; the largest portion of that salary which they can raise for the given time, and the least amount that will suffice from the Society; whether the minister for whom a commission is desired, is the pastor of the church, or if not, whether any arrangements are made or contemplated in the course of the year, with reference to his installment. These statements should be signed by the trustees and elders or deacons, or by a committee of the congregation, and confirmed by the certificate of two or more clergymen of good standing, acquainted with the facts. Also—

The name and post office address of the minister whose services they desire to secure; his credentials; and the certificate of two or more ministers of known standing, as to his general character for piety, zeal and acceptableness as a minister of the Gospel, and his adaptedness to this particular field of labor.

Where the ecclesiastical body with which a church is connected has a "Committee of Missions" to act in their behalf, this Committee are the proper persons to certify the statements of the church, the standing of the minister and his prospects of usefulness in the place where his services are desired; and the application should, in all cases, be sent to them for their endorsement and recommendation.

As a general rule, the appropriations of the American Home Missionary Society are for twelve months from the date of the applications; at the end of which, if further aid be needed, a new application must be made, containing all the particulars above stated, and endorsed and recommended in like manner. And each congregation applying for renewed aid, should furnish in addition to other testimonials, the certificate of the missionary, that they have fulfilled their previous pledges for his support.

It is desirable that applications should be addressed to the care of the Agent, Agency or Auxiliary Society of the American Home Missionary Society, for the region where the applicants reside; but in case of doubt as to the name or residence of such Agent, or the existence of such Agency or Auxiliary, applications may be sent directly to the office of the Parent Society, addressed to one of the Secretaries.

Addresses at the Twenty Fourth Anniversary.

Address of Rev. John W. Chickering, of Portland, Maine.

On moving the Resolution for the acceptance of the Report :

What I say shall be not of the great West but of the great East—greater than is generally supposed; so great and so rapidly growing in population, if not by another annexation, in territory, that we have hard work to take care of our own Home Missions, and little power to help the general cause. Yet it is to be hoped we shall do enough for the West to enlist our prayers.

The single State of Maine is about as large as all New England beside, with a vast seacoast of 300 miles, or with its indentations, 2,000—inexhaustible materials of various kinds, including building materials enough to rebuild solidly all the cities in the world—half a million of people, three quarters of whom live in one quarter of the territory, leaving over the remainder a scattered population requiring extensive plans and efforts. Yet we love the West; we would help the West; we have not robbed the West, as may have been thought, in taking Professor Stowe thence; but have done it to save his life, and to enable him to do much in his unprecedented and most interesting field of college pastoral labor, both for the East and for the West. But our apologies must be offered, and we trust will be accepted, for giving little at present directly to your treasury.

But all this, said Mr. C., is somewhat local and almost personal. I turn gladly to a wider theme, HOME MISSIONS! It is a glorious phrase. Each word, how expressive! What is a mission but a sending?—and whence had the name and the thing their origin? "The Father sent his Son to be the Savior of the world." Another mission the angels execute. "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister to them that shall be heirs of salvation?" And then our mission; "As the Father sent me, even so send I you?" And for what? "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Yes, to every creature.

But the apostles began at Jerusalem. HOME, what tender thoughts the word awakens! HOME MISSIONS, how touching their very name! Our country is our home—wide, ever expanding, heterogeneous—perplexing and almost endangering our home feeling. What was California or New Mexico to us? Welcomed not with "alacrity," but with regret for the means and fear for the result. Yet we have soon learned to embrace it in our conceptions of our country, and to love it, perhaps, all the more readily for its golden treasures which had attracted—we will not say with a speaker at a previous meeting—the siftings of the North and South and West, unless he knew where the sieve was supposed to be emptied of much of its contained chaff.

But this whole land, from sea to sea, and from the river almost to the ends of the earth, is our home, our children's home; the home of other men and their children; of other races and their offspring. A glorious field! Let us till it well, and sow it wisely, and God will cover it with a wonderful harvest which the angels shall reap.

Shall I be out of order, asked the speaker, since so little opportunity is given at these meetings for practical exhortation and prayer, if I touch upon another branch of Home Missions? Every Christian has a commission still nearer home than his country. The city or village where he dwells; the church and congregation to which he belongs; the dear family he loves; these are his home fields. The last, and most of all, not so much a branch as a root of all right effort; not so much an auxiliary as the parent society—the parental Home Missionary Society—the society of sweet home.

Oh, then, said Mr. C., let us teach these things diligently to our children; both these Gospel principles and these momentous facts. Let us tell them that Jesus died for them, and that he died for a wicked and perishing world, which they may help to save. Then they may rise up and call us blessed; rise up, Oh how high! Even to the heights of Zion. And other men's children too,—the successive generations who shall take our places on this continent and on this globe, shall rise up on high and bless us, and the grace which made us useful.

More than all, CHRIST, whom we now essay with faltering lips to bless, shall bless us with the benediction that shall open to us, all unworthy as we are, the gates of Heaven.

Address of Rev. Andrew L. Stone, of Boston, Mass.

In support of the following resolution :

Resolved, That the Gospel of Christ, brought in contact with the mind and heart of our entire population, is the only influence to which we can safely entrust the destiny of this country.

It is a happy thing for a nation to have a history to which she can look back with pride—to which in every hour of her peril she can point her defenders for animation and cheer, from which she can draw ennobling appeals for her sons in times of degeneracy and disaster. Were we called upon again to breast the waves of foreign invasion, what words of power to send along the fainting lines in the battle's changing fortunes would be those heroic names from our early story, "Washington," "Bunker Hill," "Yorktown," "New Orleans?" Who did not feel the might of this influence a few years ago, when Greece made her struggle for independence? It was not only the pressure of her wrongs, but the memory of early Greece, the undying names of old heroes, that nerved her arm. Who did not feel from the same source a quickening of his sympathies when young Rome so lately struck for freedom?

But none can change a history past. Be it famous or infamous, it is unalterable. What is writ, is writ. Our history thus far is a record we cannot touch. There it will remain whether we prove worthy of it or recreant to it. We cannot blot it out. In respect to it we have no responsibility. But when we look forward and speak of our country's destiny, we enter a sphere where our personal responsibility is deeply concerned. We cannot re-write our history—we can make destiny. What our history is we know—the world knows. What our destiny shall be God only knows—the future will write it down.

It will be a destiny, we can say, that will tell controllingly on human progress, that will carry in it more of human weal or wo than any other ever written. We stand strong here in our continental home. Our tread shakes the hemisphere. God has planted us deep. Our topmost thoughts touch the arch. If we fall, the ends of the earth will feel the shock.

We shall have no feeble destiny, whether it be disastrous or happy. Look at the extent of our country. Everything here is of colossal proportions. We have a territory equal in extent to the third continent of the Eastern hemisphere, with an indented seacoast, including our island dependencies of more than 30,000 miles; inland seas broad enough and deep enough to drown entire many a renowned kingdom of the old world; mighty reaches of navigable rivers; a wealth of virgin forests and unwrought mines no arithmetic can compute. From our Atlantic shore you go inland a thousand miles and you stand on the Alleghany; from these summits you descend a thousand miles and you reach the hither bank of the "Father of Waters;" crossing this broad rolling flood you ascend again a thousand miles to the ridges of the Rocky Mountains; and yet another thousand must you traverse ere you stand by the Pacific Sea. What must the destiny of such a country be?

Look again at our advancing population. The old world is emptying itself upon our shores, at the rate of a thousand a day all the year round. Our Eastern seaports are thronged with immigrants. In long, dense files they stretch away over the mountains toward the wilderness and prairies of the West. The wilderness receives them; in its capacious bosom they are lost; still the flood gates stand open; still the living tide pours in, and still there is room enough and to spare. Shall we have a feeble destiny?

Look at the development of individual manhood in this land. Numbers are not strength; the little Island of Great Britain wields a more effective power, and fills more the eye of the world than the Chinese Empire with its uncounted millions. And here on our soil every man acts, in whatever capacity, with his utmost energy—mind and heart, and soul and body are tasked. All the elements of a vigorous manliness are here in fullest volume and muscle.

I say, then, we shall have a destiny of power—a destiny the world must feel.

What ought now this destiny to be?

It ought to be in keeping with our origin. It must be such a destiny, that if it were now written down in the same chapter with that which describes our heroic beginning, the moral sense of all men should say it were a fitting consummation. It must suit that stirring history that drove our Fathers to Holland, thence to these stern and wintry shores for conscience sake and Christ.

It must lead in the world's disenfranchisement, by the spirit of all our institutions, by our happy solution of the great problem of self-government, by the picture we shall hold up to the nations of a free, enlightened, happy people, enjoying in peace every sacred right of man.

It must take hold of the Gospel's triumph. If ever a nation had it in charge to give the news of salvation to all lands, that nation is ours. If this principle be of eternal force, "freely ye have received, freely give," we must show our gratitude to God for our own priceless religious blessings, by being his almoners of the same treasure to all the destitute.

To what shall we trust to mould and shape this destiny? Shall we trust to the National Constitution? It is a noble, a sacred instrument—the production of happier days than these. Whatever may be said of it, it could not now be reproduced, if it were to be destroyed. We have heard talk of repudiating this highest organic law of the land. But we will not echo such a sentiment. Blasted be my lips before they utter one word of treason against this fundamental law, and wither my right arm, before it raise a traitor's sword against this maternal bosom. We will not speed the cry of "disunion" from whichever pole of the strife it come to our ears. We shall not despair of the Union and give over the Union, if the present struggle for freedom go against us. There is no heroism in deserting the ship just as it enters the foam of the breakers. In the Union and for the Union we will labor and pray for our common country. But who shall interpret for us this same National Constitution? Who shall tell us how far its provisions must carry our loyalty? Statesmen differ. Patriotism is arrayed against patriotism. It is under the provisions of this Constitution that these very discussions are now taking place which go rocking and heaving beneath all our deep foundations. We must have some other safeguard.

Shall we trust to political sagacity and integrity. We have statesmen, intelligent, far seeing, and eloquent as any that shape the destinies of any land. But what is this political sagacity doing? It is seeking its own self-advancement—it is truckling to mercenary fears—it is grinding like poor blind Sampson, in the prison of party. Let any great crisis come when we have a right to expect this political sagacity will speak out its earnest advocacy of freedom, humanity and right; and it is silent as the grave, or false to every sacred sentiment of justice and mercy. No, we will not trust the nation's destiny here.

Shall we trust to general intelligence. There is no country on earth where this is so widely diffused. We are on all our levels a reading people. But light is not enough. An enlightened nation may be an infidel nation. An enlightened nation may discard the Bible and the religion of Jesus. An enlightened nation may bring on itself all the horrors of a "reign of terror." With nations as of individuals, it is too often found "the tree of knowledge is not that of life." Science, however laurelled and renowned—accompanied with whatever social culture and refinement—walking on whatever level of place, may be found in the laboratories of its art hewing its way mercilessly through the bosom of its benefactor and friend.

No, we can trust to nothing but the Gospel of Christ. We need its resident and abiding influence in every part of our land, as furnishing the highest sanctity to civil law, to uplift from the dust the trampled Sabbath—to keep before the consciences of men an unflinching standard of right—to enter and penetrate all our institutions, domestic, civil and social—and to renew the individual heart. We want this Gospel not as a transient visitor—like a flying tract or a trip of a colporteur. We cannot indeed spare one of these tributary influences; but we want something more—the Gospel, lodged behind the altar—entrenched within sanctuary walls—lifting its spires on every hill—swelling its Sabbath songs in every grove, till the wilderness and the solitary place are glad, and the desert blossoms as the rose.

Address of Rev. Samuel Washburn, of New York,

In support of the following Resolution:

Resolved, That in view of the enlargement of our national domain, and the increased emigration from abroad, the work of evangelizing our country becomes, in effect, a mission to all mankind.

Mr. President—In whatever aspect we regard the thorough evangelization of our country, it is scarcely possible to exaggerate its importance. As we contemplate the successive generations that shall arise and fill the land, each more numerous and potent than the last, and all receiving form, features and character from the present, as the man bears with him to his dying day the training and the lineaments of the child;—when we consider, that what we are doing in the present generation—nay, this very year,—to establish permanently the institutions of the Gospel in the destitute and yet plastic portions of our land; and, also, what we are neglecting to do,—shall be written with such distinctness on each succeeding generation, that the wide world shall read—the enterprise becomes inferior to none that ever filled the brain of man.

But turn now and see that mighty tide of human life, in which mingle the streams of emigration from every nation and tongue of Europe, ever flowing on, by day and by night, in storm and in calm, and ever widening and deepening as it flows—swelling above these Atlantic States, sweeping over the Alleghanies, filling the great Valley, dashing up against the Rocky Mountains, and scattering its spray down to the very Pacific Coast. Had Providence, in his successive overturnings among the nations, given us access to all these minds in their native lands, how wonderful should we have regarded his indications! and our hearts would have ached to answer his demands, while our hands would have been palsied with the might of the work. But when our arms are not long enough nor strong enough to reach and move these masses across the Atlantic, God brings them to our shores, scatters them over our land, mingles them with ourselves in every settlement and city, sets them at our hearths and binds them to our bosoms, thus forcing upon us, at once, the opportunity and the ability of furnishing them with all the rich provisions of his grace;—and, by interlacing their destiny with our own, impelling us to discharge our whole duty toward them, not only by the common motives of Christianity and philanthropy, but by all the urgencies of self-preservation. Here stretches out a field on which Foreign and Home Missions meet and commingle; and the day has already come, when our Home Missionary Society is employing forty missionaries to preach the Word of Life in four foreign languages on our native soil. We have, then, a work full of grandeur and promise,—a work that can be accomplished at the least possible sacrifice of human life and means.

But the influence of this glorious work will not terminate here. As our land shall become the garden of God, it will send forth its fragrance into distant lands. When we shall have accomplished the work of establishing the institutions of the gospel in every settlement of our wide domain, and vice and poverty and wretchedness shall disappear before the progress of God's light and life, we shall have but trimmed the lamp, which, when exalted to the high places of the land, shall cast its light over all the dark corners of the earth. As no man can live unto himself alone, so this nation cannot, if she would, confine her influences within her own limits. Distant as she is from the older nations, yet, on account of her moral institutions and her peculiar relations to the rest of the world,—and all these illuminated with the bright history of her past—she is now exerting an influence equalled by no other,—not on the governments and privileged orders, but on all the middle and inferior classes that are constantly rising in intelligence, importance and power throughout Europe.

Behold the wonderful Providence of God in planting a nation in these then ends of the earth, and throwing over it the protection of distance and obscurity till the experiment of free government had been tried and established, and Christianity allowed time and opportunity for vindicating her own right to freedom and her ability to gain her own conquests,—showing herself most powerful when unaided and most winning when unadorned,—and then, by each successive enterprise of bridging the ocean, the continents draw nearer and nearer together, until even the dwellers in the far East behold the light gleaming up all athwart the western horizon.

For a long time the enemies of civil and religious freedom throughout Europe, have spared neither opportunity nor pains to disparage our Institutions and nullify our social and religious state.

You remember when that consistent and unflinching friend of human freedom John Quincy Adams, in the House of Representatives, presented a petition from eleven obscure individuals for the dissolution of the Union, and what a storm of wrath beat all harmlessly upon his venerable head, for even presenting such a paper.

I happened to be in London when the papers which contained an account of the proceedings arrived, and so ample were the details that nothing but the rankiest prejudice could misunderstand. A few days after, arriving in the city of Paris, I was at once surprised and indignant to find that the papers under the influence of the government had drawn up a formidable statement—or rather misstatement—of the affair, under the startling heading,—“PROBABLE DISSOLUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.” It went on to inform the people that Mr. Adams, former President of the United States, and the first statesman in the Union, had actually introduced into the American Congress a “proposition” for the dissolution of the Union,—that the days of the “Model Republic” were already numbered,—and closed with a warning to all the world to beware, for the future, of all such rash experiments. The statement, though bearing some appearance of truthfulness, sustained no other relations to the truth than alcohol to the wholesome grain from which it was distilled. It was immediately copied into all the government papers throughout the departments of France. It was soon weathered throughout the kingdom of Naples and the States of Rome. You are aware that under these last two governments, nothing can be printed and disseminated but by the agency of government, thus sending forth the lie stamped with the signet of Royalty and Papacy. Many, many were the people scattered through those countries, who, having been accustomed to look to this land as the hope of human liberty, heard the intelligence with saddened hearts, scarcely daring to doubt its truthfulness.

I mention this to show how real and potent is the influence exerted by this nation upon the mind of Europe, and how eager are the advocates of despotism to seize or to forge such events as shall be suited to neutralize its force. If the influence of our country were not moving the hearts of the nations, would rank and pride and power stoop to arts like these! But that influence is becoming each year more potent and pervading. We see it in the European events of the last three years, when old governments were wrecked in a day, and monarchs stood appalled before an uprisen people, and the whole continent was heaving and foaming like the ocean maddened by a tempest. The mighty monarch under whose reign the dissolution of our Union was announced, is now a pitiable exile;—the tyrant king of Naples has been scared from his palace by the same people whose education he so vigilantly guarded;—and the Pope has fled like a frightened hare from the emancipated voices of his own children, while our institutions are more and more embalmed in the confidence and affections of the people,—our Union still abides,—a territory broader than the three kingdoms has been added to our already wide domain; and the bonds which bind all together are strong enough, we trust, to withstand all distractions from without, and each mad attempt from within.

But, sir, in the vigorous prosecution of the work of evangelizing our land, we are furnishing both encouragement and arguments to the advocates of civil and religious liberty throughout the world. How many straining eyes are fixed upon us!—how many fingers, trembling with hope, pointing to our success! Will you listen to a single voice from beyond the Atlantic,—a voice whose heavenly notes have become familiar to our American Zion—the voice of one qualified and authorized to speak to this question. It is the voice of John Angel James, of Birmingham, England, to a member of your own Executive Committee. He says, “I am deeply in earnest, about this subject. We tell the people in this country that their religious establishment is not necessary either to propagate or to support religion; that the voluntary principle contains an expansive energy,—that the cause of truth is more safe, more powerful, more artless and active, in the hands of Christian principle, than of state policy. We say to them, let religion alone—leave her to herself—encumber her not with royal armor, but permit her to go forth with her own sling, and wallet, and stones, and her own confidence in God. LOOK AT AMERICA! See what she is doing there, unfostered by state patronage—unaided by state power. But, my brother, if large tracts of your land are abandoned to Popery—if millions of your countrymen are left unsupplied by Protestant teachers—if your Christians have not zeal and liberality enough to send to them their fellow citizens, men after God’s own heart, to teach them the right way, our argument is snatched from us, our forts are stormed, our guns are turned after us, and the advocates of establishments will tauntingly echo our appeal, and exclaim, ‘LOOK AT AMERICA; and for want of a Protestant establishment, see how fast she is becoming a Popish land!’

“The object of your zeal must be your own country,—to supply her rapidly increasing population with able, faithful ministers. Your religious policy must be a home policy. Compared with the claims of your own land, the claims of the heathen are but secondary. If you cannot attend to both, you must attend to your own destitute people. You must cultivate the waste places of your homestead. Think what your country is, and especially think what she must be; not only for the magnitude of her territory and the multitude of her people, the vastness of her wealth and the greatness of her power, but for the importance of her example. You are supplying a grand experiment both in sacred and secular government.—I mean, what is the best way to promote religion and human happiness. You are bringing all social institutions to the test of experience. On your land hang, in a great measure, the future interests of the globe!”

This is the testimony of a man of distinguished piety and judgment standing on the watch tower of the world,—one who is personally and earnestly engaged in the conflicts for religious freedom, and whose love for his own country, exonerates him from every suspicion of partiality to ours,—sending his voice across the ocean to remind us of our high responsibilities, and to urge us on with quickened devotion and unflinching energy in the noble work.

But we are sustaining some relations to the older nations that are tenderer,—and, in some respects, more effective for good,—than any of these. Turn again to the sea and behold that mighty tide of life, swollen by contributions from every nation and tongue of Europe, and ever setting in upon these shores. Those mighty hosts! do they leave no ties, no affections, no kind remembrances behind them? Are there no vacant places around the firesides of their native land,—and no earnest eyes and kindly wishing hearts to follow them to their future home? Oh! they were not exiles,—they were not isolated “foreigners” in the land from which they came. Many are the hearts they have left behind that will warm towards the land that shall furnish a home of peace and plenty for the exiles, and many—many the sympathetic cords stretching across the ocean, along which shall flash sentiments of dear regard for the institutions that protect without oppressing them.

See those forty or fifty thousand missive that are borne every week across the Atlantic, and which fall like snowflakes upon every portion of Europe. Do they bear no kind and softening influences with them? Will the emigrant, as he sits down with his pen to commune with the friends that are far away, forget to speak of his new home, because his heart is filled with memories of the old? As soon will the wedded daughter forget to speak of the fireside of her husband and the babes of their love when she writes, with a swelling heart and moistened eye, to her silver-haired father and mother. Will there be no heart to speak exultingly of the land where plenty follows toil,—where there is no despotism save that of gold,—no Pope to shut the light of God from the mind, and no strong establishment to bind the conscience and compel obedience to its petrified forms? Oh! those winged messengers will be just as warm when they enter the cottage in the gorge of the Alps, on the banks of the Danube or the sunny plains of Italy, as when they were indited beyond the Alleghanies or the Rocky Mountains, within the circuit of one of your own missionaries. We have a mission to the emigrant, and through the emigrant to the old world, which we have scarcely begun to fulfil.

But the influence of this cause stops not here. God, in his providence, is bending the potency of gold to aid in the good work. Just as events were transpiring in Europe to swell the tide of emigration, the cry of “Gold” is heard.—The “philosopher’s stone” is found! The land that had been since creation well nigh worthless,—of no account to the seller and little to the buyer, except as it afforded a harbour to his distant fleet,—comes under the flag of freedom, and its grey rocks and arid sands are instantly transmuted into gold. That potent voice that meets an answer in every bosom goes forth on the wings of the wind, and is heard in every nation of Europe;—it rattles down the hills and valleys of Central and South America, starting their stupid tribes into signs of life and energy,—it booms across the wide Pacific, waking the islanders as it goes, and dies not away till it echoes back from the heart of the Celestial Empire. Already Chinese and Malays mingle with the representatives of every nation in the streets of San Francisco and Monterey. The channels of commerce are changing. Already our beautiful and fleet Indiaman, on their way to East, double the “Horn” freighted with merchandise for California; and where three years ago scarce a hovel stood, cities are springing to life that shall rival, in commercial importance, New York and London. Soon, lines of steamers will ply between San Francisco, Calcutta and Canton, and the Pacific be whitened with fleets of merchantmen. And with all this we know that light and influence must go forth. The icy walls that have girdled China for 4000 years will melt away, and her myriads of minds feel the impulse of a new life. It is for us to say whether they shall be enlightened by the cold gleams of science and their energies quickened by the selfish activities of commerce merely, or by the light of life, the love of God and the hope of immortality. Oh! it is a noble, a blessed work, to supply those higher wants and to kindle the light of salvation on beacons that shall enlighten the world. If we shrink from these responsibilities, we shall prove ourselves unworthy the trust providence hath reposed in us,—unworthy our noble ancestry and glorious heritage. The Providence of God hath commanded us, and we must possess the land. And for this great work, there is no single human agency so appropriate, so efficient, so indispensable to its accomplishment as the "Home Missionary Society," which sends forth among the unformed masses of human mind, the well furnished man,—the living preacher with a heart to feel and a tongue to proclaim that truth which never returns without effect. Let the bible, the volume and the tract go forth over the land,—let their leaves of life be multiplied a hundred fold. But without a living and intelligent ministry, much of it will be like seed sown by the way-side. The springing blade must be protected and cultivated with kindest care, and the reaper be present to gather the golden harvest. When you have sent a preacher to every settlement and gathered a band of praying brethren around him, you have filled the land with fortresses, provisioned and manned with faithful soldiers, and those shall hold possession against every foe. Already your Society has aided in the erection of between 3 and 4000 of these fortresses. Of many you have laid the foundation stones. Demolish all these and what a ruin would spread over the land! Put out all the watch-lights that gleam from their towers, and how broad and black the cloud that would settle upon its beautiful plains! Let us go forth to the work, our hearts invigorated by a review of the past, our courage emboldened by the voice of God, and slacken not till the whole land shall be won and laid at the feet of Him whose it is, in the prophecies of God and by the purchase of his own blood; and whom shall be the praise of a renovated world.

MISCELLANEOUS SELECTIONS

FROM THE PUBLICATIONS AND CORRESPONDENCE OF THE SOCIETY.

The next Census.

THE results of an approaching census have never been anticipated with more interest than is now felt in reference to the enumerations of 1850. Politicians, friends of education, benevolent societies, and indeed all who are accustomed to take note of the progress and tendencies of our countrymen and their institutions, look to the next census for the confirmation or overthrow of theories, and expect to derive from its facts a reliable basis for future action.

The per cent. of increase of the population, in ten years, has declined in a small degree, with each decade. In the ten years ending with 1820, it was 33.35 per cent.; in 1830, 33.26 per cent.; in 1840, 32.67. In weighing the various sources of loss and of increase for the ten years ending with 1850, it seems fair to estimate the diminution of the rate of increase as no greater than that of the preceding ten years. This ratio would give, as the aggregate of population for 1850, twenty-two millions and a quarter, or more accurately, 22,227,527.

When we come to apply this ratio of increase to the several portions of the country, the bearing of the census becomes manifest.

1. Comparative Increase of the East and the West.

	1840.	1850.	Increase.
Atlantic states,	10,641,882	12,504,731	1,862,841
States west of the east line of O., Ky., Ten., and Al.,	6,376,972	9,722,796	3,345,824

That is, while the population of the eastern states has increased at the rate of 17½ per cent. in ten years; that of the western states has added 49½ per cent. The absolute increase of the western population has been almost double that of the eastern. And if we reckon one-third of the population of Pennsylvania and of Virginia as belonging to the Great Western Valley, the East will have 11,311,470 and the West, 10,916,057.

2. Distribution of Political Power.

"The House of Representatives is at present formed by the election of one representative for every 70,680 persons in each State. The present number of representatives is 226. If the same basis should be retained after the next census, it will make the House consist of nearly 320 members. On the other hand, if the basis of representation after the next census is fixed at or near 100,000 persons, and adding a representative for every fraction of 50,000 persons, the House will comprise about the present number of members. For convenience in making the following estimates, we have supposed 100,000 to be the basis after the next census, with an additional representative for every fraction of 50,000. It will be found by any one who will make the estimate, that the general conclusions will not be materially affected by any uncertainty in the number of persons necessary to choose a representative."

The Atlantic States, (deducting the representation of two-fifths of the slave population,) will send,	-	-	-	-	117

3. Moving Centre of Representative Population.

"A table calculated by Dr. Patterson, of the United States Mint, at Philadelphia, showing the centre of representative population of the United States, at each census, from 1790 to 1840 inclusive, gives the following results:

In 1790, the centre of representative population was in Baltimore co., Md., 46 miles N. and 22 E. from Washington.

In 1800, it was in Carroll co., Md., 52 miles N. and 9 E. from Washington.

In 1810, it was in Adams co., Pa., 64 miles N. and 30 W. from Washington.

In 1820, it was in Morgan co., Va., 47 miles N. and 71 W. from Washington.

In 1830, it was in Hampshire co., Va., 43 miles N. and 108 W. from Washington.

In 1840, it was in Marion co., Va., 36 miles N. and 160 W. from Washington."

[Cin. Chron.]

Thus, it appears that the centre of representative population has moved westward with accelerated velocity; the last ten years, between 50 and 60 miles. It is now in Washington or Monroe co., O.

Another interesting feature of this calculation is seen in the fact, that this moving centre of population has kept very nearly on the same parallel of latitude for fifty years, viz.: about 39° 30'. It now passes out of the slave states, and should it preserve the same direction, it must continue on free soil until it shall cross the Mississippi. Before it shall enter Missouri, that state also will probably have long been a free state.

Deductions.

1. These speculations indicate that the political supremacy of this republic is about to pass forever out of the hands of the inhabitants of the Eastern States. It is true, that questions may not often arise in our national affairs, where the East and the West will be formally arrayed against each other. But it must be a fact of the deepest interest to the whole Union, when more than half of its legislators come to be chosen by a people, who from their circumstances, are necessarily less under the enlightening influence of learning and religion—a people strong in impulses and feeble in principles. Whatever can be done, therefore, to fill the Great Basin of the West with intelligence and sound morality is a matter of national interest. Every inhabitant of the land has reason to desire that the Home Missionary work beyond the Alleghanies should be prosecuted with accelerated speed and growing efficiency. And the deductions we have made from the coming census, abundantly shew that what we do, must be done quickly; because a NATION is there growing up, which, in the fulness of its strength, may ere long scorn to receive at our hands the influences which we would gladly send to bless them. And we must remember, too, that there is a tremendous competition in this work of moulding the West. It is not mere passive and plastic matter that awaits the touch, which we may apply at our leisure; it is a molten mass stiffening into form, and many are the hands busied in fashioning its shape.

Extent of the Union.

The Cincinnati Atlas says, that from the easternmost town in the United States—Eastport, Maine, via the St. Lawrence, Buffalo, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and the South Pass of the Rocky Mountains, to Astoria, in Oregon, the distance by the travelled route is four thousand five hundred and seventeen miles. From the Madawaska in Maine, by the Atlantic route, via New York, Washington, New Orleans and Galveston, to the mouth of the Rio Grande, two thousand nine hundred and twenty-three miles. From New York to the head of Lake Superior, via Detroit and Mackinac, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six miles; thence down the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico is one thousand eight hundred and twenty-four miles.

The Infant Giant.

This is a youthful, almost an infant nation. And yet this infant nation will in a century possess as large a territory, perhaps larger, than Russia, and embrace a population as numerous as that of China. The moral and religious education of this child is entrusted to the American church, and must be accomplished in a century; the most important part of it in half a century from this time. THERE IS NO OTHER TRUST LIKE IT, EVEN AS THERE IS NO OTHER SUCH CHILD TO BE EDUCATED. The time is short; the interest at stake is vast beyond calculation, not only to us, but to mankind. The child we are now educating will be a father to the man who will have his own way in the New World, yes, and in the Old too. Shall he be a tyrant slaveholder or a genius of universal emancipation? Shall he be a demon of war or a disciple of the Prince of Peace? Shall he be a lawless and reckless Infidel; or a blinded and hoodwinked Papist; or a wild and crazy fanatic; or an enlightened and philanthropic Christian? These are the momentous questions that are now deciding, but will soon be decided forever, that are crowded into the compass of a few years, and that should press with all their weight—and Oh what a weight is that—upon the heart and conscience of every American Christian.

A New Era and New Duties.

Our country is expanding and becoming the home of all nations and all religions, of all errors and all vices. Were it holy it would be a paradise; but let it become as unclean as it must be, without extraordinary efforts on the part of Zion's friends, and nothing can save it from the terrors of a pandemonium! Shall those efforts be withheld? Shall the preaching of the everlasting Gospel be restrained? Shall willing and able missionaries be held back from entering the field, or be denied support while occupying it? Can any friend of Christ harden his heart, or deny his prayers, or withhold his contributions, when the land mourneth, and the vine languisheth, and the voice of the laborer crieth out for help? We trust not. All the clouds that gather in our moral horizon, and all the storms that burst from them, cannot harm us, if, obedient to the call of God's word and providence, we send forth the glorious Gospel, on every wave of emigration that flows westward.

And as surely as the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth, and maintains the established principles of his administration, there is no hope for our country apart from the influences that go abroad with the preaching of the cross. Let Him who sitteth between the cherubims shine forth, and accompany with the exceeding greatness of his power, the ministrations of his word and ordinances; and let the church arise and gird herself with strength, and go forth to the conflict, boldly and self-denyingly, with those powers of darkness that are aiming at the ascendant; let her multiply her missionaries, and strengthen their hands, and plant the Gospel in every opening made for it by God's providence—and then we are safe, and the world is safe, and joyous gratulations will ring through all the courts of heaven.

Emigration.

From Ireland—It is a growing expectation in Ireland that we are now about to witness one of the most momentous operations of society—the removal of a people en masse to a distant shore. The half million who have got off with no very great stir in the course of two years, are but an advanced guard to the main body that follows. It must, indeed, be the most furious impulse or the direst necessity, that can urge men at the approach of winter, to cast themselves on the deep, to brave the wide Atlantic, to be thrown on they know not what headland or shoal, in the storms and fogs which beset the wished-for shore, and, at the best, to land in a country still ribbed with ice and buried in snow. Yet we are told of ten emigrant vessels taking refuge the other day in the Cove of Cork, of crowds waiting at other ports for the chance of a passage, and of multitudes ejected from their holdings and now lodging in towns, with no other hope upon earth than once to put their feet on the shore of the New World. We believe it to be even as it is described. The failure of the staple crop, the burden of maintaining the victims of famine, the impossibility of paying rates upon small holdings, and the invincible objection to pay them upon holdings of any size, constitute an expellent force the like of which was never seen. Pauperism, in all its bearings, is depopulating the island. They who are paupers, they who expect to be paupers, and they who loathe the thought of contributing their hard earnings to be squandered upon paupers, are equally out of heart, and resolved to go elsewhere. When the mind is resolved, the means only are wanting.

[London Times.]

From Germany.—European papers, principally from Germany, estimate the number of those, who in the course of the ensuing summer will leave for the United States, at from two hundred to two hundred and fifty thousand; comprising, for the most part, a class of emigrants very different from those whom we have heretofore been accustomed to see arrive in our seaports.

It is not generally known in the United States, that the German Parliament, some months ago, established a Central Emigration Committee, which has its branches in every German State, and that the agents of the Svanian branch have already arrived in this country to report on the soil, climate and capacity of those States of our Union best adapted to a colonization by Germans. Forty thousand florins have been appropriated for this exploring expedition alone.

The Agents will, no doubt, make an early report; and we may soon expect a sturdy and opulent population from Germany, filling up the gap left by our own emigrants to California. The civil wars of Europe have always furnished us with the best portion of our population from abroad. Those of England have been the means of settling our large Atlantic States; those of the Continent of Europe will largely contribute to the wealth and prosperity of the Valley of the Mississippi.

The Overruling Hand of Providence in reference to California.

In his address to a company of miners emigrating to California, Rev. E. N. KIRK, of Boston, thus strikingly illustrates the divine superintendence in reference to the disclosure of the gold on the Pacific coast.

"A British merchant discovered it more than a century ago, and was carrying, for a specimen, a box of gold dust to England by way of China. This box was lost in some affray with Chinamen. Had he carried it to England, the whole condition of the world might have been prematurely changed. Had Great Britain found a gold mine of such value on this continent, we may readily believe the whole current of political events would have been totally changed by it. But God, who works by small instruments as well as by great, did not suffer that box to reach England, and induce her to plant a strong colony on the great western outlet of North America. He reserved it for this age and this people."

Home Missionary Openings.

The fruitless search.—A venerable follower of our common Lord, one who has long been an elder of the church in an older state, rose to claim the attention of the Presbytery for a few moments. He had mounted his horse and ridden some forty miles to see the brethren face to face, that he might urge the claims of three churches already organized in his county. These churches had once bid fair to hold the controlling religious influence of about ten thousand souls that inhabit the county; but the missionary who once broke the bread of life unto them, was called to another field which he felt it his duty to occupy. Nearly four years have passed, and we have each year pleaded for help, but as yet, have pleaded in vain; "and now," said he, "I feel almost like selling my farm, and locating where I can have the privileges of a church and a pastor for my family;" and with a voice trembling with emotion he asked, "Is there no hope for us?" At the same meeting, a stranger arose to ask the attention of the brethren for a few moments. He had ridden two or three days to meet with them; he came from a large county and rapidly increasing. There was no church of our connexion; no religious instruction for his children, and others who felt like himself; he had once enjoyed these sacred privileges, and knew how precious they were; now, must his children grow up without them? Here his heart overflowed, and with the tears streaming down his cheeks, he exclaimed, "Can you render us no help?" Where is the heart that loves the Savior, that will not be pained as such appeals are made to it, and still can offer no relief?

The Pineries of Wisconsin.

This tract is situated in that large district of Wisconsin known as Portage County—its S. E. part having formerly included "the Portage" from the Wisconsin to the Fox Rivers. Ascending the former some forty miles, the traveller comes to "the Dells," a gorge with perpendicular banks, 300 feet high, and only allowing a passage of 40 feet wide for the stream, while the opening at the top is said to be so narrow, that a man may almost leap across it. Fifty or sixty miles higher, commences the pine region, through which run rapid tributaries of the principal river, affording most abundant facilities for lumbering, with the whole valley of the Mississippi and its confluent for a market. These pineries are at present worked in townships 21 to 30 North, in the ranges 5 to 8 East of the meridian which starts from the mouth of the Illinois.

Population, Soil, &c.—It is estimated that there are from 15 to 20 millions of feet of lumber rafted down the Wisconsin every year, which affords employment for fourteen or fifteen hundred men, and that there are besides, as many as 2,500 souls in the Pinery at the places mentioned and others; also, that there have been as many as 15,000 bushels of cranberries gathered this fall in the Pinery.

Prospects.—Intelligent men, well acquainted with the Pinery, informed me, that the lumber trade was settling down into a more regular business, that it was better understood than formerly, and was increasing every year. Furthermore, that in their opinion it would not fail in 50 years. Of the correctness of these statements I have no doubt. Families are constantly emigrating to the Pinery, and many are turning their attention to farming. Common schools are taught; school houses are being erected, and society is assuming a permanent form.

Destitutions in Missouri.

In all Missouri, an area thirteen times as large as the State of Connecticut, there are not sixty ministers of the Gospel connected with either of the two branches of the Presbyterian or with the Congregational churches, who are devoted to the appropriate work of the ministry as pastors or stated supplies. We are perishing for want of laborers, while New England and New-York are suffering from ministerial plethora. The churches east can never be made to feel the need of praying and laboring for an increase of ministers while 20 or 30 gather around an easy rich vacancy, like so many birds of prey around a carcass, even before the fallen pastor has been deposited in the tomb. In my opinion, it would give new vitality and energy to christian character in the older portions of our American Zion, if all the young men who can be brought into the ministry during the next five years would go to the heathen or come west. This would lengthen the minterial life and increase the usefulness of many faithful men now sustaining the responsibilities of the pastoral office, and be the means of saving millions among the heathen and the waste places of our own land. It would add to the character and happiness of those now entering upon the active duties of the holy office.

"We Want the Gospel."

"Some time ago," says a missionary, "we organized a Bible society for the county, and made arrangements for supplying it. We employed the assessor of the county to make this examination. I have by me his report, from which we learn the appalling fact, that out of 807 taxable inhabitants, only 257 have the Bible! and 550 or more than five eighths, have it not.

What can we say in answer to such appeals? Candidates for the sacred office leaving the Seminaries this fall, what will you say? Is there no attraction for you in such fields? For what end did you give yourselves to Jesus Christ? for what end do you daily repeat that consecrating vow? For your own comfort and ease here, and that you may be happy in heaven at last? Is this all? Is there no offering up your soul and body as a whole burnt offering to Christ and to his work, wherever it is to be done, and whatever toll and self-denial it involves? Let it be granted, that in respect to obscurity, hard labor, personal privation and poor support, this field were on a par with the most uninviting foreign missionary station; yet this would not exempt the missionary corps from the duty of entering it. On the other hand, is it not a fact that just in proportion as the spirit of devotion to the Savior becomes intense in the soul, it longs to be a partaker of his sufferings, by engaging in painful labors and in carrying out the great enterprise which he began, in the most revolting and neglected fields? In those best moments, when the approach of the soul to God is nearest, were he to offer his servants the choice of all the spheres of labor, would not each reply, in the spirit of their suffering Savior, "Not where I will, but where thou wilt?"

Then and Now.

"When we contrast our present situation with what it was twelve months since, we are well persuaded that God has given some increase to feeble efforts.

Early in the year now closed, we had no place of meeting at all comfortable or convenient, but were driven from house to house and from shop to shop, as the choice of a number of evils would, for the time being, induce us to act. We have now a large school-house in which to meet regularly for the worship of God.

Then, we considered twenty-five persons a good audience. Now, it is commonly twice that number—sometimes more, and seldom less than forty.

Then, we had no Sabbath school; and could an organization have been effected, still we were in no situation to sustain one. Now, we have a valuable library and a school of more than thirty pupils in operation. It is quite permanently established, and I think may be termed prosperous.

Then, and for a number of months since, we had not even an apology for a temperance society. The whiskey influence was strong and almost all-pervading. It was sustained by nearly all the wealth and respectability of the community here and in the vicinity around; and the vice of intemperance seemed progressing towards an alarming issue. There were some friends of the cause of temperance, but they knew not what to do. It seemed to all, that to make a public effort would only subject the cause to public ridicule and contempt, while the measure would result in no good. It was, therefore, thought advisable to delay, and watch a favorable occasion in which to strike a blow against the evil. That occasion came. It was a drunken street and bar-room fight. The public then saw that something should be done. A temperance society was formed, and we now have to the pledge some fifty names or more; among these names are a number of young men who were inveterate drunkards. We indulge the hope that by wise and vigilant exertions, the order thus brought suddenly out of confusion will be permanent, and the temperance reformation go forward from the time of its recent commencement.

Our weekly prayer meeting is tolerably well sustained, and there seems to be a good degree of vital and growing piety in the church. I think I can say with propriety, that religion is looked upon in a more favorable light than formerly; that the church has acquired a standing of respectability and influence which should encourage the friends

Zion. But, on the other hand, a dark picture might be drawn concerning Sabbath desecration, profanity, and many vices which abound. If God in his providence, and through the agency of the American Home Missionary Society, has begun a good work, we feel that He alone is able to perfect it."

Who can read this, and not feel that the placing of an able and energetic ministry in the place referred to, is already, in effect, the salvation of the community. Much hard work must yet be done; but a fortress has been stormed and carried, and what remains is only a vigorous occupation of the ground that has been won. Alas, how many other places there are, where nothing as yet has been attempted!

The First Sermon Compared with the Last.

Five years of my life in the ministry are now ended. Five years ago, last Sabbath, I preached my first sermon in the West. It was in the court house of this place. I cannot describe my emotions as experienced on that occasion. There were present only a little handful, all strangers to me and almost to each other, for they had come from three different countries of the old world, and from several different states of the Union. How to preach to a Western congregation I knew not. The elder said I must not use notes, and hence I kept my well written sermons in my pocket, and preached and "lined off" the hymns as well as I could. And as Providence would have it, the people were pleased, and by the grace of God, I continue to this day. Would that I could review all the precious Sabbaths of these years; but suffer me to contrast only the last with that cold day. We were called to our own comfortable house of worship by a Massachusetts Sabbath bell. Whole families came. Only four or five individuals who heard me preach my first sermon were present; but in their places there were a good congregation of both young and old. There was something to animate the preacher, and as I alluded to changes which God during these years had wrought, others seemed to feel as I felt, and blessed God, exclaiming, "Thus far, the Lord hath led us on."

At 2 o'clock, my Sabbath school assembled, which has been sustained both summer and winter, for nearly five years. Every one can mark the progress of these children. Amid all my personal and public trials, I have ever regarded this school a bright spot. With these dear youth I and my companion have spent many a happy hour. In the evening, called by the same Sabbath bell, we assembled again for public worship and thus ended the Sabbath.

In review of the past, I think that I can safely say, that we have made a successful beginning. The regular preaching of the Gospel has effected much. Besides acting as a restraint, it has a refining, elevating influence, and the community feel that we are a permanent society; and many who once had no respect for the institutions of religion, are seen in the sanctuary, and give to the support of the Gospel.

As Poor, yet Making many Rich.

Society in these new settlements, like the troubled waters, cannot be quickly quieted, and harmoniously arranged unless they hear the voice of God. Oh! that the Holy Spirit would brood over the chaotic mass, and bring forth harmony, love, holiness.

By laboring night and day, and depriving myself and family of many of the necessary comforts of life, I have succeeded in getting a small house so far along, that my family will be rather comfortably situated this winter; so that I hope my bread taken warm from the oven in the evening will not be frozen to the center in the morning, as it was last winter. Thanks to our heavenly Father, that now after we retire to rest, we can remain quietly, without rising to see that every member, and each limb of every member is perfectly covered, that it might not be frozen before morning. Such has not always been our happy lot. But we are less than the least of God's mercies, and his hand has always been over us for good. O that we may be enabled to glorify him in our bodies and our spirits which are his! We feel that, above all things, we need more of the mind, the spirit of Christ. In all your giving, dear brethren, give us your prayers, that we may be humble, fervent, and do all things for the glory of God—that we may live and labor for this, and for no other purpose.
